EDITH WYNNE MATTHISON.

THE MATINEE GIRL.

One point on which the dear mummer is much in the clouds is what to do with the newspaper folk.

Of one thing he is sure, the newspaper folk are useful, but how to manage them—that is the question.

If he have superfine sensibilities he refuses to cultivate those whom he would choose for friends, lest he be voted self-seeking. If over much commercialism, or an indiscreet ambition, have blunted his perceptions he is liable to be too brutally frank in his invitation to the scribe to "do something for him."

If he occupies the happy middle ground between these states, he admits he doesn't quite know what to do.

The situation isn't so complicated nor the answer as difficult as you imagine, good friends of the boards. Newspaper Row isn't so far removed from the Polite World but that, with rare exceptions, the rules of one govern the other.

Cousin Maud, who has been a newspaper woman for eight years, and who is as successful as she is sick of it, says:

"Tell actors to treat newspaper men and women as they would any one else. If they want stories from you they'll tell you so. If they don't you can't cram one down their throats, so don't try. You'll only have a sense of defeat and their dislike for your pains. It is quite probable that, for the moment, they have forgotten your craft, so in Heaven's name let them forget theirs. Don't talk shop. And don't pose. They are the quickest people in the world to detect the artificial."

Cousin Maud says that a clever actress who should have known better told her that a newspaper woman and two friends came behind the scenes, and chatted about the play.

"What should I have done?" the actress asked. "I hadn't the least idea what to do. I had the impression she wanted something."

Maud's cheeks flamed an angry red, a warning signal that her poor family always heed.

"You might have handed her some money on general principles." The words clicked between Maud's teeth like the rhythmic click of the typewriter, but the obtuse woman, with the beautiful eyes, heeded not.

"I suppose I might," she responded. "I thought of it, but I wasn't sure whether she would like it."

Then there was a dramatic scene in the dressing-room. The newspaper woman turned actress. She flashed red and blue flames at the amazed audience of one. It was the big emotional scene of the evening. If one of the managers had only seen her, my cousin's path to stardom would have been a regular Milky Way.

"How you people who are otherwise enlightened can live in such dark ignorance of the first principles of journalism is a riddle past my guessing!" she stormed. "How should you have treated that girl, indeed! How would you have treated her if she had not been a newspaper woman? Treat her as you would any other decent human who happens to call on you. How else?

"And how did you know she was a newspaper woman? The idiot who was with her said so, of course. They always do that, all idiots. Why couldn't he let her forget her troubles for a minute?"

While Maud stopped to gasp the actress said she was sorry. But my cousin went on blowing a gale.

"I'm tired to death of it. I'm furious at the very thought," she said. "Persons who are apparently well bred talk to me by the hour about my paper, when they ought to know that it is the one thing on earth I want to forget. They question me about its owner when I don't know or care anything about him—that I am indiscreet enough to tell. I've been bored and insulted at dinners by men and women who felt called upon to criticise the policy of the paper. As though I cared anything about it at that moment, except to forget it! Why can't a newspaper woman get away from her desk? I tell you it is rude! It is boorish! It is insufferable!"

I don't understand how they ever made up, but they did. Women are such talented overlookers!

Out of the wreck and storm of Maud's protesting moods I have gathered these adjurations:

Don't talk "newspapers" to newspaper folk unless they introduce the subject, and don't tell them your precious opinion that the Clarion Call is vulgar, and its owner a nincompoop. You may be right, but they are still drawing money from both, and they may feel impelled to differ from you.

Don't try to extract from them office secrets. If they are worth while they won't tell, and if they are not you may be the means of adding to the city's expenses.

Don't call them all "reporters." There are special writers, and copy readers, and "desk men," and rewriters, and "idea men," besides city editors, Sunday editors, editorial writers, managing editors, editors-in-chief, editors who edit editors, and lots of things, in a newspaper office. When a keen-faced man or woman is introduced to you as from the Argus you may be meeting any one of these, so don't guilelessly refer to him as a "reporter." Newspaper spurs are won by much labor and fierce fighting, and the Park Row people are jealous of their honors. The reporter is an ancient and honorable institution, but after he evolves into a special writer or an editor he likes the world to know it. Don't you remember your glad cries when you were graduated from a "super" to a "part?" Remember and reflect and grow wise by analogy.

If you value your life or your standing, don't offer a writer money, before or after he has written about you. This seems superfluous advice for many reasons, but it is sadly needed in the kindergarten instruction the Matinee Girl is trying to give "the profession" concerning the other profession. If you have been charmed and helped by a story some one has written about you, why not write him a grateful little note about it? He will like it. Be sure he receives enough of the other sort. Or if your gratitude cannot be confined by those bounds, send him some trifling souvenir as an expression of your bursting sentiment. But let it be a trifle. If it be more, or if it take the form of a check, you may expect it back by return mail, if the writer have any pride of profession in him.

Don't see in every writer you meet a possible press agent. Don't ask him to be your publicity promoter. If he yearns for that high office he will ask for it.

Don't say at every other word, "Don't put that in the paper." Very probably you couldn't induce him to put it in the paper.

Don't hold a writer too rigidly accountable for what has been published about you. Remember that behind him is a Frowning Presence called the Editor, and between the two a silent intermediary known as the copy reader, who must earn his salary by a few alterations. Very probably these two have done the obnoxious "touching up," and the writer is too sore hearted, or too loyal to tell you so.

So saith Maud.

To the discouraged or the poor spirited I would cite the pluck of Sally MacNeel.

The strugglers are always more interesting than the smugly successful, the heaving, restless ocean than the smilingly secure and monotonous plain. That is the reason that Sally MacNeel fascinated me. You've never heard of her? Probably not, for Sally is not even a beginner, only a starter, and what a hard start it was.

She grew up in the forests and among the copper mines of Minnesota, as brave and strong and keen of eye as a young Indian. She would have been there still, and reasonably content, but some one discovered that she had a superb singing voice. Her father was a poor lawyer, who could help her but little in her plan to cultivate that voice. Some Duluth citizens heard of the rude, promising young singer from the northern forests, and arranged a concert for her. With the few hundred dollars net and soaring hopes she came to New York.

Jacob Greatsinger, now a Brooklyn street railway magnate, then president of a local railroad, had given her a pass with a return coupon.

She has never used the coupon, but, oh! the hard times that intervened between that date, three years ago, and the present!

Here is an instance of them:

Living at the Margaret Louisa Home, and reading "good books" in the forced intervals between seeking engagements, she overheard a school teacher from Kansas City ask her way about New York.

Sally MacNeel, who knew the city as Broadway between Fifteenth and Fortieth streets, flung down her book.

"If you will pay me a quarter an hour and my expenses I'll show you everything in New York," she said.

The school teacher closed the bargain at once. They set forth at nine every morning, returning footsore, but with much accumulated knowledge, at six. In the course of her two weeks as guide Sally MacNeel acquired a modest sum, besides her luncheons and dinners, and the school teacher had a pleasant vacation, even though the thoroughness of her knowledge of New York might be doubted.

They had more than one adventure. They, of course, went to see the Bartholdi Statue. The last boat from the island departed, leaving them somewhere in the vicinity of Liberty's eye, waving frantic but unheeded signals at the departing boat with their umbrellas. It was a dire situation, for it was the last day of the visitor's vacation. She must catch the night train from the West, but how?

It was Sally MacNeel who solved the problem. She stated their woeful case to one of the officers, and the women with a military escort left in triumph for New York on a Government tug.

There are other instances as breezy, but the girl from Minnesota always saved the day.

She joined the chorus of The Messenger Boy, and later on The Billionaire. On the night that news come of the death of her father May Robson came upon Sally MacNeel crying in the wings.

"What is the matter, little girl?"

The sobbing story, with the guide incident and the rest, interested Miss Robson. Shortly thereafter she invited Sally MacNeel to go abroad with her. Since their return the girl from Minnesota has lived in Miss Robson's home.

There is still a good deal of the wild young thing who used to play with Indian boys and girls about her.

"I couldn't stand it," she said, speaking of the dizzy, sky-piercing buildings, the incessant nerve-rending din, the impassive faces and automaton-like movements that are part of the uniqueness of the metropolis, "if it were not for my Sundays. Every day I go to the country, sometimes alone, sometimes with a companion, and I walk at least twelve miles and chew a stick, and the natural feeling and right out-of-door spirit come back to me."

She knows more about metallurgy than any woman in the United States. She has an experimental knowledge of running a railroad locomotive and a theoretical knowledge of managing a railway system. Moreover, she could leap through hoops on the back of the fleetest horse in a circus with ease, if she didn't prefer to be a singing actress.

She is the pretty girl who is playing the wee role of Bianca in The Yankee Consul. She has soaring ambition, and why shouldn't such spirit achieve whatever it chooses?

Here's luck that equals her pluck to Sally MacNeel!

To you who are wrestling with the giant Despondency I pass on the uplifting advice of Mrs. Sarah Cowell Lemoyne.

Mrs. Lemoyne found a bruised little soul in tears, and tried to comfort her for a time in vain.

"I'll get even," said the blighted one, her tears breaking out afresh at the remembrance of some indignity.

"Yes, and I will tell you how," said Mrs. Lemoyne. "The best way to get even is to succeed."

MINERVA CLUB MEETING.

Wilton Lackaye was the guest at the meeting of the Minerva Club, which was held at the Waldorf Monday afternoon, April 11. Art was the subject, and Mr. Lackaye said. "I don't know that I know much about my own art, but I'm sure I don't know anything of any other art, therefore I'll talk shop." His theme was "The Dominance of Women Over the Theatre in America." He said:

"The influence of women over the theatre is greater in America than it is in any other country. This is due to the good nature and strenuousness of the American husband. He doesn't have time to consider pleasure. He must have 'the bicycle eye,' to see to getting the money. The women alone of America have the time to be indolent, and they are splendidly indolent. If a piece is liked by the women, it is sure to be a success. The sweepings of the divorce court and of the prize ring appear upon the stage because the public demands them. When such a one steps up, then an artist steps down to make a place. The public forces this, and then says it is our own fault. I do not believe that it is any one's business how an actress behaves in private life, but when a woman is exploited simply because she has figured in an especially nasty divorce suit, then the women should exert their influence and should not patronize her. I've gone to plays with my wife when I wanted to get up and leave. It's a crying shame that immoral plays draw such good audiences. It is in regard to these plays that the censorship of the parent should come in. The father or mother should buy the tickets and say to the children: 'To-morrow you may go to such and such a play,' instead of handing them $4 and letting them wander down Broadway and finally drop in at the latest farce from the stews of Paris. The theatre can't be restricted entirely to plays that are suitable for a fourteen-year-old girl. The problem play is a great thing, but it should not be seen by all. It is for those who have problems in their own lives."

Papers on art were read by Mrs. Howard McNutt, President of Minerva; Mrs. Neel and Mrs. James H. Pettit. Mrs. William T. Parker and Miss Williams sang, and Miss Blackshire gave a couple of readings. After the programme refreshments were served. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Sidney, of England. Mrs. Sidney, who is a daughter of the late "Jennie June" (Mrs. Croly) gave a few words of greeting. Mrs. Virgil P. Humason, President of the Tuesday Afternoon Club, of Yonkers, was also a guest. Minerva will give a musical and reception on Monday, April 25. This will be the last meeting of the season.

THE LITTLE JADE JOSS.

The Mummers, in The Little Jade Joss, a musical comedy, set fire to Orange, N. J., last Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday nights. These amateurs filled Orange's pretty and comfortable Music Hall with the pick of the Oranges, and held them enchanted until nearly midnight. As THE MIRROR gave the production considerable preliminary space last week, only a little can be afforded to it this.

The production was worthy of Broadway. The scenery, sets, costumes, marches, groupings and chorus were all that could be desired in a metropolitan theatre, and the music, by Henry Stanley Haskins, was really beautiful, many of his numbers being worthy of Victor Herbert, and many superior to the work of better known composers. If the book and songs, acting and singing, had been as fine as the music, the professional stage would soon know the opera. But, of course, one must not expect professional work from even well meaning amateurs. And yet there was one in the cast who was a professional in appearance, acting, dressing and singing. She was delightful to hear and charming to look at. Had Henry W. Savage been in front she would be a professional if she cared to adopt the stage. Imagine a very youthful, fragrant and fascinating Fritzi Scheff, with a voice like a lark's, that soared in the most natural manner over a chorus of sixty every time she let go of it. She seemed utterly unconscious that she was the hit of the opera, and allowed herself to be sung—no, roared!—down by Captain Bangs, in one of the prettiest things heard in a crow's age: "I Want to Be Alice in Wonderland." The programme gave her the name of Florence Rother, and her part was that of Marjorie Mildmay.

Lewis C. Henry as Zoroaster Deering, and Paul Petry as Captain Bangs deserve the severest censure for eating candy all through the last act, and bowing and smirking to friends in the lower part of the house. It killed all illusion. One word, too, to Walter Hawley, the New York stage-manager. He should not line his male chorus across the stage in the front row, while hiding thirty or forty lovely girls in white in the back rows. Audiences are not particularly interested in the male animal when there is a stage full of pretty girls to be seen. Mr. Haskins and Miss Rothwell won the blue ribbon.

ACTORS HELP HOSPITAL FUND.

For the benefit of St. Andrew's Convalescent Hospital, at No. 213 East Seventeenth Street, an entertainment was given in the large ballroom at Sherry's last Tuesday afternoon. Every seat was sold at $2. About $1,200 was realized.

The programme was opened by Burr McIntosh, who made a pleasing address on the needs of the hospital and the consequent organization of the entertainment. Kyrie Bellew then recited "The Seven Ages." He was followed by Lillie Lawlor, of California, who sang Richard Strauss' "Nachtgang" and Schumann's "Frulingsnacht." Mr. Hardy Thé then sang Massenet's "Je T'aime" and "Crepuscule." J. Clarence Harvey told some amusing stories, and was followed by the one-act farce Cinders, played by May Robson, Thomas Jackson, and Dustin Farnum. Miss Lawlor sang effectively two folk songs from the Spanish by Giuseppe Ferrata, translated by Helen Huntington, and Godard's "Chanson de Juliet." Accompanied by the composer, Mrs. E. M. Grant, of Kingston, Canada, Mr. Hardy sang two little ballads, "Where'er Thou Art" and "Penate." Victor Harris was the accompanist for Miss Laylor and for Mr. Hardy Thé in his first selections. The afternoon closed with humorous recitations by Mr. McIntosh.

SONG WRITERS' NIGHT AT THE PRESS CLUB.

There was a dinner in honor of Charles D. Platt, treasurer of the Press Club, last Tuesday night at that club. Fifty of the foremost song writers, including Maud Nugent, were present. Among the authors, many of whom sang and played new compositions for the first time in public, were William Jerome and Jean Schwartz, who wrote "Mr. Dooley," "Bedelia," and the lyrics and music of the latest Casino success, Piff, Paff, Pouf; Edwards and Cobb, authors of "Come Down, Evening Star," and "In Zanzibar;" Vincent J. Bryan and J. B. Mullen, James O'Dea and Bob Adams, John Bratton and Paul West, authors of "The Man from China," "Mose Gumble," Harry H. Williams, Walter Hawley, William H. Penn, Alfred Bryan, George Walter Brown, Charles Horwitz, composer of "Violets;" Nat Osborne and Standish and Silberberg, authors of "My Sweetheart of Sweethearts." Emma Carus, who made the hit of The Medal and the Maid with "In Zanzibar," sang that ballad.

A DEVICE OF MR. DUSS.

J. S. Duss, who with his orchestra will begin a Summer season of concerts at Madison Square Garden on May 22, has devised a novel sounding board which, it is hoped, will greatly better the acoustic properties of the huge auditorium. Last season Mr. Duss found that all delicate effects in the work of the orchestra were lost. An ordinary wooden sounding board would save them, but would be unsightly and would destroy the scenic beauty of the reproduction of Venice. Mr. Duss has therefore decided to build the sounding board of glass. This structure will meet the purposes of an ordinary sounding board and will be so contrived as not to spoil the view.

REELECTIONS

Will H. Gregory, manager of the Engagement Department of the Actors' Society, has entirely recovered from his illness and is again at his post.

Rudolph Aronson, who returned from Morocco last week, heard his new march, entitled "Down the Pike," performed by the Sultan's private band at his palace in Fez. While in Paris Mr. Aronson arranged for the production there of Erminie in French with an American chorus in October.

William J. Romain, of the More Than Queen company, took the role of Lucien Bonaparte in that production on short notice in the absence of William Humphreys, and played it very successfully for twenty-one performances in Cincinnati, Louisville, and Columbus.

It was decided last week by the managers interested in the all-star revival of The Two Orphans to send the company on the road next season. Kyrle Bellew, Charles Warner, E. M. Holland and some of the other performers will retire, but their places will be filled by actors well known. Louis James has already been engaged to succeed Charles Warner as Jacques.

Among the many curios of the late John H. Murray, who for a quarter of a century was famous as a circus proprietor and manager in this and other countries, and which is now the property of his eldest son, George H. Murray, who is the business-manager of John C. Fisher's production of The Silver Slipper, none is probably more valued than the silk programme which the late Queen Victoria held during a special "command" performance of the United States Circus at the Alhambra Palace, Leicester Square, London, Eng., on Friday afternoon, May 14, 1858. This performance was a memorial one. The Prince Consort, the then Prince of Wales, now the King of England, and all the princes and princesses of England's reigning house were present. Accompanying the programme was an acknowledgment by the Queen's private secretary, Sir Francis Knollys, to John H. Murray, Esq.

A Little Tragedy at Tien-Tsin, by Frances Aymar Mathews, had its first presentation Monday afternoon, April 11, at Proctor's Theatre, Newark, N. J. Robert Lorraine was at the head of the company, and the production was made under the management of William A. Brady. The cast comprised Ah Tchang, Robert Lorraine; Cecil Winton, Clifford Constable; Ling Chow, Burt Tucman; Amah, the nurse, Justine Cutting; Mrs. Wing Tee, Ruby Bridges.

Owing to illness of Ida Rockwell, Bella Miller played the part of Jeannette Sugar in Human Hearts in Milwaukee.

Charles A. Bigelow is hard at work on the final rehearsals of The Man from China, which will be first offered for New York approval at the Majestic Theatre May 2. It will be given its initial representation at Ford's Theatre, Baltimore, on April 25. Barney Fagan is the producing stage director of the new piece. Ernest Albert is the scenic artist.

George S. Spencer, leading man in Mr. Crane's company, will continue to appear at the Academy after David Harum finishes its run. He has been engaged to play Captain Tregarthen in Two Little Sailor Boys, which commences at the Academy of Music on May 2. Douglas Fairbanks, at present appearing in The Pit, has signed for a comedy role in Two Little Sailor Boys.

George S. Lockwood, who has been playing Zekiel Pettengill with the Quincy Adams Sawyer company, Central, has closed with that attraction and is at his home in Fair Haven, N. J. Mr. Lockwood and his wife, Allie Walters, will play some time in vaudeville this Summer.

Mrs. Charles Mackay, who has been on a visit to her family in Boston, will accompany her husband when he starts for the Pacific Coast to play fourteen weeks in a stock company, dividing the time between San Francisco and Los Angeles.

George F. De Vere, for fifteen years stage-manager for W. H. Crane, was the recipient of many congratulations last Wednesday, the forty-seventh anniversary of his marriage. Mr. De Vere was Edwin Booth's leading man in England.

The R. H. Mace Amusement Company, with a capital of $100,000, was incorporated in Albany last Wednesday. The directors are R. H. Mace, W. H. Gregory, and M. G. Winstock, all of this city.

Kate Florence Ellis is about to open a dramatic school, on academic lines, in Rochester. The venture will be backed by a company in which Miss Ellis has a controlling interest. Late in the Fall Miss Ellis will star in her own romantic play, Kismet. The scene is laid in Tunis, on the Barbary Coast, in the year 1882, just after the French establishment. The leading male role, Hasig Abdallah Bey, an educated Turk, a graduate of Oxford, England, is an original character new to the stage, and is said to offer remarkable possibilities to a clever actor. The character of Haidee, a Circassian-English girl, illegitimate daughter of an English merchant of Tunis, will be played by Miss Ellis.

Robert B. Mantell in this city next Fall will play six weeks and be seen in The Romance of a Poor Young Man, Othello, Richelieu, Hamlet, besides a new romantic drama.

Ernest Lamson, who will appear in this city as a star next Fall in Young Tobe Hoxie, was a protégé of the late James A. Herne, and played a small part in the first production of Shore Acres at Daly's Theatre.

On May 26 Starr's Girl, a new play by Alice E. Ives, will be produced at the Murray Hill Theatre, with May Edouin and Fred Edwards as the stars. The play was tried in London last season.

Ralph Stuart has secured a new romantic drama, A Son of Bohemia, which will be produced by him this Summer in San Francisco. If the play is a success Mr. Stuart will present it in this city next Fall.

Henry W. Savage has engaged Trixie Friganza to play the role of the widow in the company which he is sending over to produce The Prince of Pilsen at the Shaftesbury Theatre, London. Mattie Nichols, eccentric dancer, has been engaged by Mr. Savage to play the role of Sidonie.

Annie Irish will entertain her fellow-stars of the Two Orphans cast at an after-theatre supper on the stage of the New Amsterdam on the night of April 21. It will be her birthday.

The Shubert Brothers have obtained the English-speaking rights to Tattoo, the German military play, the recent Irving Place Theatre success.

Joseph Shrode, who plays the Cow in The Wizard of Oz, cut his hand on a broken cab window last week, severing a tendon, and a new cow had to be lassoed.

Jacob P. Adler, the Jewish tragedian, is making arrangements for a Spring season under the management of George H. Brennan. Mr. Adler will be supported by an English-speaking company.

There is to be a banquet at Delmonico's on Tuesday, April 26, to celebrate the first anniversary of the National Art Theatre Society. The women members of the society will attend. Persons not members of the society who may desire to be present are invited to address Richard A. Purdy, National Art Theatre Society, 1440 Broadway.

Louis A. Elliott, who has been general agent of the E. J. Carpenter attractions for the past three seasons, has resigned. Mr. Carpenter will in the future look after his attractions.

Elizabeth Tyree will make her appearance as a star at the Savoy Theatre Monday, April 25, in an adaptation of Heureuse, in which Madame Rejane made a success last season. This version will be called Tit for Tat.

Spokesman-Review, Spokane, Wash., Feb. 22, 1904.—In The Chief Justice, Daniel Sully gives the same quiet, earnest portrayal that has characterized his work in the past.

IN OTHER CITIES

SAN FRANCISCO.

Again has Mrs. Fiske delighted us with her fine performances in A Bit of Old Chelsea and Divorcons at the Grand Opera House week of 4-11. There is only one verdict concerning Mrs. Fiske and that is that she is the greatest actress we have on the American stage. We first see her in the powerful dramatic role of Mary of Magdala, then in a wonderful impersonation of Hedda Gabler, next as the young and innocent flower girl in A Bit of Old Chelsea, and followed by the light comedy of Cyprienne in Divorcons. Next week, the last of Mrs. Fiske's engagement, we are to have Ibsen's A Doll's House. The demand for seats has been steadily heavy.

At the California on Sunday night 3 a big audience was entertained by McFadden's Row of Flats. Teddy Simmons, who had the part of the Irishman, and Joseph F. Willard, who was the German, had some very funny scenes together and brought down the house. Jerry Sullivan, the dwarf, one of the Yellow Kids, was screamingly amusing and was a favorite from the moment he came on the stage. His acrobatic specialty was clever. Belle Gold, the soubrette of the co., sings several good songs in a charming manner. Ada Boshell sustains her role of the Irish woman. In a fortnight we are to have Rose Coghlan in The Greatest Thing in the World.

The Tivoli is in its last nights of Mr. Pickwick, which has had a successful run, considering that it ran through Holy Week. The new people in the co. will have a better chance to show their talents in the coming attraction, The Beggar Student, which is to have its first presentation on Monday 11.

No better musical comedy has been offered in San Francisco in a long time than Kismet, which is drawing big houses at Fischer's Theatre. On Thursday night the house was entirely sold out to the S. F. Cycle Board of Trade, and in addition to Kismet many novel features and prize riding were introduced. The next attraction at this house will be an Eastern burlesque, Chow Chow.

At the Columbia Theatre 4-18 Anna Held opened to a full house in her new play, Mam'selle Napoleon. The play has merit and is not entirely a costume show, as the stage pictures are magnificent and the costumes are gorgeous. The songs are tuneful, and there are many of them. In the cast are Arthur Lawrence, Joseph Herbert, Knox Wilson, Frank Rushworth, Little Franz Ebert, the beautiful Billie Norton, and twenty others. The engagement will do a big two weeks' business. George Cohan in Running for Office comes next.

The greatest spectacular production ever offered by the Central is now holding the boards at this theatre, Around the World in Eighty Days is being presented to capacity 4-11. It is some little time since this play was given here. The scenic effects were startling, and marvels in ingenuity. Many specialties were introduced, including the "champagne ballet," originated and directed by Professor Bothwell Brown; and the enchanting "scarf dance." Mayall was not so well suited to the role of Phineas Fogg. Millar Bacon as the servant was very funny, and Schumer and Emery were capital. Ernest Howell is making himself invaluable to this house, and in this play again did some creditable work. Eugenia Thais Lawton was the beautiful widow of the Rajah and was handsome in her Oriental robes, as was Edna Elsmere in the role of the sister. Myrtle Vane had the part of Nancy. Even though this success is crowding the theatre nightly, the management will carry out the custom of changing the bill weekly. Next week, the melodrama, In the Hands of the Enemy.

The Alcazar's offering this week 4-11, after its three weeks' run of Parsifal was the farcical comedy On the Quiet, by Augustus Thomas. The clever stock co. have rarely been cast for roles better than this piece affords. Mr. Durkin had the part of the college chap who before leaving his home for school becomes secretly married to the heroine, which part is taken by Miss Block, whose good work in Parsifal is still in memory. Juliet Crosby again made her appearance, and Fred Butler appeared as the bookmaker. Frances Starr, the popular ingenue, had a good role. Special mention must be given the realistic setting on board the yacht, which made a beautiful picture. Next week, Aristocracy.

The new bill at the Orpheum on Sunday, 3, was an unusually good one and at both performances the house was sold out. Blind Tom, the negro pianist, was the headliner. His playing of several operatic selections was remarkably good. The Four Weisons gave an entirely new act on the flying ropes. Omar and Margina have an Oriental act. La Belle Guerrero had a new pantomime, called La Gitana, and she again was one of the novelties of the bill. Wesson, Walters and Wesson, John H. Cullen, the Five Mowarts, Coakly and McBride, and Mazus and Mazett were the holdovers.

Hawley and Vass, who present an original sketch, entitled After the Wedding, will make their first appearance at the Chutes next week. Agnes Miles, the original Anna Moore girl, and Dutch Walton will also be new. The Schenk Brothers, Clark's Dog Circus, and Mabel Lamson, the popular contralto, have been retained. The animatoscope will show new pictures, and the different concessions will be packed each evening on account of the warm weather.

Norris and Rowe's Circus is in town and on the opening day, Saturday, 2, it was impossible to obtain a seat for either performance if not purchased in advance, and the Mechanics' Pavilion has been crowded ever since. Norris and Rowe are giving a better show than ever before. The acrobats, jugglers, equilibrists, and the juvenile Japanese performers were particularly entertaining. The entire performance was a delight and the audience later took in the side shows and viewed the animals in the menagerie.

The greatest events of the season in the musical world were the concerts of Madame Schuman-Heink at the Alhambra Theatre 3, 7, 9. So large has been the demand for seats that Madame Heink has decided to give another concert on Sunday afternoon, 17.

OSCAR SIDNEY FRANK.

SEATTLE.

All our theatregoers were interested in the appearance of the Baker Theatre co. at the Seattle March 26-2. This co. played an engagement here last season, during which they won great favor by their uniformly clever performances of many popular plays. The opening bill this time was The Christian, which play the Bakers put on during their engagement last season. Our people do not seem to have tired of this play, and the audiences were uniformly large throughout the week. George Allison was again seen as John Storm, and gave a very worthy interpretation of the part. Esther Lyon, who this season succeeds Catherine Countiss in the leads, created a most favorable impression as Glory Quayle. Her work, and that of George Allison as well, was particularly convincing in the third act, the scene of Glory's apartments. William Bernard won next honors by an excellent performance of Horatio Drake. Carlyle Moore, as Lord Robert Ure, and Ethelyn Palmer, as Polly Love, both won favor. Mina Crollius Gleason was fine as Mrs. Callender. Howard Russell was good as Paul. William H. Dills, as the manager, deserves mention, and Charles P. Clary, who has been seen here several times before, excelled any of his previous efforts by his effective work as Father Lamplugh. Others in the cast capably sustained the minor parts, and the staging ably completed the details of a most creditable performance.

Mahara's Minstrels did not do a great deal of business at the Third Avenue 26-2. Though there were several individuals in the co. who excelled in specialties, particularly dancing, the whole performance did not have the merits of consistency possessed by another minstrel show seen at this house not long since, and so suffered some by the comparison.

Ed Redmond and co. had a successful opening week at the Alcazar with Davy Crockett and Prince Romiro. Both plays were given satisfying performances, and the audiences were pleased. Ed Redmond was successful in the leading parts. Alta Phipps, Clyde E. Granger, Theodore H. Bird, Joe Coffman, and Little Garna Virden are among the principal members of the co.

Manager J. P. Howe, of the Seattle, returned from a business trip to Portland during the week. The Columbia Theatre, the new independent theatre there, is now rapidly nearing completion. It will be opened during the Summer by Mrs. Leslie Carter, who will later play an engagement at the Seattle.

More prominent stars will be seen here during the next three months than ever before during a like period. The list as announced to date will include Mrs. Fiske, Rogers Brothers, Maude Adams, Mrs. Leslie Carter, James K. Hackett, Mary Mannering, Isabel Irving, Henry Miller, E. H. Sothern, and Richard Mansfield. John Philip Sousa and his band may also be heard here this Summer.

One of the most important events of the season here was the appearance of Blanche Walsh at the Grand Opera House 3-6 in Resurrection. What was called Resurrection was seen here for some three or four performances last season, but between that and this version of Bataille and Morton there is no comparison. The previous version was characterized elsewhere as "Tolstoi-less," and after witnessing the performance given by Blanche Walsh and her co. such a label seems most fitting. The Grand was filled for the opening performance, and the business for the other performances was very satisfying to the management. The star completely realized expectations as Maslova. It would be hard to imagine any one more successful in the part, especially in the prison scene, where, apparently, she had reached the depths of abandonment, and again in the last act, where the triumph of the "resurrection" was hers. Rose Coghlan 10, 11. The Silver Slipper 14-16. Charles B. Hanford 17, 18. Madame Schumann-Heink (concert recital) 20.

The Baker Theatre co., for their second week at the Seattle, offered A Midnight Bell 3-9 to good business. Though it is hard to imagine the Bakers doing anything badly, yet they did not achieve the artistic success in this play that they have in other offerings. William Dills, as the Deacon, and Howard Russell, as Martin Tripp, amused greatly in their parts, but did not embrace all the possibilities of those characters. Ona Waldrop was fine as Dot, completely realizing all that the character was meant to be. George Allison, as Keene, and Esther Lyon, as the school mistress, did not have heavy demands made upon their abilities, and it is needless to say that they satisfied in their parts. The Bakers are more in their element in the more serious plays, or those in which the comedy element is more legitimate and of a lighter vein. In the case of A Midnight Bell the comedy element was not given the necessary prominence, and the effect was that a local reviewer spoke of the melodramatic part of the plot as being of predominating interest, whereas, when the play was seen on the coast here some five or six years ago, it was unmistakably a comedy, and one of the better sort, too. At the White Horse Tavern 10-16. For the last week of the co., Jane 17-23.

The Third Avenue offered one of its popular attractions of last season in The Game Keeper 3-9, in which Thomas J. Smith is again seen in the name part. Business was good throughout the week and the play pleased. The star is possessed of a very good singing voice, with which he pleased in several songs. Baby Patti was natural as the child of the play, and her specialties were well liked. The co. as a rule was satisfying. The Stowaway 10-16. The King of the Opium Ring 17-23.

The Alcazar had a series of large audiences during the week 3-9, and the Ed Redmond co. seems to have "caught on." The Lighthouse Robbery and The Girl from Albany offered enough of a divertisement to please all the patrons, and both bills were well received. Ed Redmond, Theodore H. Bird, Clyde Granger, and Little Garna Virden proved the most pleasing of the co., though others, for the most part, did well in their parts. For next week, A Man of Mystery 10-13. The Phoenix 14-16.

RODNEY D. WHITE.

MILWAUKEE.

The most pleasing incident in theatrical circles here for several seasons was the testimonial performance given at the Pabst Theatre in honor of Leon Wachsner 10, at which an immense audience was present and the greatest enthusiasm and appreciation shown. The affair marked the twentieth anniversary of Mr. Wachsner's connection with the German stage in this city, and during these years of faithful service the worthy recipient of this memorable testimonial has won universal esteem and the undisguised admiration of Milwaukee's leading citizens and theatregoers. Mayor D. S. Rose delivered a most complimentary address, and the evening's entertainment was most successful and auspicious from every point of view. The programme consisted of the pretty comedy by Oscar Blumenthal entitled Wann Wir Altern, several delightful musical numbers by local artists, and a farcical piece called Das Fest Der Handwerker, in which Mr. Wachsner appeared. At the close of the performance the curtain was rung up in the midst of tumultuous applause, and the popular manager of the Pabst was compelled to acknowledge his thanks, while the attaches of the theatre collected the many gifts sent from various sources. Among the testimonials may be mentioned a silver loving cup from the Theatrical Managers' Association of Milwaukee, a handsome vase from the German Stock co., a gold watch from the Pabst Brewing Co., a watch charm from Sol Litt, a cigar case from Bernard Rosenow, treasurer of the Pabst Theatre, and many other presents and floral offerings too numerous to mention. An evening of happy enjoyment was spent, and the deserving object of this notable benefit was deluged with congratulations from this country and abroad.

Annie Russell appeared at the Davidson 7-9 in Mice and Men before good houses. The star was supported by an excellent co., in which John Mason, Oswald Yorke, Charles W. Butler, Mrs. G. H. Gilbert, and Margaret Huddleston were prominent. Miss Russell's peculiar style of utterance made it impossible for many to understand what she was saying, and her personal charm did not quite atone for this unfortunate blemish to an otherwise gratifying portrayal. The audience was most liberal in applause. Roger Brothers 10-13. Thomas W. Ross in Checkers 14-16. Frank Daniels 17-20.

The Thanhouser co. again distinguished itself when the members thereof produced The Dancing Girl at the Academy 11, making a most pleasing performance of an indifferent play. Edgar Baume has never done better work than his admirable portrayal of Danecourt, and Albert Brown again gave evidence of his great talents in the role of Christison, which he played superbly. Edith Evelyn gave an excellent rendition of the character of Drusilla Ives. Lee Baker added to his lengthy list of successes as David Ives. J. Francis Kirke was a good Crake. James Kyrle MacCurdy offered a fine characterization of Goldspink, and Angela McCaull won sympathy as Midge. The stage effects might have been improved upon, though on the whole the performance was creditable and aroused applause. The Last Appeal 18-24.

Wedded and Parted attracted a large audience to the Bijou 10 and proved to be a genuine thriller, such as Theodore Kremer knows so well how to write. Almost every emotion known to humanity is aroused in this piece, and clamorous applause greeted the play and players throughout the production. Al. H. [illegible] 17-22.

The Gambler's Daughter was again presented to Milwaukee theatregoers at the Alhambra 10 and a large audience enjoyed a pleasing performance of the interesting drama. Good portrayals were given by Louise Dunbar, Warren Ashley, Henry Pemberton, John Phillibar, and Karl Way. Kidnapped in New York 17-23.

A. B. Aldrich, a prominent dramatic reader and teacher of this city, has been engaged to play the leading role and direct the stage in a comedy entitled My Uncle from India, which will tour Wisconsin and other States in the West during the coming months. The co., which is known as the Hobart Dramatic co., opened in Sheboygan, Wis., April 6.

CLAUDE L. N. NORRIE.

KANSAS CITY.

Murray and Mack played a week's engagement at the Grand 10-16 to good business, although still employing their vehicle of last season, A Night on Broadway. The songs were mostly new, however, as were also some of the jokes, and to those who care for the Murray and Mack brand there was little to be desired. The stars are the same long and short Irishmen they have always been, and their knockabout comedy varies but little from year to year. Kittie Beck, stunningly dressed, sang and danced herself into favor, several of the best musical numbers falling to her. Gertrude Rutledge and Estella Wise were also prominent in the cast, and, like Miss Beck, wore some gorgeous costumes. Of the men, Arthur Lane, Edward Powers, Jefferson Gorman, and Daniel Sullivan deserve mention. The chorus was only of fair looks and ability. James K. Hackett in The Crown Prince 17-22.

May Howard and co. presented Mlle. Fifi at the Auditorium 10-16 to very good business. The piece was billed as a musical extravaganza, but borders close upon burlesque and could be more consistently called by that name. There was very little plot to the piece, its strength lying in its musical numbers and comedy, both of which were pretty good. Miss Howard was easily the best part of the show. Both her singing and dancing were excellent, and called forth repeated applause. Of the support, Allen Curtis, Leo Kendall, and Harry Burnham, all character comedians, were the best, their efforts at fun making seeming very effective. The chorus was a very attractive feature and the production was well staged and costumed. Jane Kennark in Under Two Flags 17-23.

Deserted at the Altar was the attraction at the Gillis 10-16, playing to large audiences nightly. The lovers of melodrama found much to enjoy in the play, and the stirring situations never failed to win loud and prolonged applause. The production was appropriately staged. Sandy Bottom 17-23.

Annie Russell will appear at the Willis Wood 14-16 in her new comedy, Mice and Men. This will be Miss Russell's first appearance as a star in Kansas City, and the event is looked forward to with considerable interest. William Faversham and Julie Opp will present Lord and Lady Algy 18-20, and the Rogers Brothers in the Rogers Brothers in London will all out the remainder of the week. Richard Mansfield is announced for a three nights' engagement May 2-4, presenting Old Heidelberg, Ivan the Terrible, and Beau Brummell.

Roller skating will be discontinued for this season at Convention Hall after April 15, but will probably be resumed again next Fall, as the sport has become very popular and the venture has proven quite a success financially. A grand mask skating carnival will be given on the closing evening, with appropriate prizes for the various costumes. The Damrosch Parsifal concert will be given in the hall the afternoon of 17, and beginning 21 the Spring carnival opens for a ten days' run. This will be an entertainment on the order of a street fair, all however being under one roof, and the entire show being open with but the one admission charge of 25 cents at the door. The show promises to be a novel one in many ways, and will doubtless prove a success.

The Alma Barrett Opera co. furnished a delightful entertainment at the Academy of Music 11 to a packed house. The co. is entirely a local one, who have lately made quite a hit in some of the smaller towns adjacent to Kansas City, the above mentioned event, however, being their first appearance at home. The programme consisted of part of the first act of Cavalleria Rusticana, the first act of Faust, and the second act of Martha, all appropriately staged and costumed. Elva Crosby, soprano; Mrs. Ernest Darnall, soprano; Dudley Eaton, tenor, and William G. Rogers, baritone, were all very enthusiastically applauded and deservedly so.

The Railroad Men's Club announces a minstrel show to be given at the Willis Wood the evenings of May 6, 7. The show promises to be quite an event in amateur circles, and is exciting much interest. David S. Davies is musical director.

D. KEEDY CAMPBELL.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Julia Marlowe gave one performance of When Knighthood Was in Flower to large audience at English's 6. Amelia Bingham and an excellent co. presented Olympe afternoon and evening 9 to fair audiences. Miss Bingham, in the name part, played with much skill and no little power. She was delightful in the lighter portions of the drama. Henry Woodruff made a most winning Jacques Banniere, being at his best in the tragic scenes. His death scene in the last act was perfect. J. H. Gilmore played Champmesle so effectively that those who saw Olympe will remember him long after the play has been forgotten. Creston Clark did good work as Chevelier d'Holrace. Edgar L. Davenport had little opportunity as De Mailly, but made the most of a small part. Ivy Troutman was a bright, vivacious La Catanoe, and Adelyn Wesley was good as Guillemette. The stage settings were beautiful, the costumes rich and handsome, especially those worn by Miss Bingham, who presented a lovely picture throughout the play.

James and Warde gave a most satisfactory performance of Othello, playing to a small but appreciative audience at English's 11. These actors, both of the old school, are intelligent students of the classic drama and painstaking players. Louis James' interpretation of Othello was a fine one, while Frederick Warde's Iago was almost if not quite as good a portrayal. The Desdemona of Alma Kruger was excellent.

Thomas Ross in the title-role of Checkers will again be seen at English's for three performances 12, 13. In the large cast are Katherine Mulkins, May Vokes, Anna Stanton, Margaret Smith, Dave Branham, Jr., Wallace Worsley, and W. T. Clark.

The German Stock co., of Cincinnati, will present Im Weissen Roess'l 14. Frank Daniels follows in The Office Boy 15, 16. The Runaways 18. Francis Wilson 21. Richard Mansfield in Ivan the Terrible 23. Annie Russell in Mice and Men 25. Viola Allen May 12. Maude Adams, whose appearance in The Little Minister was announced for 19, has changed her date to May 4.

The Choral Society of the Indianapolis Conservatory of Music gave a creditable performance of Chimes of Normandy 8 at English's to a large and friendly audience.

A Hot Old Time played to big houses during its annual engagement at the Park 7-9. It is a lively show, filled with good musical numbers, which are well chosen and well sung. Eddie Weston and Lottie West Symonds proved worthy successors of Johnny and Mrs. Johnny Ray. Weston is, if anything, a bit funnier than Ray in the part of the Irish drayman, whose clothes hang on him in bags and who cannot talk straight. The supporting co. is good throughout, including Gussie Nelson, Leole Maye, Edward Collins, John McMahon, William Sellery, and Bert Wainwright. The chorus was good looking and well costumed.

Yon Yonson was the attraction at the Park 11-13, with Nelse B. Erickson, a young Swede and a newcomer, in the title-role. He was all that could be desired, and was ably supported by his co., including Thomas O'Brien, James C. Mack, E. H. Bender, Harry Bond, Elma Gillette, Eva M. Bennett, Josie Winters, and Elizabeth B. Chester. Over Niagara Falls 14-16. The Governor's Son 18-20.

The last concert of the Musikverein's regular season was given at the German House 11. Mrs. Helen Herbert Thorner was the soloist.

The first circus of the season, Ringling Brothers', is announced for May 2.

General Lew Wallace, Indiana's distinguished soldier, diplomat and author, was presented with a beautiful loving cup by his Hoosier friends on his birthday, April 10.

Louise Closser, who has won much praise from the New York critics for her excellent portrayal of Prossy in Arnold Daly's production of Shaw's play Candida, is an Indianapolis Girl. Miss Closser is the wife of Walter Stearns Hale, the well-known actor.

PEARL KIRKWOOD.

PROVIDENCE.

Providence Opera House patrons have been having a rare treat 11-16 during the engagement of Nance O'Neil. She appeared here one night a few weeks ago in Magda and made a hit. During her present engagement she appeared in a repertoire that comprised The Jewess, Fires of St. John, Judith, Camille, and Elizabeth of England. In all she achieved notable successes and a splendid business was done. Metropolitan Opera co., with Mme. Sembrich in Traviata 19. Julia Marlowe in When Knighthood Was in Flower 25-27.

There were some interesting scenes in Why Women Sin, offered at the Empire 11-16. It was given by a capable co. that included Pearl Charlton Seward, George Betts, Frank Holland, and Florence Ashbrooke; business very good. Queen of the Highway 18-23.

Wedded, but No Wife, held the boards at the Imperial 11-16 and drew fair houses. The best work in the production was done by Kate Dalglish as Winnie Winfield and William S. Gill as Matt Murdock. Out of the Fold 18-23.

The Gambler's Crime attracted fair houses at the Park 11-16. The Policy Players 18-23.

The annual benefit of Providence Lodge, No. 10, Theatrical Mechanical Association, occurred evening 10. The affair this season was a double concert given in the Providence Opera House and Imperial Theatre, both houses being donated by Manager Wendelschaefer. The same programme was given at both theatres before large audiences. One feature was a large orchestra of eighty musicians, led by F. R. Wendelschaefer. It recalled the old days at the Providence Opera House when Robert Morrow was the manager and Mr. Wendelschaefer the musical director. He was given a rousing reception and proved to his listeners that he had not forgotten how to use the baton. Others on the programme were the Metropolitan Operatic Quartette, Mrs. Wynne Winslow, Field and Ward, Sidney Grant, Kimball and Donovan, Hornman, and the biograph (by courtesy of E. F. Albee), operated by Owen Reddy, chief electrician of the Keith Theatre here. The entertainment was a huge success and this committee deserves great credit: Charles I. Luther, E. F. Wendelschaefer, and William H. Doolen.

The members of the Albee Stock co., to open at Keith's 18 in The Charity Ball, occupied boxes at the Keith Theatre in Pawtucket 15 and saw a performance of Vera by the Pawtucket Albee Stock co.

Announcement is made that John Cumberland has been engaged to play the light comedy roles with the Isabelle Evesson co. at the Providence Opera House this Spring. Mr. Cumberland has appeared here on several occasions and has been a favorite.

The Arion Club performed Max Bruch's Arminius before a large audience at Infantry Hall 12. These soloists appeared: Gertrude May Stein, E. P. Johnson, and Stephen Townsend.

Beginning with the week 25, Managers Spitz and Nathanson will inaugurate a new policy at the Park Theatre. Instead of melodrama the house will present Walter J. Plimmer's All Star Varieties.

Arrangements have been perfected whereby the co. organized for the revival of Quo Vadis in New York, and which is to present that play at the Imperial during the week of May 9, will remain at that house as a stock organization for the Spring and Summer season. Matinees will be given daily except Monday, and popular prices will prevail. The co. will be headed by Richard Buhler and Lillian Kemble, and will include Louise Orendorff, Elenore Weber, Agnes Bilal, Charles McDonald, Gale Satterlee, Howard C. Hickman, Ralph Rollins, Jack Prescott, and others. Mr. Buhler was seen recently at the Imperial in Paul Revere, and established himself as a matinee favorite, attracting the biggest matinee audiences of the season.

HOWARD C. RIPLEY.

DETROIT.

Adgie Castello, who appeared recently at Avenue Theatre with her trained lions, has brought suit in the Justices Court here against the Colonial Theatre Co. of Cleveland, O., a Michigan corporation, for alleged breach of contract. Miss Castello claims $400 salary for week in which she was engaged to exhibit at the theatre, but the house had previously abandoned vaudeville, leaving her without an engagement. The case will be heard before Justice Lemkie.

Mrs. Ethel Robinson Thomas, a former member of The Telephone Girl co., has been awarded a divorce by Judge Mandell from Albert B. Thomas.

Marie Boland, daughter of W. A. Boland, 452 Monroe Avenue, this city, who will be remembered for her work with the Pike Theatre Stock co., has accepted a most advantageous offer with a stock co. of Los Angeles, Cal., for which place she will shortly leave. Miss Boland's stage career numbers only four years, but her success has been rapid. She leaves the Sky Farm co., where she occupied the position of leading woman, to accept the Los Angeles offer.

Dr. Richard Strauss and Madame Pauline Strauss de Ahna were heard in a recital of the composer's own works at Light Guard Armory the 4th, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. star course. The extremely large audience present evidently did not take kindly to the entertainment provided, for very little applause was noticeable throughout the entire programme. What little appreciation was shown came from the musicians in the gathering. But these were sadly in the minority.

The United Singers tendered a very pleasing concert at Light Guard Armory the 11th to the enjoyment of about 2,000 persons. The chorus comprises 200 males voices selected from the more prominent German singing societies of the city, and is ably directed by Herman Brueckner. The soloists were Lottie A. Baier, soprano, and Mr. Yunck, violinist. Miss Baier's voice is always reliable and a pleasure to listen to and Mr. Yunck's selection was well received. One of the pleasing features of the programme was the singing by a double quartette composed of Henry Mengel, William Ullmann, Anton Dieckes, J. Wolfschlager, Hermann Walter, Jacob Mack, Ferd. M. Marschner, and Martin Dettling.

Are You a Mason is again on view at Lyceum Theatre 10-16, and fun is raging fast and furious in consequence. It is a capital entertainment of its kind, constructed only to amuse, but anything that promotes healthful laughter has its mission in the world. Manager Julius Cahn has surrounded it with a capable co., and it promises a week of big business. Soldiers of Fortune is the booking for week 17, with Helen Ware in leading role.

Lew Dockstader at Detroit Opera House 11-16, to be followed by Richard Mansfield 18-20 in Ivan the Terrible, Old Heidelberg and Beau Brummel. James and Warde 21-23.

The Little Church Around the Corner is playing to heavy business at the Whitney Theatre week of 10, and from present indications will repeat its great success of last season. The play is provided with an exceptionally good co., the scenic arrangements are excellent and the story both interesting and thrilling. It differs little from the usual type of melodrama that finds favor with our popular priced audiences, for they all appear to be cut out by the same die. The hero and heroine in the present offering are Jimsie Warren and Jennie Grey, two young children, taken respectively by Leroy Sumner and Geraldine Tripp. Ruth Macauley enacts the exacting role of the wronged mother. Philip Vinton is the villain in the person of Harold Cahill. Al. G. Swenson as the Husband, Cora Ardell the necessary Irishwoman, and George F. Hernandez as Barney O'Toole. For His Brother's Crime next here.

A. FRANCIS.

LOUISVILLE.

Thomas W. Ross in Checkers closed a highly successful engagement at Macauley's 9. The great race scene was a distinct success. The house will be dark until 14, when Lawrence D'Orsay will present The Earl of Pawtucket for the first time here. Large advance sale indicates the interest in this dramatic novelty. Viola Allen is underlined at Macauley's.

At the New Masonic 11-16 The Sign of the Four proved a drawing attraction. Walter Edwards appearing to advantage as Sherlock Holmes. Hagenbeck's aggregation of trained animals will be the attraction at this house week commencing 18.

Jules Murry's melodrama, Lost River, drew excellent business at the Avenue week 10-16. It is in reality what is claimed for it, "A pastoral love story depicting life in Indiana without a mortgage on the farm, an erring son or a ruined daughter." The scenery and the stirring incidents in the play added in making it the deserved success it proved. Next attraction, A Hot Old Time.

The New York Symphony Orchestra will give a Parsifal concert under the direction of Walter Damrosch 27. Sousa and his band come to the same place 28.

Under the auspices of the Musical Art Society a song recital was given at the Woman's Club, the soloists being the Sisters Carmela and Grazia Carbone.

Much gratified interest is evidenced at the success of Eugenia Thais Lawton, of this city, in leading roles in stock on the Pacific Coast.

The anniversary occasion of Louisville Lodge, No. 8, Theatrical Mechanical Association, was celebrated on the stage of the Avenue 12. There were speeches and refreshments. Your correspondent here acknowledges an invitation and expresses regret at inability to attend.

Frank Shriner, of the Avenue Theatre, is a busy man these days with his duties as treasurer at that house and in preparing for the opening of the baseball season. As before announced Mr. Shriner has been elected secretary of the local club and will accompany the team on its trips.

The Louisville Lodge of Elks is actively rehearsing for a minstrel performance to be given at Macauley's early in May. The proceeds, as usual, will be devoted to charitable purposes.

An exciting incident occurred at the matinee performance at the Avenue Sunday, which, but for rare presence of mind and the promptest action, Jack Doyle, a member of the Lost River co., would have been seriously injured, if not killed, by a fractious horse used in one of the scenes of the play.

Ella Shields of the Eight Bells co., was presented while here with a gold emblem of the order by members of the Theatrical Mechanical Association. She is one of the few women members in the order in the United States.

Manager James B. Camp and executors of the Norton Estate, owner of the Auditorium, have reopened negotiations through which it may be that Manager Camp will retain possession of that popular playhouse and continue his successful managerial career there. In the event that the considerations now pending are carried to successful conclusion, Louisville people will continue to be permitted to see many of the attractions, which otherwise they would not have an opportunity to see, and the Summer season of opera will be given at the Auditorium instead of Phoenix Hill Park. It is stated that managers of independent attractions of the country and influences opposed to the theatrical syndicate are extremely desirous that the Auditorium be continued as a factor in Louisville amusements and that its direction shall be under Manager Camp.

CHARLES D. CLARKE.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Leslie Carter in Du Barry gave a convincing picture of the strenuous feminine life in two performances 2. The Court Square was filled at advanced prices. David Belasco was present at the evening performance, and reluctantly permitted himself to be dragged out by the star for a brief speech. Mrs. Carter's support was excellent, and the production thorough in every detail.

Nance O'Neil showed the strength of the hold she won on her first appearance here two weeks ago by filling the theatre 4 for a performance of Hedda Gabler. The play is thoroughly unpleasant, but the art of the artist was an absorbing study. The support was adequate.

Babes in Toyland had no moral but to amuse, and did it thoroughly in three performances 6, 7. William Norris, Mabel Barrison, Bessie Wynne, Marguerite Clarke (I suppose she's tired of being called dainty, so I won't), who is the ideal interpreter for a toy play; Charles Guyer, Nellie Daly, Gus Pixley, and the large co., proved one of the most entertaining theatre sessions of the season, and the public turned out to enjoy them in profusion. The babes may be always sure of the glad hand. Guyer and Daly's whirlwind dance works in very cleverly in the toy scene.

The Bowser-Craven Stock co. made its bow at the Nelson 4, and gave a finished production of My Friend from India all the week to good business. Charles Bowser, Marion Ballou, Charles Chapelle, and Vivia Ogden made big individual hits, and the rest of the co. did what they had to do in thoroughly creditable fashion. Walter Craven, the stage-manager, appeared only in a couple of utility parts, but these were done artistically. The co. put on The Wife 11-16, and distinction. Charles Lane and Louise ... pleased the co. especially for this production. ... and Fields prevailed on the Bowser... to give them Thursday, 14, at the Nelson, as it was impossible to move The Wizard of Oz date at the Court Square, and that was the only night the could give Springfield. It was their first appearance here, ... held more money than ever in its ... Happy Hooligan 18-23.

The New Gilmore had Bonelli and Stahl ... of the World 4-6, and they gave a very ... performance of an interesting play. W. B. Patton in The Minister's Son had the rest of the week and pleased the patrons. Good work was also done by Emmy Alton as his sister, and the co. was adequate. Mr. Patton has written himself another play for next season, entitled The Last Rose of Summer.

The Earl of Pawtucket, with Frank Monroe, came back to the Court Square 12 and did a fair business. The No. 2 Wizard of Oz co. gave rather a disappointing performance 13, 14. Way Down East 18-20. Metropolitan Opera co. 21. Mishan Minstrels 27. W. J. Kohler and local co. in Louis XI 28.

The New Gilmore had The Minister's Daughters for a return 11-13, and When Women Love, also a second visit, 14-16. A Hidden Crime 18-20.

The Grand was dark first half of week and The Village Fool, a rural play by Frank Owens, who plays Old Ninny Noggins in it, the last half. Hot Air Club 18-20. Side Tracked 21-23.

EDWIN DWIGHT.

DENVER.

Good dancing, first-class singing and skillful gymnastics were the rule at the Denver theatres for the week beginning 4. The New Curtis threw in the only note of sadness with its melodrama of the sea.

At the Broadway, where we will soon have to say Mrs. Peter McCourt, manager, the Four Cohans ran for office with a surprising vigor and a gayety that is not even equaled by Denver politicians. George Cohan can certainly dance, as can his supple sister. Mr. Cohan's peculiar eyes, that look as if they belonged to a man of forty, lend an oddity to his expression that compels attention and is not displeasing. "A cool cucumber" does not express his sangfroid on the stage, and yet his attitude seems to preserve enough of interest in his work to hold the audience. Some one had disseminated the information as to the young man's ability as a writer and he was studied with much interest. Mr. Cohan, Jr., certainly made a hit in Denver. The elder duo of the Cohan Quartette held their own admirably with the younger generation, and made up in dignity what the others gained by nimbleness and vitality. Next week, Rose Cecilia Shay in English grand opera.

The New Curtis caught on with Down by the Sea, and our little friend, Fannie Curtis, will remember the week of April 3 with pleasure. The pit of the theatre reeked with the odor of salt air and seaweed for seven days, while the tinkling of the coin of the realm made music in the box-office. Salty salts that were never on the sea rolled in their gait like typical tars of a W. Clarke Russell, and the nerve and bravery that were displayed during the storm scene of Act III could only be equaled on the stage. The play is replete with a homely philosophy of the wash-my-hands-in-a-tin-washpan-on-a-chair-outside-the-door kind, and is a severe antidote to the Willie-Pink-Tea class of society plays that seems to be holding the boards somewhat of late. The two extremes will end in a happy mean some sunny day in the future years to come, and then the American public will be happy. Several good musical specialties were introduced, and a good sized audience departed apparently happy and satisfied.

Al. G. Field's Minstrels at the Tabor beginning 3 tried the experiment of giving a continuous performance with ever changing features. A poorer show would have been tiresome, because of it and it is even a question as to whether this first-class performance would not be helped by giving the thirsty man in the back of the audience a few minutes in which to hunt down a pretzel. The show was exceptionally good, and was arranged in a proper gradation, the poorest part coming first and the performance improving in merit toward the end. There was a tiny bit of the old standby work in the frontispiece, but the middle of the book was extra good and the finish was a war whoop of joy. There were many good songs, much dancing above the ordinary, and acrobatic work that is hard to beat. Al. G. Field himself told his stories well, and as a story is all in the telling, he was most successful. Next week Sag Harbor.

More music, much music, and fine music. Raphael Cavallo, we take off our hats to you! Denver is improving in taste and becoming more cosmopolitan in desire. It is now safe for a good musician to do his work. The final grand sendoff of the Denver Orchestral Association was made with a programme that was of the very highest class, both in selection of its numbers and in the rendition of their many phases. The Tuesday Musical and Apollo clubs assisted the many stringed instruments of the orchestra with good effect.

WILLARD PACKARD HATCH.

ST. PAUL.

The Henry W. Savage English Opera co. appeared in a return engagement of three nights and matinee at the Metropolitan Opera House 11-13 to good sized audiences that evidenced marked appreciation in most hearty applause. The brilliant and thrilling Tosca of Puccini was presented opening night. Miss Rennyson made an ideal Tosca, and her rendition of the role was an artistic dramatic effort and strongly effective. Mr. Sheehan's Mario was an artistic, clever and vigorous impersonation throughout. Mr. Goff as Scarpia contributed a thoroughly artistic impersonation both in voice and acting. Mr. Bennett, Mr. Boyle, and Mr. Fulton in their respective roles were satisfactory. Faust was presented admirably. Mr. Wegener, Mr. Boyle, Mr. Marsano, Mr. McKinnie and Miss Brooks, Miss Le Brun, Miss Newman, Miss MacGahen sang and acted their respective roles artistically to fine effect. The chorus showed excellent training and offered effective work. William Faversham and Julie Opp in Lord and Lady Algy 14-16. Charles Dalton and Roselle Knott in When Knighthood Was in Flower 17-20. English Grand Opera co. 21-23. Maude Adams in The Little Minister 25-27. Viola Allen in Twelfth Night 28-30.

David Harum, with William H. Turner in the title-role, and a competent co. in support, was a drawing attraction at the Grand Opera House 10-16. At the opening performance the usual large Sunday night audience greeted the players warmly and enjoyed a real good entertainment from beginning to close. William H. Turner's impersonation of the affable David was convincingly natural. C. H. Carlton's Dick Larribee was an especially clever impersonation with a good dialect. Kathryn Morse was a pleasing and attractive Mary Blake. John Lamp offered good work in the role of John Lennox. Effie Germon, a sterling good actress, contributed a consistent and natural portrayal of Aunt Polly Bixbee and won marked favor. Walter Pratt Louis, Pliny F. Rutledge, W. Thornton Simpson, and others in the cast made the most of their parts. The play was well staged and the performance gave general satisfaction. His Last Dollar 17-23. Al. H. Wilson in The Prince of Tatters and Erick of Sweden have early dates.

Verdi's Manzoni Requiem, a choral masterpiece, was rendered admirably by the St. Paul Choral Club at the People's Church Thursday evening, 7, and was thoroughly enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience of music lovers. The soloists were Mrs. Jessie De Wolf, soprano; Miss Jessie Ringen, contralto; Edward P. Johnson, tenor; Lewis Shawe, basso. The solos were rendered with a fine appreciation and in excellent voice. A strong chorus with the symphony orchestra also contributed effective work. George H. Fairclough was organist and George H. Normington musical director.

Parsifal, concert by Damrosch co., will be given at the People's Church 12.

The Schubert Club will present Herbert Witherspoon in recital at Park Congregational Church Thursday, 14, and Harold Bauer piano recital 15.

GEORGE H. COLGRAVE.

TORONTO.

The latest De Koven work, Red Feather, with Grace Von Studdiford in the title-role, was presented to highly pleased audiences at the Princess 11-16. It was the first time this winsome comic opera had been seen here, and De Koven's popularity as a composer of light opera was materially increased. The star's singing and acting were prominent and laudable features of the piece. Her numbers, "Garden of Dreams" and "The Merry Cavalier," together with her duet with Mr. Tallman, "To Call Thee Mine," were repeatedly encored during the engagement, wherein but a single Saturday matinee was given. The gowns worn by Miss Von Studdiford were particularly attractive. The leading comedy part, originally played by Thomas O. Seabrook, was splendidly undertaken by James E. Sullivan, who made a hit in his song "If I Only Had a Mustache Like the Kaiser." Dorothy Maynard sang and acted well, as did also Miss Bartrand and Cora Tracey. Among the male characters should be mentioned W. J. McCarthy, Louis Casavant, George J. Tallman, and Alfred B. MacGahen. The costumes were extravagantly bewitching, the scenery splendid, and the music and chorus better than are usually heard in such musical organizations. The orchestra was under the direction of Signor A. De Novellis. An English Daisy 18-23.

Ralph Stuart, starring in his new play By Right of Sword, had no difficulty in doing big business at the Grand Opera House 11-16. He is well known to Toronto theatregoers on account of his engagement here in stock work at the Princess some years ago, consequently not a few were anxious to see Mr. Stuart as a star. The play bristles with melodramatic situations and scenes, in the majority of which the hero and his able support, Lillian Albertson, figure conspicuously. Carl S. Seule and Edward Poland were prominent among the rest of the co. The scenery and staging were sumptuous. Adelaide Thurston 18-23.

The intense dramatic situations in each scene of In Convict Stripes, at the Majestic Theatre 11-16, pleased the large audiences which attended this popular house. The Fatal Wedding 18-23.

Marie Nicholls will be heard for the first time in Toronto in Association Hall 14, when a brilliant programme of violin solos will be given.

Dr. Edwin H. Lemare and Watkin Mills will be heard in a grand organ and vocal recital in the Metropolitan Church 19.

Dr. Drummond, of Montreal, will be heard in an evening recital of his own poems in Association Hall 25, assisted by Grace Lillian Carter and Abbie May Heimer.

Muriel Foster, the English contralto, will appear in Massey Hall 18.

STANLEY McKEOWN BROWN.

NEWARK.

The Chaperons, after a nine months' tour, finished their season at the Newark 11-16. It was a whirlwind of fun from the rise until the fall of the final curtain. John G. Sparks and Harry Ladell did some clever comedy work. Thomas Wilkes, W. V. Strunts, and Arthur Earnest were excellent in their several parts. Mabel Hite made a decided hit as the girl detective, and Mae Stebbens danced into the good graces of the audience. Bertha Galland, 18-23.

The Ninety and Nine was the offering at the Empire 11-16, and pleased good houses. The large co. was headed by O. J. Ashman and Marion Ballou. Sis Hopkins 18-23.

Daniel Ryan appeared in repertoire at Blaney's 11-16. As Don Caesar in A Royal Lover, Ruben Warner in Lost Paradise and Virginius in Sheridan Knowles' great tragedy, Mr. Ryan undertook a difficult task, but acted the parts to suit the most exacting. His other plays were The Great Ruby and The Three Musketeers. Mr. Ryan received excellent support from Daisy L. Whipple, Phyllis Gilmore, Alice Fleming, Hames Gordon, Henry M. Hicks, and F. A. Yelvington. The Village Postmaster 18-23.

The Columbia Stock co. produced The Frisky Mrs. Johnson 11-16 to good houses. The performance of the comedy went along very smoothly. Mrs. Brinker assumed the title character, and Thurlow Bergen portrayed the severely virtuous Jim Morley. The other members of the cast handled their respective parts in a very creditable manner. The Little Minister 18-23.

Isabella Dixon, one of the dainty Show Girls with The Chaperons, is a Newark girl, and received a warm welcome home by her host of friends. Ruth Lloyd, another comely Show Girl with The Chaperons, was the guest of Miss Dixon while in Newark. Mabel Hite and Genevieve Day, of The Chaperons, have been engaged for The Venetian Romance co.

Sousa and his band gave a concert at the Krueger Auditorium 12 to excellent house. The soloists were Estelle Liebling, Jessie Straus, and Herbert L. Clark.

The Elks' benefit was held at the Newark Theatre 18, and as usual their friends turned out in force.

Alice Fleming, who in private life is Edith Weeks, is another Newark girl playing here this week with the Ryan co.

The annual complimentary benefit tendered to the executive staff of Waldmann's will be given May 18.

CLEVELAND.

This city now has eight theatres open. The Lyric Theatre, a handsome little playhouse owned by the German Theatre Co., is the latest bid for public favor and the initial performance was given Tuesday, 12, before a crowded house. Uriel Acosta was presented by the German Stock co., and was well received.

The event of the week was the annual engagement of Richard Mansfield at the Euclid Avenue Opera House, the opening bill being Ivan the Terrible. The play, while not a satisfactory one, showed the star to advantage in the title-role, and his artistic portrayal of the character won him much applause. The supporting co. is a fine one, including Ida Conquest, Arthur Forrest, and others. Old Heidelberg, a beautiful play, in which both Mr. Mansfield and his splendid co. were seen in more congenial roles, was given 12, and it made a lasting impression on the audience. A Parisian Romance 13. Beau Brummel 14. Ivan the Terrible 15. Old Heidelberg 16, and for the last performance, Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. The usual sumptuous staging of all these productions, characteristic of this great American actor, was a feature of the engagement. D'Orsay in The Earl of Pawtucket 18-23.

At the Colonial 11-16 Vaughan Glaser's Stock co. gave a fine production of Parsifal, staging it in an elaborate manner; with an augmental orchestra and the introduction of a fine quartette, it proved to be a popular entertainment. Prisoner of Zenda 18-23.

The new Prospect Theatre has started on its career most auspiciously, the beautiful playhouse being crowded at every performance, and for the second week. The Baldwin-Melville Stock co. gave a good presentation of Janice Meredith. Lucia Moore in the title-role was all that could be desired, and Maurice Freeman made a dashing Charles Fownes. The rest of the characters were well taken care of. Monte Cristo 18-23.

Soldiers of Fortune was the attraction at the Lyceum Theatre 11-16 and was played by a fair co. The Sign of the Four 18-23.

The Cleveland Theatre presented its patrons with Blaney's latest play, For His Brother's Crime, 11-16, and was favored with good patronage. Yon Yonson 18-23.

Sousa will give a concert at Gray's Armory 18.

Work is being rushed on the new Garden Theatre on Euclid Avenue, and it is expected to be ready to open early in June.

WILLIAM CRASTON.

MINNEAPOLIS.

H. W. Savage's English Grand Opera co. continued at the Metropolitan Opera House latter half of week ending 9, giving a second rendering of the operas presented first part of week. On Sunday evening, 10, they appeared in concert, the latter part of which was given over to the music from Parsifal, Mr. Schenck conducting. His work with the orchestra was telling. Mr. Goff sang Amfortas' "Lament" with earnestness and deep feeling. Mr. Sheehan and Mr. Bennett gave their numbers with dignity and a fine appreciation of the work. The first part of the evening Mr. Wegener sang Mendelssohn's "Sorrows of Death" in a thoroughly artistic manner. Miss Rennyson scored with "Hear Ye Israel," singing with considerable fire and expression. Miss Ivell's voice was heard to advantage in Meyerbeer's "The Prophet."

William Faversham opened at the Metropolitan 11 for a short engagement, presenting his great success, Lord and Lady Algy. His Lord Algy is beyond criticism. Julie Opp as Lady Algy shared the honors with the star. Percy Lyndal gave a very intelligent portrayal of the role of the Marquis of Quarmby. The balance of a very large cast was satisfactory. Viola Allen in Twelfth Night 25.

The Stain of Guilt pleased large audiences at the Bijou Opera House week 10. It is a thrilling melodrama and includes all the usual ingredients that go to make up the usual play of this sort. It was presented by a co. that was somewhat above the average and thoroughly pleased all who witnessed it. David Harum week 17.

The Ferris Stock co. presented The Merchant of Venice week 10 at the Lyceum. Ben Johnson was seen as Shylock, a role which he handled in a masterly manner. Grace Hayward gave an intelligent portrayal of Portia. Joseph Totten made an excellent Launcelot Gobbo. Maude Gilbert was a very pretty Nerissa, while Maisie Cecil was seen to advantage as Jessica. The balance of the co. acquitted themselves creditably. Way Out West 17, 21-23. A Night in Bohemia, by No. 44 B. P. O. E. 18-20.

Work was commenced last week on the new Orpheum Theatre. The contract calls for completion by Sept. 15.

CHARLES M. LANE.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Samuel Collins, the champagne dance, and a kaleidoscopic array of pretty gowns embellished by some striking scenery and a fine orchestra make up the sum total of the life giving qualities in The Silver Slipper as seen at the Marquam Grand 3-7. Four big houses at advanced prices enjoyed the big show and were pronounced in approval of Collins' comicalities and the dancing and singing of the English and American sextettes. Charles B. Hanford in Richard III 11. Rose Coghlan 12, 13. Homer Davenport (lecture) 14.

Pudd'nhead Wilson received a commendable and highly enjoyable presentation by the Neill Morosco co. at the Baker 3-9. Howard Gould gave an even and true portrayal of the name part. Phosa McAlister and Elsie Esmond would have won merit in the original co. as Aunt Patsy and Rowy. The Roxy of Amelia Gardner was forceful if not attractive. The best work of all was done by Thomas Oberle as Tony Driscoll. Aristocracy opens 10.

The Girl from Paris at Cordray's 3-9 is the best thing by long odds yet done by the Olympia Opera co. Three new comedians in the person of Carrick Major, Fritz Shade, and Leo Adde came forward for honors in this show and received them right royally. Lottie Kendall, Etta Stetson, and Theresa Barker were also noticeable for clever work; business good. This same co. will present The Two Vagabonds 17-23 and will be followed by Mrs. Fiske 25, who will be the first of the independents to visit us this season. Managers Cordray and Russell announce the innovation here of midweek matinees to be given in the near future.

As a result of the 1905 Lewis and Clark Exposition to be held in this city we have already some twenty 10-cent vaudeville theatres in operation, on paper and in contemplation.

Manager Baker, in reorganizing his stock co., has closed contracts with Guy Standing as leading man, Rebecca Warren as leading woman, Charles Mackay, juvenile; Scott Cooper, character, and Dallas Tyler, ingenue.

JOHN T. LOGAN.

JERSEY CITY.

Queen of the White Slaves was offered at the Academy of Music 11-16 to fine patronage. The play is so daring in speech and plot that one's breath is almost knocked out of the body, and it is the most remarkable example of melodramatic extremity that has ever come to Jersey City. Depravity is sticking out of every act, and there are enough sensation and material in the third act to make three plays. The production is a most lavish one as regards scenery and mountings. The plot deals with the kidnapping of white women by Chinese highbinders. The raft scene in the second act was excellent and well worked. The co. is a strong one, well balanced, and all the parts work to make the play a go. Chauncey Olcott in Terrence 18-23. Driven from Home 25-30.

Haverly's Mastodon Minstrels were at the Bijou Theatre 11-16 to excellent patronage. This was the first time for Haverly's in many years. The first part was excellent, the singing being particularly good. It was a handsome scene, and the comedians were at their best. The end men were Billy Van, Eddie Leonard, Eddie Masier, and Dan Walton. The musical numbers were well selected, and the soloists were of the best. Even the jokes were good. The olio was a fine one. George Klimt and Alma Hearn in On the Bridge at Midnight 18-23. The Sign of the Cross 25-30.

Sousa and his great band came to Elks' Hall 11 to very good business, and gave an excellent concert.

The Eagles are preparing for a Sunday night show at the Academy of Music.

Manager John B. Holmes, who owns the Bijou Theatre here, is hustling for a big vaudeville bill for the police benefit at his house May 9-14.

The season at the Academy will close 14.

Billy Van, the comedian of Haverly's Mastodon Minstrels, was initiated in Hoboken Lodge of Elks after the performance 15.

The new Theatrical Mechanics' Association will hold a preliminary meeting after the theatres close 15.

WALTER C. SMITH.

MONTREAL.

The Silver Slipper opened to a good sized house at the Academy 11. The plot, which starts in the first act, is rather interesting, but it grows smaller in the beginning of the second act, and is pretty well lost altogether by the end of the play. The scenery is picturesque, the costumes fine, and the dancing by the English Dancing Girls is particularly good. The cast is only fair. Smitz Edwards has the bulk of the comedy work on his shoulders, and is exceedingly clever and funny. Gertrude Millington is acceptable as Wrenne, and received several encores for singing "The Girl You Love." Lora Leib made a charming Girl from Venus, and Virginia Palmer was fair as Belle Jimper. The rest of the principals do not call for any special mention. Grace Van Studdiford in The Red Feather 18-23.

The Bonnie Brier Bush at Proctor's seems just as popular on its third visit, as it was on its first, if not more so. The play is now too well known to need comment. Mr. Stoddart's portrayal of the old Scotch shepherd is as strong and striking as ever. Reuben Fax shares honors as Posty. Robert V. Ferguson repeated his hit as the doctor, and the touching story of peasant life in Scotland seems to please as much as before, in spite of its several glaring inconsistencies. Under Southern Skies 18-23.

At the Francais 18-23 a musical comedy, Pickings from Puck, holds the boards. It is a very fair specimen of the mixture of farce and vaudeville which appears to be popular just now. The chorus is not large, but they are good looking and sing well. Fred Lussier gave an eccentric violin turn that caught the house. Mr. Sims was very funny as Flinders. Zella Rotall possesses a fine voice and her songs were frequently encored. King of Detectives 18-23.

Les "13," founded on one of Balzac's novels, is the bill at the National Francais. J. P. Filion appears as Paragus and Mlle. Lindey as the Duchesse de Langeais.

Les Rantzau is the bill at the Nouvautes.

W. A. TREMAYNE.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Kilties Military Band gave six concerts at the Tulane 10-13. The programmes presented were principally classical and operatic, and W. H. Robinson, the musical director, led his musicians in a masterly manner. Coates Lockhart, tenor, sang several Scotch songs with the proper spirit, and the Clan Johnstone troupe of bagpipe players and dancers were entertaining in their respective lines. The attendance was not of the most encouraging. Joseph Jefferson appeared 14-16 and presented Rip Van Winkle, The Rivals, Cricket on the Hearth, and Lend Me Five Shillings. The attendance was large and enthusiastic, and the veteran comedian was given quite an ovation at every performance. Marie Cahill 17-23.

The Baldwin-Melville Stock co., at the Grand Opera House, presented The Two Sisters 10-16 to satisfactory business. Lester Lonergan and Mabel Montgomery played the leading roles, but were not afforded much opportunity for the display of their reputed talents. John T. Dwyer and Suzanne Santje enacted the heavy roles intelligently, the bulk of the work really falling to them. The balance of the co. did its usual good work. Fabio Romani 17-23.

The Alice Treat Hunt Stock co. continues its good work at the Elysium Theatre and presented On the Stroke of Twelve 10-16. Miss Hunt, Raymond Whittaker, Herbert Brenon, and Hal de Forest played the principal roles in a more than satisfactory manner. The attendance was fair. Ten Nights in a Bar Room 17-23.

The James Boys in Missouri, with Nell Florence and E. M. Crane, cast as Jess and Frank, respectively, was the attraction at the Crescent 10-16. The play, with its stirring scenes and climaxes, seemed to please the patrons of the house and drew well during the week. The Old Dominion 17-23.

J. MARSHALL QUINTERO.

TOLEDO.

Julia Marlowe in When Knighthood Was in Flower played to good house at the Valentine 8. The star was ably supported by Tyrone Power and a good co. Frank Daniels in The Office Boy packed the house 11. Daniels was in his most humorous mood and kept the house and co. in a continuous fit of laughter. He made one of his characteristic curtain speeches after the first act. Nat C. Goodwin gave A Gilded Fool to half a house 12. Goodwin seemed to regard the small house as a joke, and gave the happiest kind of a performance. The Ridgway Concert co. (benefit Y. M. C. A.) 13.

At the Lyceum James K. Hackett appeared in The Crown Prince for two performances 9. The houses were not very large, but thoroughly enjoyed the finished production. The Cardinal, with Edwin Holt in the lead, to fair business 10-13. Mr. Holt has the centre of the stage most of the time and appears to excellent advantage. He was capably supported.

Burt's had For His Brother's Crime 7-9. The co. was well balanced and the piece has a plot of considerable depth. The houses were good and enjoyed the play. Uncle Tom's Cabin, by one of the Martin cos., came in for its full share of patronage 10-13. Harry Glazier's new stock co. made its first appearance at the Grand 11 in Gloriana. There was a good house and the star was accorded a warm welcome by his admirers. The co. is well balanced and handled the comedy in a finished manner. Miss Morris is a clever and experienced leading woman, with a handsome face and figure. Miss Campbell, the ingenue, is vivacious and charming. Mr. Brooke and Mr. Bor-

BUFFALO.

Lawrence D'Orsay, supported by a capable co., presented The Earl of Pawtucket at the Teck 7-9 before large and enthusiastic audiences.

After waiting patiently for many months, the theatregoing people of Buffalo had an opportunity of seeing that great local favorite, as well as one of the best younger actresses, Blanche Bates, in The Darling of the Gods. Suffice it to say this is the greatest production from a scenic standpoint seen in this city. David Belasco must be congratulated on the results obtained. Next week The Eternal City, with Edward Morgan and Sarah Truax in the title-roles.

Joshua Whitcomb delighted fairly good houses at the Star week 17. Next week Ralph Stuart in By Right of Sword.

That everlasting success, The Sign of the Cross, was a big drawing card at the Lyceum 11-16.

Men, women and children packed the Academy from pit to dome week 11-16, when The Fatal Wedding was the attraction. Although this has been the third time this play has played this house, it seems to have lost none of its qualities as a box-office winner.

Albert Becker, of Shea's forces, has returned to town after spending ten days in the metropolis.

St. Patrick's Dramatic Circle presented The Vagabonds in an excellent manner in St. Stephen's Hall 11 before an audience of 1,700 people. The young players deserve great credit for the way the different characters were portrayed, and we expect great things from this progressive society in the near future.

P. T. O'CONNOR.

OMAHA.

Lord and Lady Algy was the offering at the Boyd 8, 9. Weary Willie Walker 10 proved to be a farce comedy tramp play of some merit. Business fair. The Damrosch Orchestra rendered Parsifal 11 to one of the largest and most cultured audiences of the season. The applause was both sincere and hearty and was well deserved. Manager Burgess announces Annie Russell 13. Rogers Brothers 17, 18. The Rose Shay Opera co. 19-23.

Deserted at the Altar was presented by a fair co. at the Krug to average business 7-9. David Higgins met with a very enthusiastic reception from both press and public in his new play, His Last Dollar, 10-13. The only criticism heard here is on the name of the play, which might be better, the co. being thoroughly adequate. Manager Gondeu has Why Girls Leave Home 14-16.

The acquisition by Managers Woodward and Burgess of a Sioux City theatre will greatly add to their business success. They now have houses in Kansas City, Omaha, and Sioux City.

J. R. RINGWALT.

ALABAMA.

BIRMINGHAM.—BIJOU THEATRE (Ed E. Willyiams, mgr.): Back to melodrama went this popular playhouse 11-16, when A Ragged Hero was the bill; owing to local election 11 usual well filled house was not in evidence, though prospects are encouraging for balance of engagement. The James Boys in Missouri 18-23 canceled. Otis Harlan's new musical co. in The Ameer has been substituted for two weeks commencing 18.——EAST LAKE: As previously stated, this park has been acquired by Jake Wells and the work of beautifying the grounds is being rapidly pushed forward with commendable results. Extensive improvements are being made on the theatre, which it is stated will open May 15 with refined vaudeville. The other improvements are showing up well, and the place will scarcely be recognizable by the opening date. The local traction co. is installing elaborate terminal facilities.——JEFFERSON THEATRE: Joseph Jefferson in The Rivals to S. R. O. 11. Fay Davis in Whitewashing Julia 12.——ITEM: A local paper commented at length on the season's offerings and lamented the fact that financially, and artistically particularly, they had been far from satisfactory and much worse than the public had the right to expect from this, a high-price house, the price of seats already high and running still higher on the slightest provocation. It is rumored that next season may see a new manager at this house. The lease of Klaw and Erlanger is soon to expire.

MONTGOMERY.—McDONALD'S THEATRE (G. F. McDonald, mgr.): The James Boys in Missouri 6; very fair performance; good business.——MONTGOMERY THEATRE (Hirscher Brothers, mgrs.): Ottoker Malek (pianist) 8 pleased very good house. Joseph Jefferson 12. Marie Cahill 15.

MOBILE.—THEATRE (J. Tannenbaum, mgr.): Knowles (hypnotists) 4-7, 9; interesting attraction; fair patronage. James Boys in Missouri 8; largely pleased its class of auditors; business good.

SELMA.—ACADEMY OF MUSIC (Long and Rees, mgrs.): Black Patti 11; topheavy house. Payton Sisters (return) 14-16.

HUNTSVILLE.—OPERA HOUSE (Thomas F. Littlejohn, mgr.): Chicago Glee Club played here to small but pleased audience 10.

ANNISTON.—NOBLE STREET THEATRE (A. B. Noble, mgr.): Payton Sisters 11-13.

ARKANSAS.

PINE BLUFF.—ELKS' THEATRE (Clarence Philpot, mgr.): Black Patti's Troubadours 6; topheavy house; performance tiresome throughout. A Ragged Hero 7; small house owing to bad weather; excellent play and co. National Stock co. 11, 12. Gibson Pictures and Reveries of a Bachelor (local) 13.——ITEM: Mgr. Micky Holland has left for Paducah, Ky., to confer with architects relating to his new theatre.

LITTLE ROCK.—CAPITAL THEATRE (R. S. Hamilton, lessee and mgr.): Black Patti 5; good performance and business. A Ragged Hero 6; fair performance and business. National Stock co. 11-14. Ezra Kendall 15. National Stock co. 16, 18-22. A Friend of the Family 23. J. C. Taylor co. 25-30.

FORT SMITH.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE (Ed S. Stuhle, mgr.): Morey Stock co. 4-9. Plays: A Woman's Way, A Ragged Hero, A Day at the Circus, Michael Strogoff, Cleopatra, A Fatal Likeness; good co.; excellent business. Faust's Minstrels 16.

HOT SPRINGS.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE (Brigham Head, mgr.): Jack C. Taylor co. 11 opened to S. R. O.——AUDITORIUM: Ezra Kendall 12.

CALIFORNIA.

LOS ANGELES.—MASON OPERA HOUSE (H. C. Wyatt, lessee): Erik of Sweden 4-6; very poor houses; poor co. The House that Jack Built (local) 8, 9 to S. R. O.; well put on. Mary Mannering 11-16. McFadden's Flats 18-20. Anna Held 25-27.——MOROSCO'S BURBANK THEATRE (Oliver Morosco, lessee): Florence Roberts and her very acceptable co. opened a four weeks' engagement 3-9 in The Frisky Mrs. Johnson to splendid business. Peggy Thrift, The Country Girl, and Gioconda 10-16.——GRAND OPERA HOUSE (Clarence Drown, mgr.): A Modern Magdalen 3-9; moderate business; co. fair. The Punkin Husker 10-16. Mrs. Fiske 18-20. Isabelle Irving in The Crisis 25-27.——CASINO THEATRE (J. E. Waldeck, mgr.): 4-10 was the second week of Barbara Fidgety, and the house was packed nightly. The Big Little Princess 11-17.——ITEMS: Patrons of the Mason will miss the ever genial doorkeeper, Edward Tynan, who has decided to take an indefinite rest. Mr. Tynan started in as usher for Manager Wyatt eighteen years ago, but in later years has held down the door, and his resignation is as much of a disappointment to Mr. Wyatt as to the patrons.—It is definitely announced that Mr. Morosco is to have the best theatre in the city. This new house will be built on Main Street, between Sixth and Seventh, and promises to outclass all others. The Syndicate will have no voice in the bookings.

OAKLAND.—MACDONOUGH THEATRE (Hall and Barton, lessees): Mary Mannering in Harriet's Honeymoon 4, 5; pretty sketch; well acted; house packed. Anna Eva Fay in Somnolency 6-10; interesting entertainment; good business. Frank Cooley 11-17.——YE LIBERTY THEATRE (H. W. Bishop, lessee and mgr.): James Neill and co. presented The Holy City 4-10; elaborate production; clever acting; fine attendance. Pudd'nhead Wilson 11-17.——ITEMS: George B. Berrell has arrived from New York and will fill the position of stage-manager at Ye Liberty.—Landers Stevens, an old favorite, ha sreturned and will shortly appear at the Macdonough Theatre.—Norris and Rowe's Circus is booked here 11, 12.

FRESNO.—BARTON OPERA HOUSE (R. G. Barton, mgr.): Ben Hendricks in Eric of Sweden 2. Hendricks good; play poor; house small. Mary Mannering in Harriet's Honeymoon 9. Wiedemann and co. 10-16. CONNECTICUT.

HARTFORD.—PARSONS THEATRE (H. C. Parsons, mgr.): Tuft College Glee Club rendered very enjoyable concert 8 to good, appreciative audience. Babes in Toyland for four performances 11-13, opening with very large audience, which increased to S. R. O. on the final two performances. Peggy from Paris 15, 16. Philharmonic Concert 19. Metropolitan Opera House co and Orchestra in Faust 20. 'Way Down East 21-23.——HARTFORD OPERA HOUSE (Jennings and Graves, mgrs.): Henry Clay Blaney's Across the Pacific drew large, well pleased audiences on its return 7-9. When Women Love, sensational melodrama, fulfilled its mission 11 to a good sized audience. The entire Weber and Fields family occupied the boards 12, presenting their success Whoop-De-Doo to large and enthusiastic audience. Her First False Step 13; good house. Queen of the Highway 14-16. Joe Welch in The Peddler 18-20. Ward and Vokes 21.——ITEMS: The cabs of the Hamlin at midnight Tuesday resembled some of the favorite ones on "the great white way." Always headquarters with professionals, it was filled to overflowing with a jolly crowd of Thespians, made up of principals and chorus of the Weber-Fields co. and Babes in Toyland, and George Primrose from Poli's "on the side," all in a happy Broadway reunion.—Tuesday evening was a test of what good attractions will do here. At the Hartford a very large audience greeted Weber and Fields; Babes in Toyland, at Parsons' on the second of the four performances of their extravaganza, had a crowded house, while the latter condition existed at the big Poli Theatre, attracted by a fine bill with George Primrose as the topliner.—It looked like a professional matinee at Poli's Tuesday, when nearly all the members of the Weber and Fields co. and Babes in Toyland, availing themselves of no matinee or rehearsal at their theatres, were very much in evidence.
A. DUMONT.

NEW HAVEN.—HYPERION THEATRE (G. B. Bunnell, mgr.): Mrs. Leslie Carter gave 8, 9, for the first time in this city, Du Barry to overflowing houses. The production was lavishly put on, with the same careful attention to detail that marked its long metropolitan run. Weber and Fields in their latest burlesque, Whoop-De-Doo, drew large and fashionable audience 11. To those who have revoled in the good old burlesques as offered by Weber and Fields Whoop-De-Doo seemed a waste of the stellar material of which the cast is composed, and yet it was thoroughly enjoyable and offered no end of rattling good comedy for Messrs. Weber, Fields, and Louis Mann. Peggy from Paris to goodly gatherings 12, 13. Babes in Toyland 14-16. Yale Dramatic Club in New Men and Old Acres 19, 20. Calve in Carmen 22. Ward and Vokes 23.——WOOLSEY HALL: Last Symphony concert to crowded house 14. The soloists were Wallace Moyle and Max Freemann, of New York.——FOY AUDITORIUM: George Riddle gave readings from Cyrano to large gathering 13.——NEW GRAND OPERA HOUSE (G. B. Bunnell, mgr.; W. H. Van Buren, asst. mgr.): The Lighthouse by the Sea, a big scenic production, drew topheavy houses 11-13. Her First False Step 14-16. The Wayward Son 18-20.——ITEMS: Mrs. Carter's son came on from Harvard, where he is a student, and spent 8-10 with his mother in this city.—Mr. Bunnell took a trip through the State last week, which included an automobile ride and lunch with Governor Chamberlaine.—The Edward Malley Dramatic co. will put on The Private Secretary the last of this month.—Lillian Russell, in an interview 11, stated that she had not as yet signed with Weber and Fields for next season.
JANE MARLIN.

BRIDGEPORT.—SMITH'S THEATRE (E. C. Smith, mgr.): The Minister's Daughters 8, 9 pleased good houses. A Man of the World 11, 12; good co. and house. Weber and Fields 13; house filled. The Lighthouse by the Sea 14-16. Her First False Step 18, 19. Ward and Vokes 20. John Drew 22. A Hidden Crime 23. Virginia Harned 26. When Johnny Comes Marching Home 28.——ITEM: Manager G. B. Bunnell of New Haven has (with his usual thoroughness) billed his Hyperion star attractions through this city and is reaping the reward of local theatre parties. Bridgeport is especially glad he has decided to continue his lease. It is the next best thing to having him open a new Bridgeport house.
W. P. HOPKINS.

WATERBURY.—POLI'S THEATRE (Jean Jacques, mgr.): Talma Club Minstrels (local) gave its friends delightful evening's entertainment 7. Babes in Toyland attracted large and well pleased audience 8. When Women Love 9; two performances; fair business. Mrs. Leslie Carter in Du Barry filled house with one of most enthusiastic audiences of season 11. The Wizard of Oz 12 pleased large audience. The Earl of Pawtucket 14. Ben Hur 18-20. Ward and Vokes 22. John Drew 23.

MRS. BEN LEAVITT EXPLAINS.

When seen by a representative of THE MIRROR last week, Mrs. Ben Leavitt, for whom THE MIRROR inquired two weeks ago, had to say that she is now the wife of J. Henry Rowley and is living with her husband, who is manager of the Rijou Theatre, Paterson, N. J., at 34 Carrol Street, Paterson. She said that Mr. Cooper was her half brother, her mother having married a second time, to James Fennimore Cooper, and the son by this union was always a strangely acting boy. She further stated that she had not heard of him for many years, and did not know that he had ever married. She said, however, that she would try and see if something could be done for his family in San Francisco.

STAGE AND AMUSEMENT INVENTIONS.

Prepared exclusively for THE MIRROR by H. B. Wilson and Company, Patent Attorneys, of Washington, D. C.

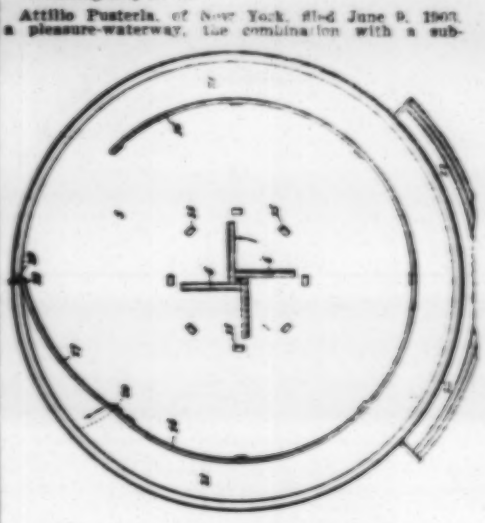
Attilio Pusterla, of New York, filed June 9, 1903, a pleasure-waterway, the combination with a substantially circular body of water, of means to circularly move or rotate the body of water and boats carried by the water, substantially as described.



La Marcus A. Thompson, of New York, filed Dec. 5, 1903, an amusement apparatus, a flume having sections at different levels connected by inclined portions, means to supply said flume with water, a storage reservoir in constant communication with the water supply communicating with said flume contiguous to the top of said inclined portion.

Dorothy W. Curtiss, of Brooklyn, N. Y., filed March 25, 1903, a garment protector of the class described, comprising similar top and bottom portions of flexible material secured together at their outer edges, the upper part or portion being provided with a central opening through which the lower limbs and lower part of the body may be passed, and the bottom part or portion being provided with two closely-adjacent openings through which the entire lower limbs may be passed, said opening being provided with securing devices, substantially as shown and described.

Alvin G. Hammell, of New York, filed Aug. 22, 1902, an amusement device, a spirally-formed, vertically-disposed track, the diameter of which spiral decreases in direction of the bottom.

Edward Lytton, of London Eng., filed Aug. 28, 1902, in machinery for raising and lowering pieces of stage scenery, a shaft adapted to be rotated in either direction by a motor, a pulley mounted loose on said shaft having the lifting and lowering cord of a piece of scenery attached to its periphery, a friction clutch upon said shaft adapted to engage with said pulley so as to carry it around with the shaft, a clutch-lever operating said friction-clutch, a catch adapted to lock said clutch lever in the engaged position and a locking device operating in connection with the clutch gear and adapted to lock the pulley when the clutch is moved out of engagement and to free the pulley when the clutch is moved into engagement, substantially as described.

Willard H. Gilman, of Boston, Mass., filed March 23, 1903, an apparatus comprising a liquid-holding tank, a diving bell movable into and out of said tank, said diving-bell having a cage and a hood vertically movable relatively to the cage, means for alternately raising and depressing said diving-bell and for raising and depressing the hood, and mechanism for intermittently locking the hood to the cage.

John R. Clancy, of Syracuse, N. Y., on Dec. 6, 1902, filed a model for a patent of a suspended theatrical scenery and a plurality of ropes connected respectively to the central and the end portions of said scenery, of a tackle frame suspended from the central rope, a plurality of pulleys pivoted to different parts of said frame and a compensating rope traversing said pulleys and connected to the end ropes set forth.

LONDON.

Julia Neilson and Fred Terry in Sunday—Irving Home—Notes.

(Special Correspondence of The Mirror.)

THE MIRROR BUREAU,
TRAFALGAR HOUSE, GREEN STREET, LEICESTER SQUARE,
LONDON, W. C., April 9.

Like all MIRRORITES, I ever rejoice at other people's success, and lament over other people's failures. Therefore I rejoice to have to state, at the beginning of this epistle, that the new drama produced by Julia Neilson and Fred Terry at the Comedy Theatre last Saturday night deservedly received the warmest of welcomes. The play is the work of "Mr. Thomas Raceward," who is, I may tell you, three single gentlemen rolled into one, one of the said single gentlemen being a member of the company. The play is entitled Sunday, but it has, I may tell you, no connection whatever with that day of rest, concerning which I find your neighbor, Canada, seems just now inclined to pass such rigorous enactments. No; "Sunday" is the nickname given to the orphan heroine because she happened to be born on that day of the week—a kind of thing which I surmise has happened to a good many other people since the habit of being born first became fashionable upon this planet. There is much in this really powerful drama to remind the spectator of your late universally beloved story-teller, Bret Harte, and especially of such deathless little narratives of his as "The Luck of Roaring Camp" and "The Outcasts of Poker Flat." For be it noted that the Sabbatically named heroine is a sort of waif who has been cared for from babyhood by a set of rough but good-hearted miners, each of whom would go for her sake to the ends of the earth, or even further. She, however, crossing to the British Isles, falls in love with a gallant Englishman, one Colonel Brinthorpe. Many an exciting episode sets in and a liberal display of blood shed before all ends happily. The piece contains something of a problem, for the triple author seems to think that even the Cain-like crime of brother-slaying may (so to speak) be atoned for if the fratricide does it through the power of love, meaning, of course, love for some woman rather (apparently) than for the brother whom he slayeth. This is a nice point, and, as my friend Gilbert's Lord Chancellor used to say in Iolanthe, "I do not remember to have met it before."

I shall not stop to unravel this problem. It is enough to say that the play, being well written and cleverly constructed, held the large audience from beginning to end. Also that the beautiful Julia and the handsome Fred scored splendidly as Sunday and the Colonel respectively. Excellent pieces of acting were also given by J. D. Beveridge, Louis Calvert, Alfred Brydone, Horace Hodges, Alfred Kendrick, and your old favorite, Bella Pateman. What with the strength of this drama and its affinity to dear Bret Harte, it will, I should say, be successful when it comes to your side. Anyhow, I am heartily glad to chronicle this success of the Terrys, for they have had nothing but failures since their first great success, Sweet Nell of Old Drury, as written by Citizen Paul Kester.

As I forewarned you last week, so it came to pass that this metropolis has during these Easter holidays been bombarded with all sorts of new plays. The good Gawain, by tram and train, had rode amain till near insane, so that he might these plays explain. But ignoring for the nonce his innate gift of poesy, he will prosaically proceed.

There have been two farcical comedies—namely, The Electric Man and The Humbugs. The first of these was by the prolific Charles Hannan, the best of whose many dramatic works is the adaptation of A Cigarette Maker's Romance, which he did for Martin Harvey. Inasmuch as C. H.'s piece deals largely with an automaton figure, of course it has much in common with the old Frankenstein plays and burlesques; also with such plays as Niobe, Pygmalion and Galatea, and so forth. There is, however, one element of novelty in this new piece, inasmuch as the intrepid inventor himself (through electric agency) becomes somewhat of an automaton. The piece was played at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith, where it was well received. The chief acting honors were secured by E. Harcourt Beatty and Joan Burnett, the clever little daughter of the clever little Jenny Jo Lee in Bleak House.

Farcical comedy No. 2, The Humbugs, to wit, was a mad mixture—so mad, indeed, that I have ever since been wondering whether I have got my own brains back since seeing it. It was the work of Henry de Halsalle, who described it as "an entirely unoriginal, tragi-comedic, melodramatic, travestic, quasi-pastoral, unhistoric, satiric, non-problematic farce." To this description I really cannot add anything, except that it was played at the Cripplegate Theatre, a few yards from where the late lamented John Milton (of epic fame) was christened, and ditto from the old Fortune Playhouse, which was a thriving concern when Master Will Shakespeare first took to the theatrical profession as a means of livelihood. I may also add, just to give you some further insight into the author's methods, that his dramatis personæ, some of whom had really funny burlesque-Ibsen lines, included the following specimens of Charles Hoyt-like nomenclature: The Earl of Egg and Rum, Sir Hercules Humbug, Madame Gorgon-Zola, and Marcus Aurelius Snoodlebags, who was, I may tell you, intended to be an American citizen, and spoke a very varying dialect to emphasise that fact. Although all the players were amateurs, some of them were very good, especially the Madame Gorgon-Zola and the Snoodlebags persons.

The other new plays were more or less sanguiful melodramas, and included The Beautiful Avenger, at the Theatre Royal, Stratford; The Rogues of the Turf, at the Dalston Theatre; The Bridge of Sighs, at the Grand, Islington, and Her Forbidden Marriage, at the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe. As these melodramas, which caused me to cover many miles, were all moulded upon the old familiar pattern with the meanest villain ever seeking to "possess" both the heroine and her wealth, and with the hero ever falsely accused, and escaping from prison in a garb covered with the broadest of broad arrows, I need not further weary you with detailed descriptions. Enough to say that each of these plays caught on with a no uncertain catch. Likewise, that The Bridge of Sighs, the work of Oswald Brand, contains several pathetic scenes tending to bear out the Thomas Hood-like title. Moreover, that Her Forbidden Marriage went in for increased realism in the shape of an elopement by a real motor car.

The ever welcome Sir Henry Irving duly arrived per SS. Messaba at Tilbury, on Tuesday. Sir Henry was, of course, speedily interviewed by many of us eager journalists—not, of course, all at once. "The Chief" was looking in splendid health, and he forthwith spoke in the most grateful of gratified terms of his cordial welcome everywhere in your hospitable States. Sir Henry tells me that he will start touring in the British provinces at the Tyne Theatre, Newcastle-on-Tyne, next Tuesday week, when he will revive Tennyson's fine drama, Becket. Indeed, he has just sent me word (as I am about to mail this) to say that he will start rehearsing Becket tonight at the recently closed Drury Lane. He will have another British provincial tour in the Autumn, lasting until Christmas. Therefore he will, as I long ago stated, not be able to act in London this year, in spite of sundry newspaper statements this week to the contrary.

There have been several deaths in the theatrical profession during the last few days. W. R. Sutherland, a clever actor who used to deputise for poor Will Terriss at the Adelphi and elsewhere; Michael Levenston, of George Edwardes' touring managers, who was some time on your side of the broad Atlantic, and the wife and new baby of Alfred P. Phillips, a clever comedian, who was lately in America with Charles Warner. Poor little Phillips arrived here a few days ago, just in time to see his dear ones die.

Beerbohm Tree, who duly made his reappearance at His Majesty's in The Darling of the Gods on Monday, has just been "commanded" to play before the King in Dublin at the end of the month. R. G. Knowles, who was to have reappeared at the Tivoli on Monday, was too ill to come. He turned up last night, however. Citizeness May Yohe, who since her recent arrival at the Carlton Hotel has been extensively interviewed, will start in the variety or vaudeville business at the Brighton Hippodrome on Monday.

There has been a fresh outbreak of the sketch agitation this week, and "mass" meetings of sketch artists have been held. For more on this theme see "Renovoc." In the meantime the O. P. Club will hold a debate on this theme tomorrow.

Lewis Waller, finding that A Marriage of Convenience is not doing a roaring trade at the Imperial, will next Saturday put on Miss Elisabeth's Prisoner, by Lyall Sevete and Robert Neilson Stephens.

A Time to Love, a new comedy written by Edward Rose (the English E. R.), has just been selected by Harrison and Maude to follow Henry Arthur Jones' Joseph Entangled at the Haymarket. It is hoped that the long ill Winifred Emery (Mrs. Cyril Maude) will be able to appear in this.

Murray Carson has just arranged to produce an English-made version of The Pit (by poor Frank Norris) at the Apollo. One of the new adapters is that not now seen actress, Elliott Page. The new version has just been named The Wheat King. Ronald Macdonald's Sword of the King will be produced at Wyndham's tonight.

PARIS.

La Montansier a Qualified Success—Sardou's Golden Wedding—Bernhardt's Vitality.

(Special Correspondence of The Mirror.)

PARIS, April 10.

Well! After all the fuss and feathers La Montansier did not set Paris exactly ablaze. Not that it is not a worthy production, finely acted, but that, on account of its advance notices, in and out of the courts, Parisians were led to expect too much, and it would have had to be a miracle of a play to have met expectations. Some of the critics said that it triumphed over all obstacles on account of its inherent qualities and the superb acting of Rejane and Coquelin, while others damn it with faint praise.

The Gaité was packed on the premiers, and the audience seemed to like the piece immensely. I have told you its story. I think it will have a long run, and as it is to be seen in your half of the world, you may form your own opinion of it next season. It is a Madame Cyrano de Bergerac sort of a play, full of anachronisms, and not too original. The plot is rather primitive, and it might be pleasanter here and there—if not everywhere. Our sympathies can hardly be commanded by a heroine who has had as many lovers as she has fingers and toes. But, perhaps, a résumé of the story will be better:

La Montansier's real name is Marguerite Brunet. She invites nearly a dozen of her lovers to her aunt's house, to tell them that she can no longer be theirs, for she has met her affinity in the only man whom she can ever—ever—you know—love, an actor named Neufville. There is a supper, and La Montansier at supper separates several thousand francs from her former lovers with which to lease or build a theatre. In act two we see the theatre—during the Revolution—and Robespierre and other Revolutionists are making it warm for La Montansier for her leaning toward the aristocrats, one of whom, Philippe, is a member of her company. St. Just tells La Montansier that if she would save Philippe's head she had better become his mistress. She scorns to part with what is left of her virtue, but offers her entire company to fight the enemies of France.

In acts three and four we see the battle of Jernappes. Philippe endeavors to desert, is wounded, and La Montansier keeps the Austrian army from capturing him. Neufville is tired of La Montansier's love for Philippe, and tells her that they must part; but they don't, but come together, kiss and make up.

Coquelin's part is a small one: that of an old lover of La Montansier. Rejane is fine. It is a splendid production.

Bernhardt is to produce Varennes next week, or the week after. It is a historical play in the time of the French Revolution. The Sorceress is nearing its one hundredth and fiftieth performance.

Bernhardt is sixty years old, but who in Paris can realise it? She works like an ambitious youth of twenty-five eighteen hours a day. Sydney Smith said that Daniel Webster was a steam engine in trousers. I say that Bernhardt is a comet in petticoats. Besides appearing every night in Sardou's La Sociere, she has rehearsed and given two performances of Rostand's La Samaritaine, and is rehearsing Henry Lavedan's new play, Varennes, in which she is to play Marie Antoinette, looking after the costumes, scenery and the props. Then she rises every morning promptly at 7 o'clock and goes to the theatre, and returns home at 2 o'clock the next morning. Think of that for a young woman of sixty! There is one thing that keeps her going, and that is a magnificent appetite. Her digestion is that of a first-class prize fighter, and she knows no ache, except the heartache that comes to all public women (and men) who see old age pressing payment. She likes eggs beaten in beer when she has no time for an elaborate meal. She is the best study in Paris, I think, getting her part on the wing from the theatre to her home, in her automobile or carriage. She says she can commit the longest part in six readings. She owns eleven dogs, nearly as many servants (from all parts of the world), a forest of parrots, a wilderness of monkeys, and Paris. "Age cannot stale nor custom wither her infinite variety" any more than they could Cleopatra's.

The beautiful Liane de Pougy is back from Portugal, in selections from Offenbach's operettas, in lots of jewelry and not much raiment, at the Moulin Rouge. Her photo, with one of the chosen by her side, is in the shop windows.

Fregoli, the impersonator of many characters, is to have a rival in a Parisian Englishwoman, Elise de Vere, who is to be in Marigny's show with a one-act play in which she is to impersonate a baker's dozen characters.

At the Théâtre Victor Hugo, Grillet's Les Pantins has made a hit, with young Armand Bour as the hero.

Small, close-fitting bonnets on low crowns of hair are now the rule in our theatres. Not even the vulgar dare wear high hats and topknots. The press brought about the revolution in head dress, and it should receive the thanks due to a great reformer. It is now possible to see every part of the stage, no matter how many ladies are between you and it, in front of you. Toques of jet, with slender aigrettes, are even more popular than the close-fitting bonnets, and the effect is beautiful. I never before realized how ugly a picture high topknots and hats with Texas and Quaker brims made on a first-night. The contrast is as startling as refreshing. Women are queerer than men: in private, half-divine; in public, little swine, in selfishness, greed and inconsiderateness for the rights of others—of the rights of women as well as men. They are as hard to drive, even along the right road, as Spanish mules; but they can be coaxed and gently led with an apple, if they are satisfied that they are free agents. Americans are much to blame for the selfishness of women in public the world over, for wherever an American travels he makes of women queens and princesses. However, while I note the public selfishness of women, I like them better than men.

Sardou and the stage celebrated their golden wedding April 1. He has written seventy plays in his fifty years of work for the theatre. He was born Sept. 7, 1831. He knew for years the pawnshop, the garret, the roofless bed, the crust of bread. In 1854 he got his first piece on at the Odeon. It was The Student's Tavern—and a dire failure. He was then twenty-three, and the failure made him ill. But he recovered, persevered and won, as all the world knows, fame and fortune.

La Baillonnée, a melodrama, by Pierre Decourcelles, was produced a week ago at the Ambigu. It is an artistic success, thanks to its high-class work and the acting of such players as Mlle. Mégard, Madame Chetrel, Dieudonne, Villa-Brule, and Monteaux.

At the Vaudeville, ten days ago, L'Embroufee, a three-act comedy by Abel Hermant, was produced. Here is a sketch of it:

Belgrand is a Parisian journalist. He falls in love with the wife of a playwright in a German town, flees with her to Paris, where they live on nothing a day. Belgrand lives by his "touches." He borrows from any one. He borrows from Lambercier, a rich Parisian, and then gets Lambercier into his toils, and blackmails him. Lambercier comes down handsomely, and Belgrand is virtuous and happy. Taride, as Belgrand the swindler, was a sort of Alfred Jingle, and won the sympathy of a cynical Parisian audience. Duboc, as the friend, and Herand as the dupe, were excellent. Suzanne Despres and Madames Regnier and Harlay were ditto.

At the People's Theatre, in which a first-class stock company is installed, L'Affaire Grisel, a three-act play by Lucien Besnard, is drawing crowded houses. It treats of life in a provincial town. It lays no claim to literary excellence, nor does its author lay claim to any. Action he does claim and logical sequence. He wins the interest of his audience without resorting ever to psychology.

The story is that of Larou, a merchant of the town of Saint-Savernin. He and his charming wife are entertaining at their house the influential people of the town. The occasion is that of the endowment by Larou of a home for aged workingmen unable longer to work. A case of infanticide is heard of. Who is the guilty man? Grisel, a poor schoolmaster, is the man, all think, when in reality the man is Larou. His victim was the village postmistress, and the death of the infant was brought about by the village doctor. Then Larou is suspected, the people are divided in opinion, the Socialists defend Grisel, the high-class people stand by Larou. There is the devil to pay. Grisel is tried, found guilty, and sentenced to the galleys. Larou's son Raoul discovers that his father is the guilty man, and is about to expose him. Larou is about to publicly admit his guilt, like the clergyman in The Scarlet Letter (which, of course, inspired the play), when he is told that Grisel has been acquitted, and Larou begs his son to hasten to Grisel with a handful of money. The son treats his father with contempt, and Larou shoots himself.

It is well acted, and wins the "lower classes," who throng the theatre at every performance and pay their tribute of tears.

ACTORS' CHURCH ALLIANCE NEWS.

National (and Local) Headquarters, Manhattan Theatre Building, Broadway and Thirty-third Street.

The Williamsport, Pa., meeting held by the General Secretary on April 11, in Christ Church Parish House, resulted in the formation of a Chapter being organised in that city, with the following officers in charge: President, Rev. Edward H. Eckel; First Vice-President, Rev. Father Costello; Second Vice-President, L. J. Flak, Manager of Lycoming Opera House; Secretary-Treasurer, Lyman A. Pray, Manager of the Valinmont Theatre. On the Local Council the following were elected: Rev. Dr. George C. Foley, Mrs. A. D. Crocker, R. L. Coerr, Mrs. I. E. A. Carson and Lucy D. Scott. Thirty persons became charter members, and great interest was manifested.

Last Sunday Mr. Bentley preached in St. Luke's Church, Altoona, Pa., to crowded congregations at both services. The services were conducted by the Rev. Robert F. Gibson, and several members of the Carner stock company were in the congregation. A meeting was held to enroll new members at the close of the evening service.

Next Sunday, April 24, Mr. Bentley will be in Memphis, Tenn., and preach at the Cathedral and at the Church of the Good Shepherd. William Stuart, of the Grand Opera House, will make an address at the evening service, and all are cordially invited.

Frederick Warde, Honorary Vice-President of the Alliance, delivered a fine address on the Alliance and the Relation Between the Church and the Stage at a special service held in St. John's Episcopal Church, St. Louis, Mo., Sunday, April 10, and the Rev. Crosier G. Adams, rector, conducted the service. The music was rendered by a quartette from the Bostonians, consisting of Howard Chambers, Douglass Ruthven, Campbell Donald and Harry Dale. The church was crowded to the doors, and both the address and the music were greatly enjoyed, and at the close of the service the congregation was enthusiastic in its congratulations. Among other things Mr. Warde said, in defense of the stage:

"We want recognition of the integrity of our motives and the sincerity of our actions. There are quacks in all professions, but these cannot lower the standards. If frivolous or immoral plays are presented, it is because the people demand them. When an exalted and inspiring play is presented, it is the duty of the clergy to teach the people to attend. The preacher should see the play before he abuses the stage. We not only preach our sermons, but we act them. The Church, the School and the Theatre are the great factors in mental development, and they should work together. Render unto the church the things that belong thereto, and to the stage its just deserts."

The Chicago Chapter of the Alliance is forging ahead steadily under the management of its officers, among whom the Rev. William White Wilson and Grace Griswold are most active. The Chicago University has become interested in the work, and on May 6 will give a French play entitled Jeanne D'Arc for the benefit of the Chapter. On May 17, at the Studebaker Theatre, a big benefit will be given for the purpose of securing permanent quarters. There is no actors' club of any kind in Chicago, and the Alliance Chapter will remedy this by furnishing a pleasant resort, as well as an educational centre, for its members and traveling thespians. The Chapter will hold a reception in the Masonic Temple April 26, to which all are invited.

Harry Leighton lectured on the Alliance before the Women's Episcopal Institute, at Winchester, Va., and great interest was manifested.

The New York Chapter of the Alliance held its forty-sixth regular service last Sunday evening, April 17, at the Church of the Holy Apostles, Episcopal. The rector, Rev. Robert L. Paddock, preached the sermon, taking for his subject, "What Would Jesus Christ Have Us Do?" The service was well attended.

Sunday, April 24, being the annual Alliance Sunday, the following chaplains will preach on The Stage and the Alliance at their respective churches:

New York City, Rev. Thomas Henry Sill, St. Chrysostom's, Episcopal, at 10 A.M.; Hartford, Conn., Rev. James Goodwin, Christ Church, Episcopal, 10.45 A.M.; Warren, Pa., Rev. A. R. Taylor, Trinity Memorial Church, Episcopal; Williamstown, Pa., Rev. Martin Damer, Christ Church, Episcopal; Lima, Ohio, Rev. G. F. Gladding Hoyt, Christ Church, Episcopal, 10.30 A.M.; Dundee, Ill., Rev. Frank E. Brant, St. James Episcopal Church, 7.45 P.M.; Lincoln, Ill., Rev. Wm. N. Wyckoff, Trinity Church, Episcopal; Minneapolis, Minn., Rev. G. L. Morrill, Masonic Temple, Baptist.

Owing to the April reception being held at the Parish House of the Church of the Holy Apostles, Ninth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street, there will be no tea poured at the Headquarters next Thursday afternoon, April 21.

Mrs. Harry Leighton was hostess last Thursday afternoon and among those present were: Charles T. Catlin, Edythe Totten, Mrs. Hudson Liston, Maude B. Sinclair, Mrs. Jennie Drew, Austina Mason, Catherine C. Lawrence, Mrs. Madge McIntyre, Mrs. Sara M. Corey, Rev. F. J. Clay Moran, Annette L. Place, and many others.

PROFESSIONAL DOINGS.

A large number of clergymen visited the Knickerbocker Theatre last Thursday afternoon to see a special performance of The Shepherd King. Nearly every denomination in the city was represented. Among those present were the Rev. Drs. Joseph Silverman, Funk, George R. Baker, F. K. Hawxhurst, Reuben W. Howes, and the Rev. George R. Van De Water. After the second act Wright Lorrimer, the star, was called before the curtain. He said that he stood for clean plays, and that his next production would be upon even a more pretentious scale than The Shepherd King.

Frank C. Maeder, a St. Louis stockholder in the Buffalo Bill Wild West Show, filed a bill in the Court of Chancery at Trenton last Thursday, asking for the appointment of a receiver for the concern. He claims that the aggregation has been earning large dividends, which have been withheld from him for the purpose of forcing him out of the corporation. By the terms of the petition all the directors of the corporation are to be forced to testify as to the financial status of the concern, Maeder alleging that the company's accumulated profits are $400,000.

Last Thursday night Alphonse and Gabriel Chanteau, the twin-brother artists from Paris, visited the Garden Theatre to see The Secret of Polichinelle. Between the acts the artists visited Mr. Thompson in his dressing-room and obtained his consent to sit for a portrait which the Messrs. Chanteau intend presenting to M. Huguenot on their return to Paris next Summer.

Otis Skinner last Thursday completed arrangements with Jean Richepin to produce in this country The Harvesters. The production will be at Milwaukee, May 5. The play was done by H. Beerbohm Tree in London under the title of Ragged Robbin.

Fred Stone, the Scarecrow of The Wizard of Oz, is about to have his long expressed desire, of playing in a downtown theatre, fulfilled, for The Wizard of Oz will move to the New York Theatre Monday, May 2, where it may run all Summer.

Edna Bronson, who has been appearing in Alice Nielsen's role in The Fortune Teller, has made such a hit that the Messrs. Aborn have contracted for her services for the next five years.

Pauline Fielding has left Joseph Murphy to join the Yon Yonson company, in which she will play the soubrette role.

Jess M. Frysinger closed as business-manager of the Aubrey (Western) Stock company in Trenton, N. J., April 16, and two days later assumed the management of the Wilmington, Del., State League Baseball Club. Mr. Frysinger invites all professionals to see his games when ever they are in town as his guests.

Walter H. Cluxton has been engaged by John B. Shoeffel to play the leads with Nance O'Neil for the rest of this season. Mr. Cluxton was a member of the Beerbohm Tree company for some time, and leading man with Edward Terry last Autumn.

Sidney Ayres is to head a company of his own next season in a drama of the plains, written for him by J. M. Feigl.

Ida Hamilton and C. C. Sterrett, of London, announce their approaching marriage, which will take place in May. The engagement has existed for some time.

Maud Blair, leading lady with The Burglar company, is to be featured in a new play next season, it is said.

Charles Wyndham, with Mary Moore and his London company, will appear in New York in November for a three months' season at the New Lyceum Theatre. He will open on November 14 with twelve performances of David Garrick, which will be followed by Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace, and after that will appear in one new play that he is to produce in London in May and in another which Mr. H. H. Davis is writing. He will not play outside New York. It is fourteen years since Mr. Wyndham played here, at Wallack's.

The Wheat King, an adaptation of Frank Norris' The Pit, by Miss Elliott Page and Mrs. Ashton Jonson, was produced at the Apollo Theatre, London, last Saturday night. The play was well received. William A. Brady has the exclusive English rights to The Pit.

Herr Conried made a little speech to his stage hands last Saturday, in which he explained that it has cost him more than $1,000 for extra hands because the men did not come regularly to their duties. They promised to attend to business hereafter.

Just as the curtain rose on the second act at the Metropolis Theatre, Third Avenue and 143d Street, last Saturday afternoon, the cry of "Fire!" was heard just outside the theatre. Some of the audience arose and made a dash for the door. The twenty-two exits were immediately thrown open, and a number of people passed out to find a heap of rubbish burning in the alley back of the theatre. Those who had fled returned to their seats looking pretty cheap.

Mrs. W. V. Ranous has been very ill in Scranton, Pa., but hopes to be out soon. Her daughter, little Mary Ranous, who played Willie in Her Only Sin, has also been very ill, but is now on the high road to health.

Carlotta Gilman has been engaged for the Spring and Summer season of the Columbian Opera company as prima donna.

Miriam Lawrence has just closed with Jefferson De Angelis in The Toreador, having joined him for a few weeks previous to the close of his season.

The benefit to be given by Heinrich Conried for the Vassar College endowment fund will take place at the Irving Place Theatre on the afternoon of Thursday, April 28. Alt Heidelberg will be the play.

The Frank L. Perley Opera company in A Venetian Romance, a comedy-opera, book by Cornelia Osgood Tyler, music by Frederick Colt Wight, will be the attraction at the Knickerbocker Theatre, starting Monday, May 2.

Clara Knott has entirely recovered from her recent illness, and will be a member of the Proctor stock company in Albany this Summer.

W. A. Whitecar has arranged to appear next season in The Mummy and the Humming-Bird. Willard Hutchinson will be a member of the Sothern-Marlowe company next season

San Jose Herald, March 21.—A good house welcomed that delightful actor, Daniel Sully, in The Chief Justice. It is the best work that artist has yet done. The play is a powerful one and well cast.

Louisa Mackintosh, at liberty, 7 East 31st St.

VOL. I. NEW YORK, APRIL 23, 1904. No. 6

"NEWS THAT IS NEWS."

Here are the real Summer song hits. Watch them!

"Good-bye, My Lady Love,"
"For Sale, A Baby,"
"You Never Spoke to Me Like that Before,"
"The Girl of My Dreams,"
"Bimbo,"
"Sunday Morning When the Church Bells Ring,"
"Keep Away from Rosie,"
"When the Breezey Eezeys Blow,"
"In a World Just Made for Two,"
"Tell Me You Love Me, Barney,"
"The Sweetest Flower that Grows in Tennessee."

All reports to the contrary, Weber & Fields are still together and always will be; and Harris will publish all their song hits the coming season. Keep your eye on the hits.

Carlton & Terre are singing "The Sweetest Flower that Grows in Tennessee" over the Castle Circuit.

Albert Taylor—"Always in the Way"—with Deserted at the Altar Co.

Phyllis Allen—"The Girl of My Dreams."

Arthur Walker (the boy soprano)—"You Never Spoke to Me Like that Before" over the C. H. Peenham Circuit.

Remerelda Sisters—"Good-bye, My Lady Love."

Eddie Leonard will feature at the American Theatre, with Haverly Minstrels, "The Man Up in the Moon," assisted by the entire Haverly famous chorus.

Al Dexter, assisted by John L. Dixie, is taking six to eight encores with the "knock-out" hit: "Good-bye, My Lady Love."

You can always tell when a song is going to be a big hit, when the publishers commence to resurrect a lot of old dead music and try to find a similarity in tunes, and that is why "Good-bye, My Lady Love," is going to be the biggest hit in America, and that is also why Evans & Shields' original song, "Sunday Morning When the Church Bells Ring" is also going to be a hit, as imitations are already appearing on the market. A good Sign.

Professionals, send in your names if you are singing the Harris songs, and same will be mentioned in the "Herald."

DOWN IN MUSIC ROW.

Manager James Decker, of Dockstader's Minstrels, wired Messrs. Hawley and Solman lately that "Starry Night for a Ramble," the new waltz song, was the hit of his first-part and the biggest Summer song hit he has ever known, taking over a dozen encores. The programmes of Dockstader's Minstrels still show the following songs featured: "You're as Welcome as the Flowers in May," "Courage," "He May Get Over It, but He'll Never Look the Same," "Where the Sunset Turns the Ocean's Blue to Gold," "Minatonka Jane," and a half dozen other Stern hits.

Harry Tally, who is a member of the Empire City Four, says that the records he made for the Columbia Phonograph Company of "Mary Ann," "Somebody's Waiting for Me," and "She's the Pride and the Pet of the Lane" are the best that he has ever turned out.

Leo Feist is well represented in The Bowery After Dark company. Mrs. Terry McGovern is featuring "Mary Ann" and "She's the Pride and the Pet of the Lane."

A chance visit to one of the Proctor houses recently gave the opportunity of hearing Madge Fox score a hit with "Funny, Funny Feeling Round My Heart," the original "feeling" song by Breen and Geary, published by the Broadway Music Company and purchased out of that catalogue by Joseph W. Stern and Company. Among other artists featuring this song are Susie Forrester, Garrity Sisters, Colby Family, Elizabeth Murray, and Mudge and Morton.

Kitty Bingham is singing "While the Band Was Playing Dixie" to repeated encores.

Hi Henry's Minstrels are singing "Ida, Sweet as Apple Cider," "Save It for Me," and H. W. Petrie's bass song, "The Song the Anvil Sings."

Ed Summerby, with Culhane, Chase and Weston's Minstrels, sings "When the Wind Sighs in the West" and "Clean Hands and Tainted Gold."

"Kamara" is the newest song by Mabel McKinley, which she is singing with success. It is a Japanese love song of three verses, and deals in dainty style with the love affairs of a Japanese maid.

Eugene Shakespeare, with the Hello, Bill company, is singing a ballad entitled "Only You and I, Love." Eugene is not a descendant of William.

John J. Nestor, "the little man with the big voice," sang "Your Dad Gave His Life for His Country" and "The Man with the Ladder and the Hose" at the opening game between New York and Boston before an audience of 20,000 people. Shannon's Band was in attendance, and several encores were recorded. Both songs are by T. Mayo Geary. New York won.

Many publishers are complaining of the thoughtless professional singers who write for copies and orchestrations without inclosing postage. Every singer should be thoughful enough to inclose necessary stamps to cover postage if the kind-hearted publisher is good enough to furnish the songs free. The majority of publishers ignore requests minus postage, while other publishers encourage the habit.

Henry and Hoon, song illustrators, are featuring T. Mayo Geary's songs, "The Man with the Ladder and the Hose" and "Your Dad Gave His Life for His Country." In conjunction with the regular slides moving pictures are used which give a realistic view of our fire laddies' work. This act is meeting with success.

The following singers are winning applause with "Good-bye, My Lady Love," "Always in the Way," "For Sale—A Baby," "The Sweetest Flower that Grows," "Tell Me You Love Me, Barney," and "You Never Spoke Like that Before," all published by Charles K. Harris, the genial editor of the "Harris Herald": Lew Hawkins, Cluette Jenece, Vallie Egar, Charles Young, Hayman and Franklin, Marty Woodworth, Parker Sisters, Elmer Jerome, Lyonette Sisters, Wilbur Held, Belle Belmon, J. Cavanaugh, Tilly Whitney, Will G. Williams, Frank Coomba, of Harverly's Minstrels; James Roberti, Hattie Dixie, Charles Knehle, of the Knehle Midgets; Lizzie B. Raymond, Catherine Miley, J. Morton Harris, Dell A. Palmer, Wilson Brothers, Grace Lennon, John Guyse, Le Roy and Hazleton, Lesley Lile, Nellie Broore, Rollind Swallow, Joseph Welch, Harry Welch, George Davis, of A Runaway Girl company; Madelaine Malherbe, J. Kavanaugh, and Sherwood and Fox.

The American Advance Music Company will occupy a handsome suite of offices in The Circle, the new Hearst building at Fifty-ninth Street and Eighth Avenue, May 1. Professional parlors will be retained at the present quarters, Thirty-seventh Street and Broadway, for the accommodation of the busy Broadway singers.

The Theodore Morse Trio open at Keith's New York house Monday, April 18, and will later tour the Keith circuit. They are singing their latest compositions, "I've Got a Feeling for You," "Blue Bell," "The 17th of March," and "Come Down from the Big Fig Tree."

"The Song Our Boys Sang, Our American Sailor Boys," published by the Peerless Publishing Company, is being sung extensively. Joe Maxwell, Charles B. Lawlor, J. Woodall Oliver, and J. Aldrich Libbey are making successes with it.

Eddie Reeves, clog dancer, opens on the Keith circuit April 25, and will introduce Dowling and Sutton's Irish song, "Emerald, My Irish Jewel."

Williams and Walker write from abroad that they are compelled to sing seventeen verses in all, including extra verses of "My Castle on the Nile" and "Save It for Me."

Mitchell and Marron, the two Minstrel Boys, are making a special feature of "Somebody's Waiting for Me."

Flossie Allen, Ruth Nelta, and Brooke Eltrym, the latter at Proctor's Fifth Avenue this week, are featuring Theodore Morse's march song "Blue Bell," and "Beanay," a new song by Raymond Browne, Jack Drislane, and Theodore Morse.

Anita Marik is featuring "My Own Sweet Southern Honey," published by the Peerless Publishing Company.

The Washingtons and a score of others are singing "Down on the Amazon." Billy Johnson's latest song. All report that this number is a success everywhere.

W. Irving Salter's Mandolin Orchestra, one of the features at Kernan's New Maryland Theatre, Baltimore, is playing "Polly Prim." This march has been set to words and was recently introduced in the theatre with success.

Ben Bernard, who is leading comedian with the Signal Lights of Port Arthur company, is featuring "Let Me In, Dat's All."

Bayonne Whipple, who is playing the leading part in The Great Train Robbery company, is featuring "Somebody's Waiting for Me."

Miss Smart, with Gus Hill's Smart Set company, is receiving many encores nightly singing "I've Got a Feeling for You."

"The Song Our Boys Sang, Our American Sailor Boys," sung at the Lyra Council, National Union, April 14, and National Actors' Protective Union of New York at Grand Central Palace April 16, by J. Aldrich Libbey, was received with applause. This new song, published by the Peerless Publishing Company, is received with ovations everywhere.

The Wallace Trio, at Pabst's, Fifty-ninth Street, are featuring many numbers of the Dowling-Sutton catalogue, especially "Down on the Amazon," "By the Light of the Moon," "Chipeta," "Emerald," and "When I Was a Barefoot Boy," Brennen and Story's ballad.

Idylla Vyner, with Weber's Dainty Duchess company, has recently added "I Ain't Got No Time" and "My Little Zu-oo-oo-lu" to her repertoire.

Ed J. Morris, of Morris and Kearney, with Watson's Oriental Burlesquers, is singing "Mary Ann," in which he is supported by the entire company. As many as six encores have been recorded.

A new two-step by Al. Doyle is soon to be published by the Dowling-Sutton Publishing Company.

The Sisters Beardsley, who are playing the leading vaudeville houses in the West, write that they are still making a hit with "My Little Zu-oo-oo-lu," which they use as a duet.

Eddie Leslie writes from the West that "Emerald" is a "scream." He intends to feature it on his Australian tour.

Nathan Bivin's "Miss Hannah Lee" is being sung by Eddie Leonard, and he is more than pleased with its success. It is a song that Leonard can handle with telling effect.

"Let Me In, Dat's All" is the pleading title of a new rough coon song by Felix F. Feist and Ted S. Barron, writers of "If Time Was Money I'd Be a Millionaire," "In Sunny Africa," and "I Ain't Got No Time."

The Messenger Boys' Trio have a hit in "By the Light of the Moon" and are receiving big encores at each performance.

MATTERS OF FACT.

James A. Bliss, who plays Obadiah Strout in Quincy Adams Sawyer, has not yet signed for next season, although he has received several offers.

Mrs. James Casey (Maggie Le Clair) is recovering rapidly from the effects of her recent accident, and would be pleased to meet her friends at 590 East 143d Street, New York.

John G. and Allee McDowell will close a successful forty weeks' engagement April 30 with Warner and Altaman's big scenic production, A Montana Outlaw.

May Howard was granted an absolute divorce from her husband, Harry Morris, on March 31, at Chicago, by Judge Dunne.

Matt Nasher is back in town, after a successful tour of thirty weeks on the Pacific Coast with Sullivan, Harris and Wood's Fatal Wedding company. Mr. Nasher is hard at work on his next season's venture, the Thurber-Nasher company, which will present Florence Hamilton and one of the strongest companies she has ever been surrounded with. The line of plays secured for Miss Hamilton is far above those usually presented by popular price attractions. A scenic production of Jim Bludso will be given also Mrs. Jack and The Deserted Bride. These plays have been secured for the exclusive use of the Thurber-Nasher company in territory to be played by them.

Gus Hill's Happy Hooligan company (Al. Dolson, manager) has played Ashland, Wis., twice within three weeks, and on April 20 will play a third return date, matinee and night. This will make the fifth performance in one month, and the new sign, F. S. S., has appeared at every performance so far.

The fourth week of Checkers' stay in Philadelphia was played at the Garrick Theatre. The other three weeks were played at the Walnut. Every week proved profitable; but the last, at the Garrick, even though it was Holy Week, proved the most profitable of all, the receipts on Good Friday night (Philadelphia's worst play night in the year being $737.

The Man Who Dared is offered on royalty to a responsible manager, as Howard Hall will be seen in a new vehicle next season. Address Blaney's Attractions, Broadway Theatre Building.

"G. L." care of this office, wants a manager with capital to purchase an interest in an attraction headed by a well known star the coming season.

John D. O'Hara, of the Players' Stock company, and Margaret Maclyn invite offers for a Summer engagement and next season.

Kenton, O., has a population of 8,000 and draws from several nearby cities. Manager Henry Dickson, of Dickson's Grand, that city, plays but two attractions a week and each attraction only for one night. He does not play Saturday night and has good open time.

The coupon theatre tickets gotten up by the Ackerman-Quigley Litho Company, of Kansas City, are in use in many theatres.

The Reynolds' New Opera House, now building at Union City, Tenn., will be ready for opening Sept. 15, and a high-class opening attraction is wanted by Manager J. C. Reynolds.

Murray and Mackey, presenting J. M. Donavin, will commence their Summer season at Terrapin Park, Parkersburg, W. Va., May 30. Their regular season will commence Aug. 29.

Charles T. Taylor, who is to manage a new Summer park at Little Rock, Ark., wants a small opera company for the last week in May and the first week in June, on a guarantee.

Al. W. Martin reports that his two Uncle Tom companies are playing to large business everywhere.

"Star," care of this office, wants a play with a strong star part the coming year.

Julia Blanc closed with At the Old Cross Roads company recently and will consider offers for productions or musical comedy. She may be addressed in care of this office.

The new theatre at Cleveland, O., just completed, is offered for sale or to lease. The house has a seating capacity of 1,150 and no gallery. Interested parties should address P. O. Box 113, Cleveland, O.

Perce R. Benton, dramatist, has sold his play, The Price of Silence, to E. H. Macoy and J. D. Barton, and leased My Maryland and Dora Thorne to Leavitte Hart and Company for next season. Mr. Benton has just finished a new play of Russian life, entitled In Cruel Russia, and a one-act playlet called For Old Love's Sake, which is now being played successfully by Frederick M. Tillish and Louise Mitchell.

P. P. Craft denies the recently published statement that he is to go to Australia ahead of Happy Hooligan to assist the agent of that attraction. He is still the manager of Conroy and Mack's Comedians, and for the Summer season will be interested in the street carnival business.

On April 14 Leroy J. French began at Wilmington, Del., his Spring tour of the new edition of Mugg's Landing with a company of twenty-five people, including Leroy J. French, owner and manager; Arthur La Marr, business-manager; J. E. McConnell, press representative; Harry Wright, stage-manager; George Lewis, musical director; John Prowler, stage carpenter; Peter Evans, electrician; S. P. Jackson, master of properties; Iola Pomroy, Harry Wright, Marie Heger, Amelia Mayborn, Irving Walton, Louis J. Fuller, Charles N. Greene, Ben Roth, Jack P. Smith, Marguerite Hilton, Antoinette Lelano, Essie Graham, Mona Baldwin, Lillian Madison, Helen Love, Theresa Baldwin, and Elizabeth Dumphy. Miss Pomroy is featured. The musical interpolations are under the personal direction of Cole and Johnson and Harry Von Tilzer.

Yankton, S. D., will hold a street fair and carnival June 21-25. The National Carnival and Amusement company has been engaged.

THE ELKS.

The Elks of Lancaster, O., held their annual election in their newly purchased Columbine Building, and the following officers were elected: L. G. Silbaugh, Exalted Ruler; Charles Carr, Leading Knight; John Gardner, Lecturing Knight; Walter Barker, Trustee; T. J. McAnespie, Tiler; Frank Matt, Secretary; E. H. Bininger, Treasurer; Van A. Snyder, Grand Lodge Representative. The work of remodeling the new social rooms in the new Elks' Building is well under way.

The Elks at Minneapolis have completed arrangements for the presentation of A Night in Bohemia at the Lyceum Theatre April 18, 19 and 20. There will be over one hundred ladies and gentlemen in the cast.

On his recent visit to Des Moines, Al. G. Field was accorded a hearty reception by the local Elks and tendered a banquet at the close of the performance. At the close of his monologue Mr. Field was presented with an immense bouquet of American Beauties by admiring friends.

Grand Exalted Ruler Joseph T. Fanning was royally entertained by the Elks of St. Paul and Minneapolis on his recent visit to the Twin Cities.

The Annapolis Lodge, 622, B. P. O. E., elected the following officers to serve for the ensuing year: Exalted Ruler, John R. Taylor; Esteemed Leading Knight, Samuel Davis; Esteemed Loyal Knight, John R. Strange; Lecturing Knight, Dr. J. J. Murphy; Tiler, W. B. Johnson; Inner Guard, F. R. Ridout; Secretary, Dr. Gordon Claude. Past Exalted Ruler Charles Himelheber was elected to represent the Annapolis Lodge at the coming convention of Elks in Cincinnati. Past Exalted Ruler C. A. Zimmerman was selected as his alternate.

Lodge 98, of Des Moines, Ia., has elected: Exalted Ruler, John McDonald; Esteemed Leading Knight, Fred Knott; Esteemed Loyal Knight, William Hannan; Esteemed Lecturing Knight, George Cooper; Secretary, Lewis Burnett; Treasurer, W. ACTING NOT MANUAL LABOR.

AN Ohio judge has decided that acting is not manual labor, although a bit of illustrated testimony in his court in the case upon which his decision was based seems to have been laborious. It may be said that a judge in the court below on witnessing the same illustration decided that the acting in question was manual labor, but decisions below do not count after their reversal upon appeal.

The case in question was peculiar. It seems that a man in Cleveland engaged in a commercial pursuit decided to "take a flyer" in theatricals. To most persons unused to the hazards of the drama such a venture is hedged with many of the uncertainties as to success that confront the lamb in Wall street. This Cleveland venturer was a bookkeeper, and he devoted a part of his savings to taking out a German dramatic company, intended to play small towns, in the hope of improving his finances. The venture was a failure, and the principal actor, upon the return to Cleveland, brought a suit for attachment against the salary of the amateur manager earned by the latter as a bookkeeper, the actor proceeding under a law that protects the laborer, undoubtedly on the theory that he is worthy of his hire.

The judge in the original court, before whom the actor is said to have given "a most realistic exhibition," decided that acting was manual labor, and allowed judgment against the defendant. The case was carried to the Court of Common Pleas, before Judge DISSETTE, before whom the plaintiff actor enacted the more strenuous episodes of his part, that of the father in Sudermann's Heimath, known in English as Magda. "Again," says a chronicler of the case, "he became a palsied old man and shook and quivered with assumed old age. Great drops of sweat stood out on his forehead. His acting was as near labor as anything the court had seen. 'It is very hard,' said the actor, when he had concluded. 'In the part I have a strenuous daughter, and it is hard acting. Ach, yes! it is more than that—it is hard labor.'"

Here, indeed, was a crucial test for an actor, the audience being the court, which should show appreciation of his work by awarding judgment in his favor, or condemn it as something not recognized as actual labor by finding for the delinquent manager, who thus would escape his debt. But a court is by no means sympathetic, and the law has no bowels of compassion. It is the letter of the statute that must be observed by the judge, and it was the letter of the law and the strictest construction of the phrase "manual labor" that here prevailed. Judge DISSETTE decided that the law in question was meant to protect manual labor, "but involved essentially muscular effort." The judge admitted that the acting of the plaintiff "was as near labor as acting could be"—which, by the way, the actor intended it should be, no doubt—but that, in his opinion, acting "is not work or labor in the meaning of the law," and therefore he reversed the judge below. It may be that there are judges who might hold differently in some cases of acting, but sufficient unto the day is the legal decision thereof.

ACTIVITY OF AMATEURS.

FROM the amateur theatrical events chronicled by THE MIRROR during the season, it would seem that the number of persons cultivating the drama unprofessionally has become greater than ever.

For instance, in THE MIRROR of April 9 no less than twenty-five amateur events were recorded. These took place in various States, and being but the more notable of perhaps twice as many more, simply serve to suggest a wonderful activity on the part of those—most of them young persons—whose modest efforts in the drama make indirectly for the benefit of the regular theatre, which probably in the growing generation will find a vast body of lovers of the stage.

THE MIRROR several times has noted the growing attention paid to the drama in colleges and other institutions of learning. It is significant of this attention that of the twenty-five amateur events recorded for a single week in this journal ten took place in or under the auspices of colleges and academies. The amateurs of these institutions played in The School for Scandal, The Merchant of Venice, King Lear, As You Like It and other classics, as well as in modern drama and farce. Of the other events several were by dramatic clubs under the auspices of fraternal orders and churches, showing that there is hardly a branch of the social system nowadays that does not take an active interest in the drama.

The dramatic instinct is universal, and as the restrictions based on false premises that formerly discouraged its cultivation and expression relax or pass away, that instinct will enjoy full liberty, to the pleasure of those immediately active and those that fall under the influence of its demonstrations, as well as to the greater happiness of the race as a whole. The theatre never has been as popular as it is to-day, and those who administer it should develop its opportunities along the lines that will appeal to the better senses of the great public, and for the greatest good to the greatest number.

"PERMISSIBLE CRITICISM."

THE sensitiveness of most artists—and particularly of most music artists—to criticism is both a tradition and a living fact. Of course, there are actors that resent criticism, which often is instruction, although seldom or never so accepted, but more commonly it is the music artist, either singer or instrumentalist, that regards unfavorable comment as the most distressing discord in life.

KUBELIK, the young violinist, evidently has the failing of his kind, for some time ago he sued the Frankfurter Zeitung for an alleged libel in its comment on one of his performances in Vienna. The paper named described his playing as a "specialty," and his expression as "stupid and brooding." The court, after considering this case, dismissed the complaint, holding that the language used by the critic "did not pass the limits of permissible criticism."

While the mood of young musical genius as a rule often may be described as "brooding," it is not amiable in a critic to use the word "stupid" in association with any clever manifestation. But from this decision it is again made clear that a critic, on general principles, will be upheld in the use of language that may be an offense to the person criticised. Such holdings have been multiplied in courts of all countries that have art institutions, and the occasional protest against freedom of expression by critics that is voiced by the wounded serves only to call attention to this fact.

THE LATE ROBERT GRIFFIN MORRIS.

Robert Griffin Morris, the playwright and journalist, who died at Ocean Grove on April 9, was one of the most remarkable men associated with the theatre in America. Naturally he was known to members of the dramatic profession solely as a playwright, and his activity in that line of work made him, many years ago, a man of mark. But in his own estimation playwriting was not his chief forte. He prided himself on being a good newspaper man, and assuredly his achievements in that field were worthy of the highest admiration.

Mr. Morris was born in England fifty-six years ago, and when a lad he was taken to India by his father, who was an officer in the Prince of Wales' Regiment. In Simla he met and knew intimately many men, then young, who since have become famous officers in the British service. He himself entered the service, but before long the sea lured him, and he left the army to study navigation. At the age of eighteen he was a full-fledged mariner. His career at sea was, however, cut short by an accident that maimed him for life. He was sent, at the head of a party of seamen, to the rescue of a British vessel whose crew was disabled by scurvy. Scarcely had he taken charge of the ship when she was overtaken by a fearful storm. The month was February, and so bitterly cold was the weather that the majority of the men aboard were frozen to death. When Mr. Morris was taken off by a pilot boat it was found that his feet were so badly frozen that amputation was necessary. The operation was performed in New York, and Mr. Morris passed the period of his convalescence at the Sailors' Snug Harbor on Staten Island.

After recovering from his injuries sufficiently to be able to walk Mr. Morris entered the journalistic field. His work met with prompt appreciation, and he soon rose to a prominent position in the newspaper world. He was one of James Gordon Bennett's chief lieutenants, and he enjoyed the friendship and good will of many prominent government officials. General Grant was particularly fond of him, and for some time Mr. Morris accompanied that great American on his travels, acting as his official correspondent.

Mr. Morris wrote thirty-nine plays and one hundred and eighty-seven short sketches, besides writing countless songs and encore verses for various opera and minstrel companies. Some of his plays have been acted almost without interruption for twenty years. At the time of his death Mr. Morris had just completed a comedy entitled A Queer Genius, which, it is said, will be produced next season.

BOOKS AND MAGAZINES.

James Huneker, the brilliant dramatic critic of the New York Sun, is the author of a fine-looking red and gold volume of twenty-four unusual short stories. It is published by the Scribners. It opens with a wicked thing called "The Lord's Prayer in B," which is followed by a good-naturedly cynical tragedy entitled "A Son of Liszt." Both are worthy of de Maupassant And the next, "A Chopin of the Gutter," might have been tossed off by Balzac to win a wager from Théophile that he could not write a little masterpiece in two hours and a half. That Chopin, at his stringless, soundless piano, in his attic near the Parisian sky, will linger long in the memory. "The Piper of Dreams" is a composer whose mission it is to bring about chaos—to "ruin civilization"—with his music. It is a fascinating idea. Mr. Huneker, in this wonderful writing, makes one see music. The passages beginning on page 58 and running to the end of the story are Hugo-like in their descriptive tremendousness. "An Emotional Acrobat" is a tragic gem, with not one superfluous penstroke in it. There is not space to enumerate the beauties of the nineteen other stories, but it can be conscientiously said that the entire volume is packed with unusual themes, treatment, words, phrases, wit, humor, and that it deserves to stand on the library shelves between two volumes of de Maupassant and Daudet—one of the best of each. And all the stories appeal to professionals—actors and singers. It should be in the grip of every professional touring the country, for it will make the passage of time unconscious.

The Critic for April is a fine number in every respect and a credit to its twenty years' editor, Jeannette Gilder. Its April flowers are "Death and the Crown," by about the rarest spirit on earth to-day, Maurice Maeterlinck, and a heretofore unknown poem by Robert Browning, "A Miniature," sent to The Critic by Dr. W. J. Rolfe, the Shakespearean scholar. There is no mistake about the poem being Browning's. If it is doubted, listen to the last stanza:

"Then hie home where the wide Loire lies
Warm in the light of its fleur-de-lys.
All I know is, her brave, sweet eyes
Brighten a bit of this world for me."

That is glorious Robert at his sweetest and best.

Elbert Hubbard's "Little Journeys to the Homes of Great Philosophers" for April is devoted to Mr. Hubbard's trip to the villa of Marcus Aurelius, and he tells his readers just how that great man impressed him. It is a very interesting human document.

A DREAM.

Last night I dreamed that I died and went to heaven. You may think it strange that I dreamed I went to heaven—but you know what they say about dreams.

"Who are you?" said St. Peter.

"An actress," was all I could think of, to save me!

"Hu!" said St. Peter, with a saintly grunt. "Poor devil! How many shows have you been with this year?"

I started to tell him the names of four shows I had been with, but he stopped me.

"How so many?" said he.

"Well, I received my notice from the first, the next two closed, and I finished the season with the fourth."

He eyed me suspiciously, as he closed his notebook.

"I have heard of you. O. Knockem Again said that all four shows would have stayed out longer if you had not been with them."

And I awoke before I could ask St. Peter if O. Knockem Again got by him with that hammer.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

[No replies by mail. No attention paid to anonymous impertinent or irrelevant queries. No private addresses furnished. Questions regarding the whereabouts of players will not be answered. Letters to members of the profession addressed in care of THE MIRROR will be forwarded if possible.]

C. M. S.: Mrs. Elitch-Long.

MRS. F., Westboro, Mass.: His address not known to THE MIRROR. Write to him care of THE MIRROR.

LATHROP: You ask for information anonymously. See a theatrical lawyer. Or write to American Dramatists' Club, sign your letter and give your address.

MARK ROWE, Woodstock, Can.: Your list of caricatures seems to be practically complete. To put a searcher on the files of THE MIRROR from August, 1895, up to date, to absolutely verify your one hundred and twenty items, would involve a week's constant application of at least one man.

MABEL L., South Bend, Ind.: 1. If the author of a copyrighted book is dead you must get the written consent of his publisher or executor or heirs, or else into trouble. 2. You split royalties or pay money down according to agreement. 3. Royalties run from five per cent. of the gross upward.

E. B. CLIFTON, Philadelphia: THE MIRROR would gladly tell you of her whereabouts if it knew. Perhaps her name may appear in the correspondents' letters from week to week. If you send a letter, care of THE MIRROR, it will be advertised, and forwarded at the earliest moment.

T. J. C., Brooklyn: 1. About every paper in New York had the cast of the principals in The Wizard of Oz in its columns last Tuesday, and yet you write to THE MIRROR for it. See this week's MIRROR. The entire cast would eat up too much of THE MIRROR'S space. 2. See THE MIRROR'S letters from correspondents for other cast. 3. Sign your name hereafter. Initials alone won't do.

F. A. LA B.: 1. There are no free dramatic schools in New York. 2. No evening classes. 3. The method to obtain a position is to apply for it. 4. The salary question you will have to settle with the manager. 5. Stock companies do not furnish all costumes, except in costume plays. 6. By acting for a teacher or actor. 7. Read Shakespeare and the standard plays. 8. Sign your name to your letters.

WILBUR PARTRIDGE, Portsmouth, N. H.: 1. Fred Stone, the Scarecrow of The Wizard of Oz, as a boy used to walk the tight rope in a circus. But so did Edmund Kean. Mr. Stone is considered by such authorities as James J. Corbett, George Fuller Golden, and Billy Elmer the best boxer in the profession. Mr. Corbett says that Mr. Stone could be the champion middleweight if he wished to enter the ring. Edmund Kean was a fine boxer.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Regarding the Late Minnie Monk.

NEW YORK, April 9.

To the Editor of The Dramatic Mirror:

SIR.—As an old and close friend of the late Minnie Monk—a friend of fifty-four years' standing—pray permit me to contradict certain misstatements about her career that have been published since her death.

First, let me contradict the statement that she was born in Germany and came to this country with her father and sister Ada when a little child. Minnie Monk's mother came to America (Boston) when she was still in her teens. She (Mrs. Munck) was born in Leipsic, Germany, of noble parentage, and had been in America before she met her husband for nearly ten years. Minnie Monk and her twin sister Jennie were born on a steamboat plying between Boston and New York on Oct. 20, 1844.

Secondly, your humble servant (who was then under the name of Clara Mann) and Ada Munck joined the Marsh Juvenile troupe in 1855 and two weeks later Minnie and her twin sister joined the same company. We remained with Marsh nearly two years. Minnie Monk's first success was made in Washington at Ford's Theatre in 1864. Edwin Forrest was playing an engagement there, and the night in question the piece of Jack Cade was up. Mrs. J. R. Scott, who was to have played the Widow Cade, was taken suddenly ill. There was consternation, for presumably no one was up in the part, when Minnie, who was only a little out of ballet, pulled the coat sleeve of "Papa" Wright, who was Forrest's stage-manager, and said: "Papa, I can play the part." While Mr. Wright smiled at the assurance of the ballet girl whom he had known three years before at the Winter Garden, New York city, he spoke to Mr. Forrest. The tragedian, instead of laughing, and being ever ready to help the ambitious, called Minnie to him and said, "How do you know you can play the part?" Minnie said timidly, "Because, sir, I have understudied the part." The remark so pleased Mr. Forrest that he rehearsed her, and at night she played the part. Mr. Forrest was so delighted that at the fall of the curtain, before all the company, he complimented her and said, "Miss Monk, you are a very ambitious young lady. You deserve great credit and you will, I am sure, succeed in your chosen profession." I can vouch for the truth of this as I was on the stage (as a ballet girl) and heard the words, which to Minnie were the sweetest she had ever heard. Yours most respectfully,

KATHRINE M. EVANS.

Captain O'Blunder Again.

SUMTER, S. C., April 5, 1904.

To the Editor of The Dramatic Mirror:

SIR.—Please allow me to thank you for the attention which my letter of inquiry in regard to Captain O'Blunder, or, The Brave Irishman, received in two issues of THE MIRROR, Feb. 20 and 27. Since then I have heard from Mr. R. Farquharson Sharp, of the British Museum, who says:

"The Brave Irishman is not by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, but by a certain Thomas Sheridan, who was a teacher of elocution in Dublin. It was produced at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, in 1759, and is an adaptation (unacknowledged, I believe, by the adapter) of Moliere's Monsieur de Pourceaugnac."

In addition to the above I can say that I have been fortunate enough to secure a god copy of "The Theatrical Remembrancer," London, 1788, which ascribes the little farce in question to Thomas Sheridan, in the following language:

"Captain O'Blunder. Written at school, and acted about 1741."

But there are no marks whatever to indicate whether it was ever printed or not, or the size of the publication. Moliere's name does not seem to be mentioned in this book, but among the "Anonymous Plays," which appeared from "1700 to 1710," I find "Monsieur de Pourceaugnac; or, Squire Trelooby. C. Acted at Lincoln's Inn Fields. 4to. 1704." Very sincerely yours,

THOMAS E. RICHARDSON.

P. S.—In volume 6 of "Jones' British Theatre," Dublin, 1795, I find a comic opera ascribed to "R. B. Sheridan, Esq." I quote the title page exactly as I find it:

"The Governess. A Comic Opera. By R. B. Sheridan, Esq. Adapted for Theatrical Representation, as Performed at the Theatres-Royal, Drury-Lane, Covent Garden, and Smock-Alley. Regulated from the prompt-books by permission of the managers. Dublin: Printed by Graisberry and Campbell for William Jones, No. 86 Dame Street. MDCCXCIII (1793). 59 p."

As I cannot find this ascribed to R. B. S. elsewhere—not even in Bohn's edition, 1848, of the Dramatic Works of R. B. S., and a Memoir of his life—I thought I would like to know if it is a fraud or not. Very truly yours,

T. E. R.

THE USHER

The New York Theatre Managers' Association has declared against the lithograph and the accompanying ticket evil. This is a wise and commendable move. If the window displays are abolished it will cut off at least 15,000 deadheads a week from the theatres of this city, and give a quietus to the cut-rate ticket trade.

The result should be a decided gain in receipts. The experiment has been tried in Boston and other cities with excellent effect. It will save money for both the theatre managers and the attractions.

Another worthy resolve of the Association is to revive the 10-cent tax on complimentary tickets for the Actors' Fund. This plan was originated several years ago by A. M. Palmer, whose example was followed by a number of other managers here and elsewhere. But it was allowed to lapse, unfortunately—probably because it was not followed universally. If this scheme is put into operation and enforced strictly it will add materially to the Fund's revenues, which need augmenting.

Members of the Association speak of other moves said to be contemplated by the Managers' Association. The most important of these is said to be a project to regulate newspaper advertising conditions.

Some of the members have conceived the idea of reducing the advertising item by agreeing that only small advertisements, of uniform size and display, shall be inserted by the New York theatres, and demanding lower rates from the papers.

If the Association undertakes to put such an agreement into force it will make a serious mistake. Theatre advertising is not such a large factor to the publishers that they would be likely to yield any material reduction from the established rates. Besides, if bill-posting is restricted and the lithograph abolished the newspapers will be the only medium left to advertise metropolitan amusements, and should the newspapers combine to lessen the space given to theatricals in their reading columns the result would be disastrous to the members of the Association, who will probably think twice before they make a serious blunder.

In various cities throughout the country these managers' associations are in process of forming. The plan is to group the local organizations into a national body, and a convention is talked of to be held during the coming Summer.

The stated purposes of these local associations are similar. Among them newspaper advertising, bill-posting, and the requirements of "extra" stage-hands, musicians, etc., by traveling attractions are named as subjects of attention.

It is noteworthy that the stars and managers of attractions are still unorganized, and that their interests are still unprotected.

The movement to form the theatre managers' associations had its origin in the Trust, which holds these managers in a sort of bondage. Here in New York, although the Association is supposed to represent all interests, the theatre managers who are independent of the Trust were not asked to co-operate. The point can be easily seen.

The owners of the ill-fated Iroquois Theatre, of Chicago, have succeeded in selling that property. Rich and Harris are named as the buyers. It has been leased, I hear, to Hyde and Behman at an annual rental of $42,000. Next Autumn it will reopen as a vaudeville theatre, under a new name.

It remains to be seen whether the scene of the lamentable fire tragedy will be patronized by the Chicago public.

Members of the theatre profession would have preferred to see the property pass to other than amusement uses. It is associated with a horror that might have been averted by due consideration of public safety, and that directly has done more to injure, demoralize and destroy American theatrical interests than any other influence that can be named.

Bourke Cockran has introduced a bill in Congress for the relief of the men who signed the bond for The Blue Beard scenery when it was brought into this country from England. The scenery, valued at $19,000, and bonded for twice that amount, was entered at the port of Buffalo in September last. To avoid the payment of duty the scenery was to be removed from the United States within six months. It was destroyed in the Iroquois fire. The Treasury Department was about to bring suit against the bondsmen for $39,000, and Representative Cockran's bill is for the purpose of relieving them from liability. Escape from responsibility in all directions has been systematically sought by various persons concerned ever since the calamity occurred.

THE MIRROR's informant who stated that Kate Claxton receives no credit in the playbills of the present revival for The Two Orphans was mistaken. The programme announces that the version "is played by arrangement with Kate Claxton, its present owner," and this notice has been published since the first performance.

Harvey Denton, of the University of Virginia, epitomizes a situation that many a playwright knows in the following lines which he sends to THE MIRROR:

The manager finished reading, then he folded up the play;
For a moment there was silence, as he sadly looked away.
"Young man, I'm sorry for you, you don't seem to catch the point,
You seem to think we're running a Salvation Army joint;
You seem to think we're dealing out free meal tickets for life,
With a cup and saucer thrown in, and a silver-handled knife.
Why, this play of yours is wondrous; it's a dream of genius rare!
The stage construction's excellent; in fact, beyond compare!
The dialogue is brilliant, the action most intense,
The situations out of sight, the "business" is immense!
And yet you have the nerve to flash this thing upon the Trust!
Well, let me tell you this, young man, right now, before I bust:

We ain't in this business for our health,
Not by a mile!
We're strong enough to stand this strain on wealth;
Well, I should smile!
If by Genius you are haunted, take your talents where they're wanted,
We ain't in the business for our health!

It is not certain just when a new play will be wanted to succeed The Arm of the Law at the London Garrick Theatre, as the English version of the Brieux drama is successful in spite of its gloom, but it will be a new comedy by W. S. Gilbert. This has been in preparation for some time, under peculiar circumstances. While the company are rehearsing the stage-door is locked and the iron curtain is lowered, the object being to prevent any knowledge of the plot and dialogue of Mr. Gilbert's work from getting out. Mr. Gilbert believes firmly in maintaining the secret of his story, so that it shall be a completely novel disclosure at the first performance.

David Belasco, in an interesting Herald interview on Sunday, said: "There is at present a dearth of good plays all over the world, and so the managers in mad despair are digging up the dramatic graveyards and reviving old plays to meet the demand."

The reason for the scarcity of plays he ascribes to the fact that there are few producing managers, and consequently little encouragement for young dramatists. The depletion of the ranks of producers, he thinks, has been caused by the predominance of the commercial manager.

Another tendency that Mr. Belasco deplores is the "all-star" cast. He believes that the individual star loses prestige and "confesses weakness" by participating in such performances.

FUNERAL OF SHERIDAN TUPPER.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Sheridan Tupper were held at the Church of the Transfiguration (the Little Church Around the Corner) at noon on April 13, the Rev. Dr. Houghton officiating. The attendance was large, as Mr. Tupper was widely known and held in high esteem in the profession. Preceding the regular church service William H. Crane paid a high tribute to the character of his departed fellow player. Dr. Houghton, always impressive, appeared doubly so on this occasion. His voluntary delivery of the touching poem, "Give Me Thy Hand," brought tears to all eyes. The pall bearers were members of the Edwin Forrest Lodge, Actors' Order of Friendship. The interment, in accordance with the desire of the deceased, was in the plot of the Actors' Fund, of which he was a life member. The committal services at the grave were conducted by the Order of Friendship. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. They included pieces from the members of William H. Crane's company, Mr. Crane personally, the Actors' Order of Friendship, the Greenroom Club, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Murphy. Mr. Tupper is survived by a widow and mother. The latter, aged seventy-five years, came from her home in Decatur, Ill., unattended. Mr. Tupper had nearly always been associated with established attractions, and being domestic and economical, he left those near him well provided for. Mr. Tupper was born on Dec. 16, 1860, and was forty-three, instead of fifty, as was stated.

GOLDEN ON THE THEATRES.

The sketch question was the topic at the Criterion Restaurant, London, recently, where to a crowded gathering of members and friends of the O. P. Club, under the chairmanship of Ben Nathan, the popular comedian, George Fuller Golden discoursed concerning the influence of the theatre on the music hall man. The lecturer on this occasion was in very genial mood, says the London Referee. Mr. Golden regretted that the theatres which had done so much good were now showing a disposition to do harm by checking the development of a taste for the drama, into which taste the music hall patrons were being, so to speak, swindled by the dramatic sketches. If the theatres suffered by the competition of the halls their managers were to blame for relying on plays that were nothing if not depressing. And after all it was the public tastes and the public wants that should be considered. Mr. Golden's lecture was enlivened by several laughable stories; but he concluded in serious mood, and with an earnest and eloquent appeal for the putting aside of prejudice and jealousy and the handing of all the representatives of the stage to provide the best and highest sort of entertainment possible, both in theatre and hall.

STANHOPE-WHEATCROFT MATINEE.

The final matinee this season of the students of the Stanhope-Wheatcroft Dramatic School took place last Thursday afternoon at the Manhattan Theatre. The audience was very large and was generous in its plaudits. The performance was, on the whole, a complete success, and though the long programme offered little of novelty, it was interesting from beginning to end.

The performance began with a presentation of the first act of Henry V. Esmond's comedy, One Summer's Day. The students revealed the atmosphere of the play admirably, and the only grave fault in the presentation lay in the fact that the principal players, almost without exception, were inclined to overact. Amelia Marvin was a picturesque and pleasing Chiara, Lavern M. Titus was an effective Dick, and Gerard Banfield was a capital Tom. The other roles were in capable hands.

In the scene from Leah, the Forsaken, that followed, Lenore Morris displayed considerable talent for emotional acting, and her stage presence was exceptionally good. The strong emotional climaxes were, however, a trifle beyond her present capabilities. The part of Rudolph was fairly well played by William V. Little.

The first act of Arthur Wing Pinero's The Amazons was the next offering. In this, as in One Summer's Day, the students were subjected to unavoidable comparison with professional players. The act was very creditably presented, however, and several of the roles were exceedingly well played. Especially worthy of praise were Sam B. Hardy as Barrington, Beatrice McClure as Lady Noeline, Harry H. Picot as Andre, Howard G. Sloat as Gaifred, and Grace Rauworth as the Marchioness. The costuming was pretty and the stage management excellent.

Next was presented a play in one act, by Ian Robertson, entitled The Pity of It. This little piece is scarcely more than an episode, but it is very human and affecting. The heroine, Rhoda, is deeply beloved by Captain Bond, a strong, manly fellow, but, unhappily, she has bestowed her affection upon a gay, fickle, ne'er-do-well, Captain Hilliard, who cares but little for her. The two officers are about to start for India with their regiments, and the action of the play takes place upon the occasion of the farewell calls of the two men upon the heroine. After dismissing the one suitor she is in turn deserted by the other, and is, at the end, left desolate. Ivy Davis played the role of Rhoda with fine sentiment, naturalness and charm. Her impersonation was in all respects praiseworthy. Sam B. Hardy was a handsome, alert Hilliard and was true to the character in manner, speech and bearing. William V. Little as Bond did a capital piece of quiet, intense acting, and upon his exit he won a burst of well deserved applause.

The next number was William Dean Howell's familiar little farce, entitled Unexpected Guests. It was well staged and well played, particular credit being due Mrs. Goldfinch as Mrs. Campbell, Grace Rauworth as Mrs. Belford, Harry Picot as Mr. Campbell, and Herbert Treitel as Dr. Lawton.

Miss Mary, the next offering, is a well made little dramatic version of Bret Harte's splendid short story, "An Idyll of Red Gulch." Miss Mary, the schoolmistress, it will be remembered, is asked by a woman of the town, Mrs. Morton, to adopt a child of which Mrs. Morton is the mother. The father's name is kept secret. Miss Mary has a suitor—a crude fellow named Sandy—upon whom she looks with favor. She has consented to take the child and is on the verge of accepting the suitor when the disclosure is made that Sandy is the father of the child. Dorothy Gray as the schoolmistress played in precisely the right key of simplicity and womanly earnestness. Linhart Belmont as Sandy was excellent in many respects, but he exaggerated the uncouthness of the character sadly. Anna Ott gave a thoroughly good portrayal of Mrs. Morton, revealing the commonness of the woman by employing many artistic bits of business.

The performance ended with an excellent presentation of the old farce, A Quiet Family, in which Robert Warren played Mr. Benjamin Bibbs; E. G. Newcomb, Mr. Barnaby Bibbs; Lavern M. Titus, Peter Parker; Harry Gregson, Grumpey; Floss Forman, Mrs. Benjamin; Grace Colgan, Mrs. Barnaby; Evelyn Dorian, Miss Summers, and Dorothy Gray, Snarley.

The Summer course of the school will begin on May 2, and in September the first public matinee of the new students will be given.

PLANS OF THE BOSTONIANS.

Certain reports recently published in the newspapers regarding the plans for the future of The Bostonians have misled many persons into the belief that this old organization of twenty-five years' standing is about to depart altogether from its long established policy. While the reports were founded upon fact, they were so worded as to give an erroneous impression.

Loudon G. Charlton, the manager of The Bostonians, briefly outlined the course that is to be pursued, to a MIRROR reporter yesterday. Mr. Charlton said: "The only change in policy contemplated by the directors, the organization being now a corporation, is in the future to provide a separate organization for each new opera produced and to make as many productions as is warranted by each success. For these productions the best talent available will be used, regardless of former or present connection with the organization. The personnel of the present company is the strongest The Bostonians has had for years, and the majority of these artists will fit admirably in the new pieces to be produced.

"But in order to continue the use of Robin Hood, a property that in thirteen years of steady use has played to over two million and a half dollars in gross receipts in something like twenty-four hundred performances, and at the same time to relieve Henry Clay Barnabee from the necessity of playing long seasons of forty or more weeks with the new organizations producing new operas, necessitating arduous travel and discomfort, it is proposed to surround Mr. Barnabee with a company which will play only Robin Hood for a limited season each year, booked in accordance with Mr. Barnabee's personal wishes regarding the length of season, choice of stands and character of houses suitable to the continuance of Robin Hood's success.

"It is obvious that a policy which will serve the requirements of Mr. Barnabee and his Robin Hood company for a limited season in restricted territory will not be at all suitable for the new company or companies playing new pieces; hence the change to separate companies.

"Thus, instead of disintegrating or contracting their sphere of usefulness, the corporation will expand in several directions, and while new successes are being worked out, the old success can be continued."

EDITH WYNNE MATTHISON.

On the first page of THE MIRROR appears a recent portrait of Edith Wynne Matthison, the English actress, who during the past two seasons has established herself so firmly in the favor of American playgoers that she may now be counted among the most popular of the serious actresses on the American stage. She came forward prominently here in the title-role of Everyman, when that morality play was presented at Mendelssohn Hall, and with one accord the dramatic critics of New York gave her unstinted praise for her exceeding grace in acting and her surpassing elocutionary ability. Before coming to America Miss Matthison had long experience in Shakespearean drama in London and the English provinces. She was a pupil of Ben Greet's school of acting, and under his management she made her appearance in Everyman. Besides that role she has played in America Viola in Twelfth Night, Rosalind in As You Like It, Michael in The Star of Bethlehem, and Kate Hardcastle in She Stoops to Conquer. In each of these various roles she has been successful and has compelled the deepest admiration of her audiences.

MASTERSON.—Mrs. Kate Masterson, for many years a member of THE MIRROR staff and writer for Ainslee's Magazine, The Smart Set, Town Topics, and prominent daily papers, will sail for London on Saturday by the Minneapolis. While she is abroad Mrs. Masterson will furnish correspondence for several of the leading weekly and Sunday papers of this city. Mrs. Masterson's first novel, "The Thirteenth Apostle," will be published next month, and before her return she will visit Warsaw, Russia, for material for another book. A $100 prize for the best topical poem was awarded her by Munsey's Magazine last week.

TALIAFERRO.—Mabel Taliaferro is to be starred by Liebler and Company within the next three years, on account of her hit as Lovey Mary in Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch.

FARNUM.—Dustin Farnum purchased a yacht last week, which he has christened the Wister as a compliment to Owen Wister, author of The Virginian, now running at the Manhattan Theatre.

ADLER.—Jacob Adler, assisted by Mrs. Adler, gave a performance of The Jewish King Lear at the Grand Street Theatre last Monday night for the benefit of the Emanu-El Brotherhood. After the performance a loving cup was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Adler by the society. The Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman made the presentation address.

ODELL.—Governor Odell occupied a box last Tuesday night at Wallack's, where The County Chairman is being played. The house was full of delegates to the Republican convention.

RUSSELL.—Thomas H. Russell, the original Little Lord Fauntleroy, brother of Annie Russell, and now a business man in New York, was married last Tuesday afternoon to Grace Elliott Shields in Richmond, Va. The ceremony was performed in St. Paul's Episcopal Church. After the wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Russell will go to their home in Short Hills, N. J.

CARTER.—After last Tuesday night's performance of Du Barry at the Meriden Theatre, Meriden, Conn., Mrs. Leslie Carter celebrated her son Dudley's twenty-first birthday, giving a dinner for him and some of his Harvard companions at the Winthrop Hotel. During the festivities Mrs. Carter presented to her son a check for $1000. He is a junior at Harvard.

JUDAH.—Mr. and Mrs. A. Judah, of Kansas City, arrived in town Monday, and are stopping at the Marlborough Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Judah will sail on the Columbia on Thursday for an extended tour of the Continent. They will go from here direct to Hamburg, then to Berlin and Dresden and to Carlsbad, where they will spend about a month. From there they will go to Vienna, Budapest, Venice, Florence, Milan, Lucerne, Zurich, Muncie, and Frankfort, and for a trip up the Rhine to Cologne and Brussels, to Paris and then to London and Ireland, and then back home. Mr. Judah says he has had the biggest season this year he has ever had. Mr. Judah is manager of the Grand Opera House, Kansas City.

WARNER.—During the illness of Cecilia Loftus the role of Perpetua in E. H. Sothern's production of The Proud Prince has been played in Boston, Chicago, Buffalo, and Philadelphia by Affie Warner. Her impersonation has won praise from the reviewers in those cities. Miss Warner is a daughter of the late Neil Warner, and on her mother's side is a descendent of the famous Chippendale family of players.

HERBERT.—Victor Herbert has been working on an opera to be produced next season which he has named The Enchanted Isle. The scene is laid in an imaginary country.

BARRYMORE.—Ethel Barrymore is to sail for England to-morrow, and will appear there in Cynthia. She ended her season here last Saturday night in Cousin Kate at the Hudson Theatre.

OSTERMAN.—Kathryn Osterman is resting at the home of her sister in Toledo.

PALMER.—Josephine Palmer, niece of A. M. Palmer and daughter of the late Will R. Palmer, made her professional debut at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre on Sunday evening, April 10, with her own company, in a sketch called A Rival of Sally, by George C. Harvey.

Summer Attractions the Topic of the Town—Notes of the Theatres.

CHICAGO, April 18.

Summer attractions downtown for the approaching season are becoming a topic of especial interest. It would seem that most of the central houses that will not have to close for repairs expect to book more or less solid right through to the opening of the new regular theatrical season. And some of the theatres, under $25,000 bonds to fully comply with the new theatre law by Sept. 1, necessitating closing for a considerable portion of the Summer, are booking all they can. Most of the Summer attractions will be musical, though the Grand has Mrs. Wiggs in July, a heated term booking, by the way, which has caused considerable curiosity and comment. After The Old Homestead engagement ends this week the Grand will be closed for a few weeks for alterations, and then The Wizard of Oz is to return and wiz on toward the warm season, if not into it. Preparations are progressing at the Garrick for the Summer production there of Richard Carle's The Maid and the Mummy, which will take place about June 1. Another Carle attraction, The Tenderfoot, is likely to be a rival attraction, for a few weeks at least, at the Illinois. The chief incidents this week are the reopening of Powers' and the return of The Burgomaster and Checkers. The bills:

Grand Opera House, Denman Thompson in The Old Homestead (second and closing week); Powers', Marie Tempest in The Marriage of Kitty; Studebaker, The Sho-Gun (second week); Garrick, Chinese Honeymoon (second and closing week); Illinois, Fritzi Scheff in Babette (fourth and closing week); McVicker's, Chinese Honeymoon (second and closing week); Great Northern, The Burgomaster; La Salle, Royal Chef (third week); Bush Temple, stock, in Brown's in Town; Columbus, Al. Martin's Uncle Tom's Cabin; People's, May Hosmer and stock in Hazel Kirke; Bijou, Two Little Waifs; Hopkins', Human Hearts; Criterion, Worst Woman in London; Howard's, L. J. Howard and stock in A Mortgaged Slave.

The dramatic event this spring in Chicago will be the engagement of Mrs. Fiske at the Garrick. Interest in her visit will be accentuated by the predominance of musical attractions, and this, with the position she holds, and the well-known excellence of her productions, gives assurance of a most successful fortnight. It is announced that Mrs. Fiske will appear in Mary of Magdala, Hedda Gabler, A Doll's House, Divorcons, Creatine, and A Bit of Old Chelsea. Her engagement will begin May 16.

It is understood here that Jessie Bartlett Davis is to leave the Erminie company after the St. Louis engagement. Mrs. Davis spent Sunday in Chicago.

Mary Shaw, after her special engagement at the Chicago Athletic Club theatre ladies' night, April 20, will visit the fashionable suburb of Oak Park and play an engagement of two nights at the new Warrington Theatre.

Trixie Friganza has been taken from the Sho-Gun cast to resume her role of the widow in The Prince of Pilsen company, which is going to London. Her place in the Sho-Gun cast will be taken by Georgia Caine, who will make her first appearance with the company at the Studebaker to-night. Thomas Leary has succeeded Etienne Girardot as Hanki Pank. Manager Shaw, of the Sho-Gun company, has been transferred to The Yankee Consul in New York, and Jack Pratt succeeds him here.

Madison Corey, after several weeks' work on The Sho-Gun, has gone to Boston to assist George Marion in putting on The Woodland.

George Bowles was in town last week for Frank Daniels, who will follow Fritzi Scheff at the Illinois.

One of the wild rumors of the week was that Pat Shea had got the Iroquois for a vaudeville house.

Lincoln Carter's Too Proud to Beg, with Manager Fred Kimball in charge, came to Hopkins' last week and closed its season there. The child actors, Mildred and Arthur Boylan, got great applause, as usual. With the help of the old favorites of the cast—A. B. Lynds, C. F. Lorraine, Fred Eckhart, Ed West, Frank Swain, and St. George Hussey—the melodrama was performed with remarkable smoothness. Too Proud to Beg is said to have made Mr. Carter about $11,000 this season.

Harry Earle, who was out with Queen of the Highway this season, is in town doing some advance work for the Wallace shows.

Albert W. Taylor, a young Chicagoan, who has had the unusual experience of playing only in Shakespeare during his comparatively brief career on the stage, has been engaged to play Lebeau and Silvius in As You Like It during a Spring tour.

Harry Cowley, of The Fatal Wedding company and the B. P. O. E., was in town last week en route to his home in St. Louis.

Hissing broke loose with vehemence at McVicker's last Wednesday afternoon at a performance of An Irish Gentleman, but it was not directed at Andrew Mack. It was meant in dead earnest for the villain, and seemed to come as much from the orchestra as anywhere else. On the other hand, the audience seemed ready to cheer for the hero (Mack). The fortnight of this star in Chicago has been very successful.

The tide of humanity continues strong toward the Studebaker, and it appears The Sho-Gun will easily run until July.

Fritz Huttman, the young Chicago tenor, has returned from Ann Arbor with flattering notices for his Count Egbert in a trial production of a new opera there.

Eugene Spofford, manager of the Western Weary Willie Walker company, is back at his desk at the Goes printing house again, the company having closed its season last week. He reports success.

Florence Kom, of Chicago, formerly of the Bush Temple stock, has joined Paul Gilmore's Mummy and Humming Bird company.

John Slavin will create the lead in The Maid and the Mummy at the Garrick, Dave Lewis having signed to stay at the La Salle another year. In the company besides Slavin will be Fred Lenox, Louis Wesley, Thomas Heddaway, Albert Adams, Jeannette Priest, and Annie Yeamans.

An English Daisy follows A Chinese Honeymoon at the Garrick.

The twentieth anniversary of Leon Wachsner's directorship of the German Stock company at Milwaukee, which plays Chicago Sunday nights, was commemorated at the performance in the Grand Opera House last night with a triple bill, in which Mr. Wachsner himself participated. The bill was composed of From a Comic Opera, The Hermit, and Jubilee of the Crafts. Mr. Wachsner's management has been highly successful and won him a great circle of friends.

After two weeks of Marie Tempest, The Earl of Pawtucket will come to Powers' for a run.

Starting with a small house in a rainstorm, The Old Homestead rapidly increased its business to a fine patronage. The press unanimously praised the play and Mr. Thompson's acting. The audiences were as enthusiastic as ever.

The cost of remodeling and refitting Powers' Theatre is placed at $70,000, including steel stage, brick proscenium, new staircase from the balcony into the main lobby, rearrangement of boxes, and many other alterations. Manager Harry Powers will certainly have a handsome theatre to meet the new law with, but he may have to display a few fresh paint signs at the reopening to-night. It's a close finish.

Nat Roth and Julian Magnus are in town for the Marie Tempest engagement.

The next reception of the local chapter of the Actors' Church Alliance will take place on the afternoon of April 26 in the Church Club rooms of the Masonic Temple. There will be a short musical and literary programme.

The Columbus Theatre will become a stock theatre May 1 under the management of the owners of the property, Max and David Weber, and with Anne Sutherland as leading woman. Miss Sutherland came to town last week and signed a contract to resume her old position before South Side theatregoers, among whom she is extremely popular. Her leading man will be Fred Montague, formerly at Hopkins', and recently playing opposite to John Griffiths in Shakespeare. Other members of the company engaged are Earl Stirling, Annette Marshal, and Harry Stubbs. Sam Forrest will be stage director.

The Chinese Honeymoon, with Toby Claude instead of Katie Barry, Edward Clarke in the place of Seabrooke, Frances Knight instead of Amelia Stone, Stella Tracy as Mrs. Pineapple, and W. H. Clarke as Hang Chow, has been pleasing the patrons of the Garrick this week and getting some praise in the newspapers for satisfactory performances. The opening week was prosperous. Miss Claude was recalled many times in "The Twining Vine" and "I Want to Be a Lidy," while Edward Clark got numerous encores in "A Little Street in Heaven" and "Dooley."

Louise Beaton made Rachel Goldstein an immense favorite at the Bijou, and the theatre was crowded twice daily all week.

Fritzi Scheff's success in Babette at the Illinois has moved the management to assert that this closing week will make a record unequaled so far at the Illinois by any such an attraction.

Ed F. McCrunish, Charles Huntington, Florence Glover, D. L. McGrath, and Bertha Hollenbec have signed through Bennet's with the Castleton Opera company.

Al. Wilson and The Prince of Tatters pleased large audiences at the Great Northern last week.

An important change in theatre ownership took place last week. Charles E. Kohl, of Kohl and Castle, owners of the big three vaudeville houses, bought the interest of E. P. Simpson in the Bijou Theatre, and thus again became a factor with George Middleton, as Mr. Middleton is the other owner of the Bijou. Mr. Simpson has been one of the owners of the Academy with Mr. Middleton, and it is said has sold out or agreed to terms of sale for his interest there. The sudden appearance of Mr. Kohl in the melodrama circuit is the breeziest bit of news of the week.

OTIS L. COLBURN.

BOSTON.

The Schoeffel Anniversary—Julia Arthur Better—Nance O'Neil—The Church and the Stage.

BOSTON, April 18.

Theatrical attractions have a strong rival this week, for the Horse Show will take society people, but Massachusetts has a holiday on account of Patriots' Day, and therefore things will be averaged up.

The largest audience in town to-night assembled in the Boston and filled up the seats which had been vacant during the opera season save when Calvé sang. There seems no question but that Babes in Toyland will prove another Wizard of Oz so far as patronage is concerned, for it was splendidly received to-night and everything about the production was admired. Of course the chief hit was scored by William Norris, who was just as funny as he was in A Country Girl last year. Marguerite Clarke is an interesting newcomer in the company.

Nance O'Neil attracted a new audience when she returned to Boston to-night, for her long and phenomenally successful season of special matinees had attracted ladies, and the men had had little chance to see her. Consequently there were more men at the Hollis to-night than in any audience that she has yet had here. An interesting revival was made in Elizabeth of England, Giacommetti's tragedy once played by Ristori. The production is better than any that she has yet had in Boston.

Weber and Fields are at the Globe. They have always played to phenomenal engagements here in the past, and that ought to be repeated with Whoop-Dee-Doo and Catherine. Charles J. Ross and Mabel Fenton have never been seen in Boston with Weber and Fields until now; but Lillian Russell, Louis Mann, John T. Kelly, and Peter F. Daly are old favorites.

At the Castle Square to-night was given by all odds the most ambitious production that this home of the stock company has ever known since the time when Cyrano de Bergerac was introduced to Boston in advance of Richard Mansfield. The house was packed to-night to see the production of Parsifal, and the drama made by Marie Doran from the Wagner opera was followed with unquestioned interest. It was a bit heavy but was well presented and the musical features were specially elaborate. Of the cast the chief interest centred in Blanche Stoddard, who made her first appearance as leading lady as Kundry and justified the nice things said of her when she was with Nance O'Neil.

This is the last week of Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch at the Park, and the fiftieth performance in Boston was observed by the distribution of torpedo hat pin souvenirs to the ladies. Following the Boston engagement the play will be taken for a five weeks' tour of the New England circuit and will go to New York in September. Meanwhile Candida and Arnold Daly succeed at the Park.

Richard Golden and King Dodo conclude a prosperous fortnight at the Tremont this week, and then will give way to Henry W. Savage's annual Spring production at this house. Rehearsals of Woodland have been so far advanced that it has been found possible to go to Providence and give four performances instead of having just one trial night at Malden.

Wedded but No Wife is another of the matrimonial melodramas which have proved so popular in Boston this season, and at the Grand Opera House to-night it was capitally received with Kate Dal-Glysh in the leading character.

Mother Goose is still at the Colonial.

George Sidney in Busy Izzy has made an emphatic personal success at the Majestic, but this is the last week of the engagement, to be followed by Ward and Vokes in A Pair of Pinks, and that by the return of Buster Brown.

The Lighthouse by the Sea is the melodrama of the week at Boston Music Hall, with a storm at sea and rescue of an ocean liner as the chief sensational features.

At the Bowdoin Square another melodrama, The Gates of Justice, had a special production by the stock company, with Charlotte Hunt as the heroine. Jennie De Haan was introduced in songs between the acts.

Quietly and unostentatiously Stair and Wilbur dropped the Columbia, and the house was closed after the performance on Saturday night without a remark from any one. It had been supposed by some that this firm had leased the house from J. J. Grace, the owner, but it appears that the Shuberts still have about nine more years of tenancy. What will be the future of the Columbia is a mystery, for Stair and Wilbur may open it again in the Fall, the Shuberts may try again, or the building may be devoted to other uses. Meantime the suit against the Boston Elevated for damages resulting from the building and operation of the elevated railroad will come up for an early hearing. Stair and Wilbur will probably not direct affairs at the Hub again, as they have leased the house for four years to the Yiddish players now appearing there.

John B. Schoeffel was honored in a signal manner last week upon the termination of his first quarter century of theatrical management. A complimentary dinner was given in his honor at Clark's Hotel with about a hundred prominent Bostonians present, while many more sent messages of regret at inability to attend. T. J. Barry, the well-known theatrical lawyer, presided. The feature of the evening was the presentation to Mr. Schoeffel of a superb silver punch bowl on behalf of his hosts of friends made during his long connection with the Tremont and Park theatres. Mr. Schoeffel was taken completely by surprise, but responded admirably. He received a number of messages from Lakewood, N. J., where his wife, Agnes Booth, is for a short time. The party sent to Mrs. Schoeffel a handsome alligator traveling bag with silver ornaments as a gift.

At the Park the same night was celebrated by the distribution of the fac simile programmes of those distributed twenty-five years ago, when Lotta played La Cigale. Business-manager Andreas nearly dropped dead when a reporter sent by one of the papers to cover the event asked him, "Well, who was Lotta? I never heard of her."

Maxine Elliott's route has been changed a bit, and instead of finishing in New York will have a few one-night stands and three in Providence, closing there.

Julia Arthur and her husband, B. P. Cheney, have returned from California, and are again at the Parker House. She is greatly improved in health after her Winter at Redlands.

Izetta Jewel, who is now playing leads with the stock company at Pawtucket, is to appear after this under the direction of Mrs. H. C. De Mille.

Business Manager Alvah W. Herman and Maud Campbell, of the Busy Izzy company, are to be revived during the present week.

Providence is being visited by a number of Bostonians these days. Last week John B. Schoeffel lavishly entertained a party of newspaper and personal friends who went down to see Nance O'Neil's first performance of Elizabeth of England, and still more went down to-day to see the opening of Albee's stock company at Keith's out of compliment to Lillian Lawrence, John Craig and Maxy Young.

Maud R. Williams, of King Dodo, was the chief guest of honor at the reception held by the Actors' Church Alliance last week. Isabelle Underwood, of the same company, poured tea, and a number of well-known players were present.

The Red Elephant agency has been doing some splendid work in the interests of Blanche Stoddard, who opened her stay at the Castle Square to-day, and she is already attracting more attention than any member of that stock company for a long time.

Only a few people in the theatrical profession were present in the undertaking rooms on Lagrange street, where funeral services were held last week for Mrs. Ada Farwell, known to the stage as Addie Farwell. She was an old-timer, and most of her contemporaries are dead. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Daniels, of Barnard Memorial, and a floral tribute was sent from Lewis Morrison's Faust company, with which she was playing at the time of her death.

There was an interesting discussion of the stage and plays at the meeting of the Congregational clergymen last week, and much to commend was found by Rev. W. H. Van Allen, of the Church of the Advent, and Rev. George W. Shinn, of the Actors' Church Alliance. The former said: "More people go to the theatre than ever before. Shall we stand off and continue our fulminations against the stage? The Alliance hopes to influence public taste, and its members can utter approval of clean, wholesome plays, and theatre managers may realise that they lose patronage by putting on unclean plays and gain it by putting on clean plays." Dr. Shinn said: "I would take 100 actors and 100 business men of the ordinary types, and the former would be of a higher moral grade and more respectful toward the church than persons of any other calling." He spoke about the popular idea that the theatre offers terrible temptation to the young, but he said that from what he had heard in his work of the frequent insults met by young girls in business houses, one might just as well urge girls not to become clerks and stenographers.

William Kittredge will not play in Boston as leading man with Nance O'Neil after all. He slipped on the stage during Camille at Providence last week and injured himself so severely that he cannot appear here, and his place will be filled by another. Alonzo Price went to Providence and played at short notice last week.

The Grigolatis, flying dancers with Mother Goose, have receive an offer of a long Summer engagement at St. Louis for the Exposition.

The Face in the Moonlight, one of Robert Mantell's most effective plays, is in rehearsal at the Castle Square for production after Parsifal.

It is quite probable that Nance O'Neil may take a cottage at one of the Summer places near Boston and pass her entire vacation here, although she has been asked to appear as Rosalind in al fresco performances of As You Like It at Long Branch, N. J., and St. Louis. She has already taken the character in similar productions elsewhere.

William Courtleigh has had a tempting offer to go into vaudeville this Summer, to appear in a little dramatic sketch of which he is the author.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Mayor's Theatre Commission at Last Disbanded—Notes of Attractions.

PHILADELPHIA, April 18.

At last the Mayor's Theatre Commission has completed its work, made a final report and disbanded. It certainly made a complete inspection at a great cost to managers, the reduction of seating capacity and the agitation while the commission was in session greatly affecting the patronage.

Friends of James R. Gentry, the actor who is serving a life sentence (originally condemned to the gallows) in the Eastern Penitentiary for the murder of Madge Yorke, are out with a petition to the Board of Pardons.

The Proud Prince, with E. H. Sothern, is in its second and final week at the Chestnut Street Opera House, attracting good houses. William A. Brady's "all star" cast of Uncle Tom's Cabin will give their first production here April 25, for a two weeks' stay.

Robert Edeson is meeting with success in Ranson's Folly at the Broad Street Theatre, this being his second and final week. Joseph Jefferson follows, April 25, with his usual repertoire, changing the programme nightly.

Wilton Lackaye in The Pit opened to a crowded house to-night at the Chestnut Street Theatre, and greatly pleased our theatregoers. The Tenderfoot comes May 2.

The Walnut Street Theatre still remains open with A China Doll, an acknowledged failure and a great disappointment to the interested parties. It was put on here for a run, and then to Atlantic City for the Summer, but its reception here has upset all the calculations. As yet no bookings to follow.

We are certainly coming to the end of the season when Everyman is offered at the Garrick Theatre for a two weeks' engagement. The anniversary of Shakespeare's birthday, April 23, will be celebrated by a change of programme: For the matinee, The Merchant of Venice; evening, Twelfth Night, Edith Wynne Matthison appearing as Portia and Viola; Ben Greet as Shylock and Malvolio.

Mason and Mason, in Randolph and Adolph, attracted their large following to-night at the Auditorium. They give a pleasing entertainment, full of specialties, novelties and a pretty chorus, aided by an excellent cast. Nat M. Wills in A Son of Rest comes April 25; Sis Hopkins, May 2; Why Women Sin, May 9, which ends the prosperous season.

Miss Bob White, with Dorothy Hunting and Frank Deshon, opened at the Park Theatre, with hopes of a lengthy stay. It was well received by an army of local admirers.

Nat M. Willis, in A Son of Rest, is a great favorite in the Quaker City, and in spite of the return dates is always welcomed by hosts of admirers. Buster Brown follows, April 25; first production of Parsifal in this city, May 2.

From Rags to Riches, with Joseph Santley, the boy actor, in the star role, aided by a fair comtette, holds the week at the People's Theatre. Master Santley's role is full of merit and highly appreciated. On the Bridge at Midnight April 25.

At the Old Cross Roads, Arthur C. Alston's company, including the American Four Quartette, hold the week at the People's Theatre, giving a clever entertainment. Soldiers of Fortune April 25.

The Kensington Theatre this week, instead of playing The Signal of Liberty, as originally announced, changed the attraction to the Howard Boston Vaudeville company, which appeared in twelve big specialty acts. Mamie Fleming inaugurates a four weeks' term here April 25 with The Captain's Mate.

The Star Theatre, after being closed for the past three weeks, reopened to-night, and joined the ranks of traveling burlesque combinations as their future attractions.

Forepaugh's Theatre stock company are giving a production this week of The Secret Enemy. The Pride of Jennico April 25.

The Bijou Theatre stock company has already attracted a clientele that insures a large and profitable season, the same seats being reserved with every change of programme. No wonder such is the case, with popular plays, first-class representations, and a company of merit, equal to any $1.50 production. This week they present When We Were Twenty-one, with Joseph Galbraith as Dick Carewe, Cathrine Countiss in the role originally played by Maxine Elliott, Taylor Holmes, Leonora Bradley, and all the favorites in the cast. Business nearly capacity at every performance. Because She Loved Him So April 25.

George Arvine, the popular leading man of Darcy and Speck's stock company at the Standard Theatre, was honored April 14 with a rousing benefit, the programme being The Three Guardsmen. After the performance a banquet was tendered him at the Hotel Walton.

The company at the Standard offers The Winning Hand as the week's attraction, with Mattie Choate and George Arvine in the leading roles. A Life's Story April 25.

The German stock company at the Arch Street Theatre will soon end its season. Programme for this week: The Oriental Journey, Renaissance, The Matrimonial Nest, An Honest Broker, and The Horner Family. As they must vacate the Arch Street Theatre, the committee appointed by the society are looking around for a site upon which to build a new theatre, to be completed early in the Fall.

Dumont's Minstrels at the Eleventh Street Opera House have three screaming skits—viz.: Buss-Ter Brown at School, Laloo and His Bride, and Consabobocken Curfew Law. On Grand Army Night, April 23, all the songs of the Civil War—1861-65—will be sung.

Bostock's Animal Show at the Palace Exchange is giving big lots for the money, and closes April 30. This is the site leased by Charles B. Dillingham for his new theatre, plans of which are already completed. Work will commence shortly, to be finished within six months.

The Ludlam School of Dramatic Art will give its closing performance at the Garrick Theatre afternoon April 21. The Flying Wedge and Young Mrs. Winthrop will be the double bill. The cast includes several prominent ladies and gentlemen eager for histrionic careers.

The Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' Circus gave a monster night parade April 16, preparatory to their opening the season here April 18 for a stay of two weeks. Everything is bright and new, surpassing all their previous efforts for display and novelties. The Porthos, vaulting cyclists; La Famille Lecusson, Aurora Zouaves, the Eddys, Dare Devil Diacolo in his dangerous bicycle act, Mons. Hubert, Szarvasi Frencz Troupe, and the Four Martineks are the special sensational features. The menagerie department is larger than ever and can be truthfully credited as an enormous, expensive show. Opening to-day and to-night to full capacity.

WASHINGTON.

Clara Bloodgood a Favorite—Julia Marlowe Entertains the Blind.

WASHINGTON, April 18.

Clara Bloodgood, in The Girl with the Green Eyes, appeared to-night at the New National Theatre to a large audience. Robert Drouet, William H. Tooker, Frank Dekum, Grant Mitchell, Grace Henderson, Jeffries Lewis, Rose Flynn, Edith Shayne, Anita Roth, Edith Taliaferro, Elizabeth Emmet, Katherine Bell and Ellen Rowland are important members of the supporting company. Amelia Bingham is the next attraction.

Joseph Hart and Carrie De Mar, in Foxy Grandpa, have a fine opening at the Columbia Theatre, where again the stars and their bright associates, little Georgie Mack and Bobby Harrington, in this up-to-date musical comedy, score a ten-strike. An admirable supporting company lends valuable assistance in an entertainment that is replete with new and enjoyable features. The Bostonians follow.

At the Lafayette Square Opera House the Eugenie Blair stock company commenced at a last Wednesday matinee an indefinite engagement. The opening bill was Camille, which was given an artistic performance, Miss Blair achieving distinct honors in the title role. To-night Sapho is the presentation, and the star is accredited warm praise for a notably strong performance. The company include amongs its principals Harry Keenan, Edward Mulkay, Seth C. Halsey, Joseph Eggenton, Lucia Huxford, Katherine De Barry, Cora Wells and Gertrude Stanley. The Crust of Society is in preparation.

The Little Outcast, with Annie Blancke, opened to a very large house at the Academy of Music, where this talented little comedienne is a hit as Bob the Newsboy. A good company include True S. James, Frederick Monley, Joseph Smiley, W. A. Meckling, Antoinete Smart, Fred Clayton, Florence Cecil and little Irene Meara. Hearts of Oak follows.

At the Empire Theatre Coralie Clifton's company, in Thelma, a dramatization of Marie Corelli's novel, attracted large and appreciative audiences twice to-day. Martha Beaufort, a talented young actress, is successful in the title role, and the supporting company is capable and strong. A Break for Liberty is next week's underline.

The Daughters of the American Revolution are in convention at Chase's Theatre, in their thirteenth continental congress, the session to last during the week.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt; Mr. and Mrs. St. Gordon, of New York; Mr. Putnam, Librarian of Congress, and Mrs. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge occupied a box at the Columbia Theatre Friday to witness the production of Everyman.

The Sousa concert at the New National Friday afternoon presented a rare musical programme, a feature being excerpts from Parsifal. The attendance was large. Estelle Leibling, soprano; Jessie Straus, violinist, and Herbert L. Clarke, cornetist, were accomplished soloists.

At the Saturday matinee of Ingomar at the National Julia Marlowe had as her guests a score or more of blind people, who have had the play read to them in the musical and reading department for the blind at the Congressional Library.

Barnum and Bailey's advance brigade have arrived, and four performances are scheduled for May 9, 10.

Lillian Nordica will give a song recital at the New Willard ball room next Saturday night for the benefit of the National Homeopathic Hospital. This concert, which has the patronage of over a hundred leading society leaders, is under the management and direction of Katie V. Wilson, Washington's leading musical spirit.

JOHN T. WARDE.

PITTSBURGH.

The Darling of the Gods—Farewell of Stock Company at Grand—New Stock.

PITTSBURGH, April 18.

The Darling of the Gods opened to-night at the Nixon, with Blanche Bates and an excellent supporting company, before a well filled house. Madame Butterfly and My Aunt's Advice will be given on Wednesday afternoon with Miss Bates in both plays. Next week, Bertha Galland in Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall.

The Sword of the King is presented at the Grand by the stock company, beginning this afternoon before a fair sized audience. Next week will be the farewell one of the present stock company when The Taming of Helen will be offered. The supplementary season will open May 2 with almost an entirely new organization; the play announced will be Soldiers of Fortune. Charles Richman will be the new leading man, while Minnie Seligman will be the new leading woman. Among the other newcomers will be Charles Wyngate, Emma Dunn, Harry Ryers, and Miss Lytell. Charles Abbe, Robert Wayne, Dennie Harris, and Willis Martin, of the present company, will remain. Captain Barrington and Gismonda will be the following plays thus far announced.

The Bijou has another of its annual favorites this week—The Great White Diamond, acted by a good company and well staged. The house holds a good sized audience to-night, and business will, no doubt, be good. The Smart Set will follow.

Black Patti and her Troubadours have drawn a large audience to the Empire to-night to see the new edition of Darktown's Circus Day. Yon Yonson for the coming week.

Amelia Bingham and her company opened to-night in Olympe at the Alvin. The Frisky Mrs. Johnson will share the week. William Faversham in Lord and Lady Algy will close the Alvin's season next week.

The attendance was large at the Avenue to-day, where a good vaudeville bill is offered for the week.

Fred Belasco and E. D. Price, joint managers of the Alcazar at San Francisco, stopped off here last week while en route to New York city to see the stock company at the Grand, and incidentally to pay a social visit to Manager Harry Davis.

Welcome news is that Minna Philipps, one of the most popular members of last season's stock company at the Grand, will return to this city to play the roles next in importance to Minnie Seligman during the supplementary season of stock at the Grand. Another old favorite, Alice Gale, will also join the company at the same time.

Regarding some of the retiring players of the present stock company at the Grand: William Ingersoll will rest at his Summer home at Gettysburg, opening in vaudeville next Fall; Eva Taylor will sojourn during the Summer abroad; Louise Rial will join the stock company at Montreal; Marion Berg and Ida Adair will rest during the Summer. ALBERT S. L. HEWES.

ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, April 18.

Annie Russell was seen at the Olympic this evening in Mice and Men. The engagement here is more interesting by reason of the fact that Miss Russell still has, as a prominent member of her company, the venerable lady, Mrs. Gilbert. Oswald Yorke and John Mason, favorites here, were splendidly cast. Richard Mansfield follows.

Lew Dockstader returned to the Century last night for the second time this season, which proves the great popularity of the only Lew. The supporting company is the same as on the former visit. Earl of Pawtucket next Sunday.

Murray and Mack, two comedians who occupy a place on the Irish comedy stage similar to that of Weber and Fields in another sphere, came to the Grand Sunday afternoon for a week's engagement in their popular success, A Night on Broadway. Kitty Beck, a soubrette of exceptional charm, continues to give good support. A Night on Broadway is a farcical show filled with quick action and impossible situations, and a prominent feature is, as usual, the supply of music. Hoity Toity underlined.

The Imperial offers another new play this week, Deserted at the Altar. It abounds in sensational scenic effects and thrilling climaxes. It is of the same class as The Fatal Wedding, which has always been a big winner here. Sandy Bottom next attraction.

The work of Rachel Acton, a St. Louis girl, at the Crawford last week placed that talented young lady once more prominently before the public. She gave a truly excellent impersonation of the character of Barbara Hare in the production of East Lynne. Victory Bateman had the part of Lady Isabel and scored her usual success. A juvenile act given during the performance of the drama took well. The Rader Brothers, handsome and talented boys, have all the finish of old performers. The Two Orphans is the attraction at the Crawford this week. Uncle Tom's Cabin follows.

Over Niagara Falls is at Havlin's.

General Cronje and his staff occupied a box at the Grand Friday night as the guests of James K. Hackett.

Maude Lambert, so well and favorably known to St. Louisians by her splendid work with the Castle Square Opera company, and who is to head the Delmar Garden's big production of Louisiana, was in town the first of last week. She left Tuesday night for New York, but will return about May 1 for rehearsals.

Arrangements have been concluded by L. M. Crawford and the manager of the Rose Cecelia Shay Opera company, of Cincinnati, by which this entirely American opera company is to be brought to the Odeon for the first two weeks of May, thus inaugurating the new Odeon régime of which Mr. Crawford is the head. Miss Shay, it is reported, has a complete company of nearly fifty vocal artists and an orchestra of thirty men. The repertoire includes Carmen, Faust, Cavalleria Rusticana, I' Pagliacci, Il Trovatore, and La Bohème.

Mrs. Gus Rogers remained in town last week visiting relatives. A box party was given at the Century Wednesday night in her honor by David Solomon, her cousin.

The latest addition to the mixture of the strange peoples at the World's Fair is the band of one hundred and fifty Moki, Zuni, and Pueblo cliff dwellers, which arrived in the city Thursday night. The band is intended for the city of cliff dwellers on the Pike at the World's Fair. They are headed by their chief, Governor Ramos Archuleta, a member of the San Juan tribe, and have with them their priest, Clauke, besides a great number of the young men and maidens and sages and seers of the tribes. They came from New Mexico and Arizona and were taken immediately to their homes on the Pike. The most striking feature of the party is Archuleta, their hereditary Governor. He is the proud possessor of a cane given to him in 1863 by President Lincoln and a silver medal presented to one of his ancestors in 1837 by President Van Buren. The medal is an heirloom of the rulers of the tribe to which he belongs. One of the cherished possessions of the band is a sacred American eagle, which was brought along with the party. The bird is an ancient one, probably antedating any member of the band. Other live stock is a quantity of rattlesnakes to be used in the Moki snake dance to be given on the Pike. They have also many of their heathen idols, curios and specimens of their basketry, pottery and bead and burnt leather work, with the materials for making more. Many of the Indians are Christians.

Among the visitors to the great World's Fair last week was Henry Clay Barnabee. The venerable actor said: "I have attended all of the notable fairs on both sides of the Atlantic in the last half century, but I'm of the opinion that the St. Louis show sets a new mark. For greatness and beauty there has never been an exposition to approach this one." Mr. Barnabee will return during the Summer and see the exposition in all its glory.

The one hundred and eight residents of the Irish National Exhibition started from Queenstown on April 16, and expect to arrive in St. Louis April 24. This information is contained in advices received by T. F. Hanley, President of the association. The population of the Irish National Exhibition includes a company of eighteen actors of the Irish National Theatre in Dublin. It includes also Martha Ryan, the prize harp player of Ireland, and Lillie Foley, the prize singer. Six prize bagpipe players are also in the party. The rest of the delegation is made up of salespeople and of demonstrators who will show by actual operations how such goods as carpets, linens, lace, etc., are manufactured in Ireland. The exhibit association has received two hundred and fifty-three cases of materials; eleven hundred additional are now in New York, and three hundred additional are on the sea bound for the exposition.

The great organ in Festival Hall will be ready and in use, if not for the opening of the exposition, at least for the World's Press Parliament, which begins May 16. President Francis has ordered the installation of lights on the stage of Festival Hall, where the putting up of the organ is in progress. The experts sent from the works of the Los Angeles Art Organ Company have declared their willingness to work night and day and to sleep in the building in their effort to push the work to completion. There are now on the grounds the first three carloads of sections of the organ known as the Great and Choir organs, and the main blowing plant, as well as the first section of the building frame. The next shipment of the organ is now on the way in three cars, including two divisions of the Swell organ, the Solo organ and a portion of the Pedal organ. The last shipment comprises seven cars, and includes the Pedal organ and pipes, which will leave Los Angeles as soon as the work has progressed sufficiently in St. Louis to make them necessary.

George C. Hale, president of the Hale Fire Fighters' Exhibition Company on the Pike, and president also of the National Firemen's Association, has notified the Committee on Ceremonies that the association will hold a tournament here on Aug. 22 to 27 inclusive, and that prizes amounting to $10,000 will be awarded to the winners.

General Cronje, one of the several grand old men of the Transvaal Republic, arrived in St. Louis April 8, in company with 200 other Boers, all of whom will be seen at the World's Fair. General Cronje fought well at several places, and was one of the mainstays of the Boer army in the field. He was finally captured through a surrender, and, like Napoleon, was sent back to St. Helena. Unlike Napoleon, he came back. This champion of the Transvaal is 68 years old, and is accompanied by his nephew and grandson and his secretary, who acts as interpreter. The Boer party came to St. Louis in twenty coaches, carrying, besides 200 men, women and children, a heavy outfit that will be employed in showing the methods of the South African Dutch in pursuit of the arts of peace and war. The Boers will be one of the big Pike attractions.

J. A. NORTON.

BALTIMORE.

The Bostonians and the Lilliputians—United States Marine Band Concerts—Sousa.

BALTIMORE, April 18.

The Bostonians appeared at Ford's Grand Opera House this evening in The Serenade. They will present The Serenade Tuesday night and at the matinee Wednesday. Wednesday and Thursday nights and at Saturday's matinee Robin Hood, by Smith and De Koven, will be played, and on Friday and Saturday nights, for the first time in this city, The Queen of Laughter, which is equally impressive in its beauty, tunefulness and sparking melody. In the cast will be H. C. Barnabee, Gertrude Zimmer, and Agnes Brown. Next week, The Man from China.

The Royal Lilliputians in Gulliver's Travels is the attraction at the Maryland this week. A few of those in the cast are: James Rosen, Louis Merkle, Tom Platt, Prince Giovanni, Al. Rice, Herbert Rice, Queen Mab, Selma Gorrner, and Martha Weis. Next attraction, Happy Hooligan.

Charley's Aunt is the offering at Chase's Theatre by the Fawcett company. Frank Craven, whose ability as a comedian is recognized by the patrons of this popular playhouse, plays the title-role, in which he gains new laurels. Supporting Mr. Craven are Laura McGilvray, Alfred Hudson, Jr., Alice Butler, Adolphe Lestina, Florence Roston, Thornton Alexander, Charles Gay, George Schraeder, and Molly Brady. The play selected for next week is Nathan Hale.

At the Bijou Peck's Bad Boy is presented. Helen Myrtle and the comedian, Harry Willis, are the bright particular stars. The play is full of witty lines, humorous scenes, and is musically ludicrous. At the close of the week, Thelma.

The Smart Set is the attraction at the Holliday Street this week. The cast is made up of such performers as Earnest Hogan, John Bally, Tom Brown, Ed Green, Harry Reed, and Lawrence Chenault. A Little Outcast will follow.

Arrangements have been completed by the management of the Lyric whereby the United States Marine Band will be the opening musical attraction for the season of "pop" concerts. Efforts have been repeatedly made in former years to secure this great American band, but the authorities in Washington always were unwilling to grant the necessary permission. These concerts will begin a little earlier this year than last, and the opening concert will be Monday night, May 2.

George Morris, who played the millionaire father in Florence Bindley's production of A Midnight Marriage at the Holliday Street last week, carried his right arm in a sling for several days as the result of an accident which almost caused him the loss of his hand. Mr. Morris was making a tour of the fire ruins Monday last, when a man carrying a large pane of glass accidentally collided with him. Mr. Morris at first did not realize that his hand had been injured, but discovered presently that an ugly three-cornered gash had been made. Nothing serious was anticipated until Wednesday, when the hand and arm began to swell. Mr. Morris immediately consulted a physician, and by the last of the week his hand was healing rapidly.

Charles Grapewin, who played in The Awakening of Mr. Pipp at the Academy of Music last week, umpired a baseball game Friday afternoon between the Orioles and "Foreman's Swatters," an aggregation of professional players gotten together for the contest by "Grand Army" Frank Foreman, which, after a hard fight, resulted in favor of the Orioles, the score being 8 to 7.

John Philip Sousa and his band came back to Baltimore Friday last, after an absence of more than a year and a half, and that his popularity with Baltimoreans has in no manner diminished was shown by the size of the audiences at the three concerts. The soloists were: Estelle Liebling, soprano; Jessie Straus, violinist, and Herbert L. Clarke, cornetist. The Parsifal selections were the most interesting to the music lovers who filled the auditorium.

HAROLD RUTLEDGE.

CINCINNATI.

Maude Adams—Marie Tempest Kate Claxton —New Summer Park.

CINCINNATI, April 18.

Maude Adams opened her engagement at the Grand to-night in The Pretty Sister of Jose. It was her first appearance here in more than three years, and a goodly audience was on hand to greet her. In the company are Henry Ainley, G. Harrison Hunter, Joseph Francoeur, Edgar Selwyn, Mrs. W. G. Jones, Katherine Proctor and others. Francis Wilson follows in Erminie.

Katherine Willard opened as Aria in The Power Behind the Throne at the Walnut yesterday. Both play and star were new to this city, and both made a most pleasing impression. The Runaways is the underline.

Kate Claxton opened what bids fair to be a very successful engagement at Robinson's yesterday, presenting The Two Orphans. Mary Stewart Cone, a well-known Cincinnati girl, is a prominent member of the company.

Die Schoene Schwaebin was the bill of the German company last night. Their season will end April 24.

The new Summer park, of which mention was made some weeks ago, is to be called Monarch Park. Vaudeville will be one of its principal attractions, and the managers now expect to have everything in readiness for the opening May 1. If they succeed it will be in the field several weeks in advance of any of the other parks.

Selma Herman yesterday began her Spring season with a stock company at the Lyceum, the first play to be presented being Between Love and Duty. The engagement is an indefinite one.

Marie Tempest enjoyed a fine week's business at the Grand last week. Nothing better of its kind than The Marriage of Kitty has been seen here in a long time, and Miss Tempest and her admirable little company won unstinted praise for their admirable performances.

Maude Adams will spend much of her time at the Grand this week rehearsing The Little Minister, which she will use almost exclusively on her tour of the Pacific Coast.

Le Voyage de Berluron, by Ordonneau and Grenet, first presented in Paris last July, will be played at the Auditorium Saturday under the auspices of L'Alliance Francaise of this city. If successful, other French plays in the original will follow from time to time. H. A. SUTTON.

THE TOEDTEBERG SALE.

1929 Greene (Nathaniel). Engraved Portrait. "Nathaniel Greene, Major General in the American Armies—A Patriot, a Hero, and a Friend." Figures typifying Wisdom and Valor standing on either side of an engraved portrait of General Greene, which is about to be placed on a monument erected in his honor. Engraved by Chevillet after C. W. Peale. Very rare. Paris, no date. Bought by Joseph Sabin, $11.50.

ALFRED BECK.

AMATEUR NOTES.

The Sock and Buskin Club of Brown University, Providence, R. I., produced its annual play at the Providence Opera House on April 12. This year the dramatic society put on The Rivals. Manager Jutter spent much time with the details of the elaborate costumes. Prof. Thomas Crosby, Jr., whose histrionic talent would rank high even among professional actors, coached the cast, as usual. Although only two of last year's cast took part in the production, Hoffman, '04, and Hutchison, '05, plenty of new and promising material was developed. Prince, '04, seemed at home in the part of the irascible, but well-meaning old father, Sir Anthony Absolute. McGough, '05, delighted his friends by his clever work as Sir Lucius O'Trigger. Mackenzie, '04, as Fag; Moulton, '06, as David, and Mayo, '05, as Faulkland, did faithful and conscientious work. The female characters, as played by Nickerson, '06, Heydon, '05, and McCann, '07, were marvels of femininity. Nickerson, as Lydia Languish and McCann, as Lucy, her maid, were the prettiest girls the Sock and Buskin has ever had. Heydon got many laughs as Mrs. Malaprop.

The Montclair society last Wednesday filled the Club Hall, where the Triangle Club, of Princeton, made it first appearance in its new play, The Man from Where. The collegians made a hit, the music of the play being especially good. The Man from Where is a musical comedy. The plot deals with the financial troubles of a United States Minister, the matrimonial ambition of a President of a South American republic, the political aspirations of a chef and the operations of an American monopoly. This was the cast: Evenon Wilcox Telfair, U. S. Minister to Rio, H. O. Milliken; Pokeberry, K. R. McAlpin; Reginald Telfair, W. S. Katzenbach; Winston Willis, Joseph R. Truesdale; Hon. Methridates Quegg of the Pickle Trust, T. E. Hardenburg; De Wolf Hopington, J. L. Martin; Senor Malatesta, H. L. Mills; A. Toreador, C. T. Tittman; Nancy Telfair, G. T. Bispham; Mrs. Telfair, S. H. Lewisohn; Margaret Dudley, R. S. Barbee; General Roman Claire, G. L. Burton; Captain Cassini, H. S. Jones; Lieutenant Blanco, E. J. Koheler. The Man from Where will be seen in New York, in Carnegie Lyceum, April 30.

Much Ado About Nothing was produced at Fay House, Radcliffe, Cambridge, Mass., by the college girls, last Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoon. The performances constituted one of the most important and brilliant events of the whole season in the most select circles of Boston and Cambridge society. The play was presented under the auspices of the Idlers' Club. The setting of the drama was essentially Elizabethan, although no attempt was made to have every detail an absolutely correct copy of the style of the days of Queen Bess. No scenery was used upon the stage, and there was no orchestra to render music between the acts. Music was provided, however, whenever it was called for. This was the cast: Don Pedro, Margherita Sargent, '04; Don John, Louisa Richardson, '05; Claudio, Mabel Bowker, '04; Benedick, Ruth Delano, grad.; Leonato, Eva Jackson, '05; Antonio, Susan Hallowell, '05; Balthasar, Louise Booth, '07; Conrade, Ruth Dallinger, '06; Borachio, Kathleen Drew, '07; Friar Francis, Emily Adams, '04; Dogberry, Amy Brooks, '05; Virges, Charlotte Adams, '06; Sexton, Sally Dawes, '06; Hero, Beatrice Maccabe, special; Beatrice, Marion Hay, '05; Margaret, C. Virginia Tanner, '05, Ursula, Mary Wilson, '05. The coming presentations of Much Ado About Nothing will probably be the last dramatic performances of importance that will be given in the Fay House auditorium, as the new theatre will soon be ready. The hard work of arranging for the presentation of the drama has been in the hands of the following young women: Business-managers, Amy Brooks, '05; Elizabeth P. Daniell, '06, and Marion E. Chase, '05; costume managers, Ethel M. Winwood, '05, and Anna S. McDonald, '06; stage-managers, Marjorie T. Gregg, '05, and Mabel R. Wilson, '04.

The Societe Francaise of Columbia University presented last Thursday night two bright little French plays, entitled Les Vivacites du Capitaine Tic and Les Suites d'un Premier Lit, in the Brinckerhoff Theatre of Barnard College. The following were the casts: Les Suites d'un Premier Lit, a comedy in one act: Trebuchard, R. C. Hoguet, 1905, L.; Prudenval, V. de Beaumont, Ph.; Piquaiseau, J. Marsching, Pol., S.; Blanche, O. R. Houston, 1904; Claire Prudenval, Carita Spencer; Raguine, Dorothy Canfield. Les Vivacites du Capitaine Tic, a comedy in three acts: Le Capitaine Tic, R. C. Hoguet, 1905, L.; Desambois, F. Lage, 1907, S.; Celestin Magis, V. de Beaumont, Ph.; Bernard, J. Marsching, Pol., S.; Babtiste, C. Collins, Ph.; Madame de Guy Robert, C. Spencer; Lucille, D. Canfield. Invites: Miss Ray, Miss Fontaine, E. Kehrlein, 1907; W. A. Tice, 1904, and B. Spencer, 1907, S.

Members of the Educational Alliance and a number of their friends last Saturday night gave a second production of Belasco and De Mille's three-act comedy, Lord Chumley. The entertainment was under the direction of William C. De Mille. The hall, at 197 East Broadway, where the production took place, was filled. It was a success.

Yorktown, 1781, is the title of an interesting play given recently by the senior class of New York University in the gymnasium, at University Heights. The play was written by Arthur E. Howe, of the university. The play is laid in an old mansion in Yorktown on the eve before the surrender of Cornwallis.

The Dream of Queen Elizabeth, a musical extravaganza by Mrs. Albert Clifford Barney, was produced by amateurs on Tuesday night, April 12, at the Lafayette Theatre, Washington, D. C., to a house crowded with Washington's best people. It was a great success. This was the cast: Queen Elizabeth, Mrs. Fremont; Marchioness of Cobham, Miss Durand; Viscountess of Shrewsbury, Marion Oliver; Hon. Audley Manners, Miss Sargent; Lady Arabella Stewart, Miss McCauley; Lady Sybil Southwick, Miss Grosvenor; Vivian, Miss De Kay; Lady Lettice Knollys, Mrs. Noyes; Two Dutch peasants (attendants of Holbein), Misses Fremont; Pocahontas, Miss Doering; James of Scotland, George A. Bentley, Jr.; Earl of Leicester, Alfred Hopkins; Sir Francis Drake, Lieut. H. V. Butler, U. S. N.; Sir Walter Raleigh, Captain Beach; Sir Francis Bacon, Gist Blair; William Shakespeare, James Lounsberry; Stenie (favorite of James), Lieut. R. C. Bulner, U. S. N.; Merlin (magician), France Rummell; Hans Holbein, Hunt Diedrich; Herald, Paymaster V. S. Jackson, U. S. N.; Powhattan, Charles Howard; Page, Walter Rummell; Bruce (bagpipe player to James), Frank Ashton; Sword Bearer to Queen, Charles Remey; Court Singer, Tom Greene; A Merry Cus, Frederick Faust. Court Ladies—Mrs. Kearny, Grace Bell, Miss Siebert, Mrs. Becker, Miss Ely, Miss Emery, Mrs. Harlow, Miss Stickney, Miss Shepard, Mrs. Bennett, Miss Parker, Miss Van Reypan, Miss Poor, Miss Colton, Miss Sawtell, and Miss Mattingly. Mistresses of the Robes—Miss Schroder, Miss Ridgley, Miss Warren, Miss Goldsborough, Jean Loring, Mary Goldsborough, Ethel Seckendorff, Miss Walker, Annett Townsend, Jean Crosby, Miss Miller, and Shelby Converse. Spanish Prisoners of War—Mrs. Bowen, Florence Worthington, Miss Alvarez-Calderon, Miss Janin, Miss Bailey, Elizabeth Davis, Miss Graham-Bell, Helen Humphrey, Louie Jones, Miss Dodge, Miss Southerland, Miss Errol-Brown, Miss Logan, Miss Howard, Rosita Alvarez-Calderon, Alfredo Alvarez-Calderon, and Blanquita Alvarez-Calderon.

The Fleur-de-Lis Musical and Dramatic Club entertained its friends last Wednesday evening at the Odeon in St. Louis, with a programme, followed by a dance. Vocal and instrumental numbers, a monologue entitled The Suburban Quartette, and a one-act farce entitled My Neighbor's Wife, constituted the programme. The club was formed about three years ago by a number of young people. Meetings for entertainment and study are held every two weeks. The principal members of the club are: Ed Musick, Robert Ellis, Elmer Brown, Bessie Musick, Pauline Jones, Alice Jones, and Jessie Rice.

The Amateur Players' Club offered Tom Cobb at the New Century Drawing Room, Philadelphia, last Monday evening, for the benefit of the students' ward in the University Hospital. The leading character, Colonel O'Fipp, was taken by Dr. William S. Wadsworth, while Harriet Cheshire played the part of Matilda O'Fipp, his daughter.

The students of Syracuse University gave the first production of King Lear at the Burtis Opera House here Monday evening, April 11, before an audience that packed the theatre. Frederick D. Losey, professor of English in the university, played Lear. There was nothing of the amateur in his work. The other parts were in the hands of Syracuse University students, who did creditably. The play was put on in Syracuse last Tuesday and Wednesday, and then was taken to Rochester.

In the successful presentation of the opera, Powhatan, at the Warrington Opera House, in Oak Park, Chicago, on April 7, Edna Kannenberg represented Winona and Stella Branch and May Dungan were among the group of pretty girls in the American beauty dance. The opera included in its cast the following: Powhatan, Nathaniel Board; Laughing Star, Grace Cook; Pocahontas, Edna McClevey; Minnehaha, Stella Hitchcock; Captain John Smith, G. Roy Hall; Captain Rolfe, George Pither; Pathfinder, Frank Stanwood; Medicine Man, T. C. Wood; Lieutenant Cameron, Earnest Pither; Sunbeam, Little Alicia Smith.

The High School students at Davenport, Ia., gave an excellent performance of Down in Dixie at the Turner Grand Opera House on April 8 to an S. R. O. house. The school orchestra, Professor Ernst Otto, director, helped to make the affair a success. Fritz Singer was the stage director. Rolff Otteson, Maturin L. Fisher, Ferdinand Davis, Frank M. Ingram, James W. Gronen, Paul Preston, Ferdinand Schlapkohl, Ernest Peters, Alice Mae Emeis, Pearl J. Klein, Bessie Hender, and Viola Radenbough took part in the play.

San Francisco Chronicle, March 7, 1904.—Daniel Sully is always natural and sincere, and The Chief Justice suits his sentimental temperament. The play is brightly written and smoothly constructed.

Katrina	Miss Barnes
Esther	Miss Petrie

At the Lyric Theatre last Friday afternoon Wilton Lackaye, assisted by other members of The Pit company, gave a special performance of Henrik Ibsen's Pillars of Society for the benefit of the Professional Woman's League. Despite the fact that the performance was in aid of a large association and that the play—one of Ibsen's greatest—had not been performed in New York in many seasons, the audience was comparatively small. As things turned out this was rather a fortunate circumstance. The serious minded who stopped away were saved from bitter disappointment, and the frivolous persons who were not present missed only an opportunity to again cast unjust slurs upon the splendid old man of Norway.

With Mr. Lackaye's misrepresentation of Pillars of Society following close upon the mutilation of Rosmersholm by the Century Players, it would seem that some law should be passed to protect Ibsen from those in America who think and call themselves his disciples. The idea prevails among a considerable number of actors that Ibsen's plays are so great that they play themselves. This, truly, is most complimentary, but the results are disastrous to the dramatist. And the player who addresses himself to the task of presenting an Ibsen drama with this false assumption forgets, apparently, that a large percentage of theatregoers are acquainted with Ibsen's plays in print, and have, perchance, seen them acted by intelligent, careful and well-rehearsed foreign players. Mr. Lackaye ventured to play the chief role in Pillars of Society without troubling himself to learn the lines and, it seemed, without having made more than a superficial study of the character. Some of the other roles were well played, but the performance as a whole was pitifully crude and unintelligent. It was, altogether, a piece of impertinence in art.

Pillars of Society is notable among Ibsen's plays inasmuch as it was one of the earliest of the great Norwegian's keen psychological dramas. Prior to writing it he had devoted his pen chiefly to poetic subjects. Then came to him the spirit of revolt against political and social shams and injustices, and of this new-awakened spirit was born Pillars of Society. The play was written nearly thirty years ago, and after its production in Norway it speedily commanded attention throughout Europe. In 1889 it was first presented in New York, in German; in 1891 it was played in English at the Lyceum Theatre, and shortly afterward it was presented at Hammerstein's Opera House.

In view of present social conditions in America the revival of Pillars of Society at this time was particularly appropriate, and had the presentation been worthy the play would, no doubt, have made even a deeper impression than it did when acted here before. While hosts of dramas written during the last score of years have come to seem hopelessly old-fashioned, this play, by virtue of its revelation of eternal human nature, is as fresh and as real to-day as when it was penned. Only in the final act is there a suggestion of old ways and old days. Were Ibsen to grapple with the problem of Pillars of Society again it is probable that the last act would be decidedly different both as to dramatic construction and philosophy.

To an average audience Pillars of Society is perhaps more appealing than are the majority of Ibsen's plays. In it the onward march of doom is not so apparent at the outset as is the case, for example, in Ghosts. Chance and circumstance, at times, seem to take precedence over fate. Consul Bernick, around whom the whole tale is woven, has, in certain episodes, some hope of escaping disaster, and at the last, indeed, he is permitted to see the rainbow that follows the storm. Ibsen rarely lifts the clouds from his final picture. Bernick, the leading citizen of his native town, respected because of his wealth and honored because of his reputed moral character, is in reality a weak, craven-hearted man whose fear of public censure leads him to contemplate acts in shifting the reproach of his own misdeeds upon the shoulders of others. Yet in so doing he genuinely feels that he is acting for the good of the social system in which he is an important planet. In his younger years he was concerned in a disgraceful liaison and became the father of an illegitimate child. To preserve his own good name he makes his closest friend, Johan Tonnesen, who is about starting for America, the scapegoat for his sin. He proves false to a noble woman to whom he has paid his addresses, and marries a girl whom he does not love in order to come into possession of her fortune. Meanwhile he engages in swindling enterprises—always within the law—and is held up as a model citizen. The return to the town of Johan and Lona—the woman to whom he was engaged—brings fear, and, finally, remorse, upon him, and at the last his conscience forces him to make a public confession of his misdeeds. This confession, it is argued in the final scene, opens the way for Bernick to lead a nobler life, and incidentally benefits the townspeople by breaking down some of their narrow, selfish prejudices. The play pictures conditions that have existed, in a greater or less degree, in all civilized communities, and that will likely endure through all time. Whether the drama is presented in Christiania or Cincinnati, its shafts of truth are pretty sure to strike as near home as one's next door neighbor.

Mr. Lackaye's Consul Bernick was almost wholly inadequate. It was a composite of melodramatic characters rather than a distinct portrait of an individual. In certain scenes he depicted the pitiful fear of a weak man in rather telling fashion, but the effect was spoiled by the lack of contrast. His make-up consisted principally of a grotesque beard of magnificent proportions, which he fumbled with constantly. And, as has been said, he was distressingly unfamiliar with his lines.

William O. Hazeltine came very near to being a splendid Rector Rorlund. He grasped the meaning of the part—which is a trying one—and he played it with intelligence, certainty and artistic excellence. White Whittlesey was an admirable Johan Tonnesen—buoyant, vigorous, manly and natural. A. H. Stuart gave a picturesque and very acceptable portrayal of the old shipwright, Aune, and the three character old men—Rummel, Vigeland and Sandstad—were in the capable hands of Joseph Wilkes, Hale Hamilton and Howard Boulden. The name of the actor who played Hilmar did not appear on the programme, which circumstance was not altogether unfortunate for the actor

Olive Oliver's Lona Hessel was one of the strong redeeming features of the performance. Her impersonation was human through and through, and she brought out finely the dramatic qualities of the role. Jane Oaker played Dina Dorp very agreeably, with girlish charm, and, when occasion demanded, with fervor. Margaret Kenman was an exceedingly good Martha—a pathetic character indeed—and in spirit she was perfectly in tune with the play. Maude Wilson was an acceptable Mrs. Bernick, and Mrs. Agnes Findlay did a capital bit of character acting as Mrs. Rummel.

The minor roles were in fairly good hands. The one setting displayed was suitable. Some of the groupings were good, but the stage management for the most part was of a helter-skelter sort. The climax of the third act was spoiled by the most laughable, amateurish thunder-storm ever seen in a first-class theatre, and there were other mechanical hitches of an amusing nature. William Archer's translation of the play was used—or, misused.

Wallack's—Love's Pilgrimage.

Play in four acts by Horace B. Fry. Produced April 14.

Captain Graydon	Nestor Lennon
Edgar Deal Norton	Guy Bates Post
John Short	Forbes Curtis
Jem Mason	Nagle Barry
Ben Lowrey	Edmund D. Lyons
Chaplain Ellis	R. Erlynn
Dr. Longman	Richard Clarke
Arthur Conway	W. S. Hart
Mr. Glasgow	J. Ayres
Mr. M. T. Fleming	L. Rogers Lytton
Mr. Abbott	Harold Mead
John O'Flaherty	Frank McCormack
Mr. Robert Jeffrey	Douglas J. Wood
Mrs. St. John Wilcott	Rosalie de Vaux
Mrs. Wrentham	Miriam Hutchins
Miss Emma Lagrange	Renee Clarence
Little Dorrit	Baby Zylah Shannon
Miss Glasgow	Mary Gardner
Nan	Fanny Marinoff
Dorothy Graydon	Carlotta Nillson

Not even as a medium for the display of Carlotta Nillson's undoubted talents can Love's Pilgrimage be commended. Its author, Horace B. Fry, is a man of ripe culture, large experience as an observer and student of the stage, and in Little Italy he contributed a really fine little tragedy to the none too ample list of worthy American dramatic works. But none of these qualifications can be traced in the verbose, prosy, old-fashioned and inept drama that was disclosed at the special matinee in Wallack's last Thursday afternoon before a large audience, highly flavored with professionals. Even these special-matinee enthusiasts were bored as this pilgrimage to nowhere dragged its weary length along.

The story is clogged by wordy details, but in outline it concerns the love of Dorothy Graydon, daughter of the governor of a Tasmanian prison, for a political prisoner, Arthur Conway. This hero escapes to America, with Dorothy's aid, and she is left behind to bear him a child and meet the advances of a man who is willing to be a father to the nameless offspring and whose wishes are seconded by her own father. Her faith in Conway, whose wife she considers herself to be in feeling if not in fact, remains steadfast. To escape marriage with Norton she, too, escapes by a vessel to America. When her departure is discovered the clergyman who was to have performed the marriage ceremony lifts up his voice in prayer and her father drops dead. Conway has changed his name and is living on Staten Island with the wife he took unto himself after he heard a report of Dorothy's death. The old love and the child appear on the scene. Conway's wife elopes with a yachtsman, leaving the coast clear for a divorce and Conway's marriage to the loyal and loving Dorothy. That is the substance of the plot, but it is more or less covered by a multiplicity of futile incidents participated in by characters of little dramatic value or interest.

Mr. Fry has evidently attempted to blend psychology with melodrama, but the result is incongruous and at times ludicrous. The dialogue is for the most part written in a ponderous, artificial vein, without regard for the spoken effect. In the first act there are a few moments of dramatic interest, and again in the last act there is a scene of genuine pathos and power when Dorothy and Conway meet after their long and eventful separation. But these oases, while they relieve, do not counterbalance the desert of dullness presented by the rest of the play.

Miss Nillson is a young actress who possesses real abilities along certain lines. If she ever gets "placed" she should make her mark. She has unusual sensibility, a delicately responsive temperament, and she aims to produce emotional effects by the repressed method. The last scene of this play she acted with exquisite feeling, and there were one or two opportunities in the first and second acts of which she took advantage. On the other hand, Miss Nillson has several pronounced faults which should be corrected. Her enunciation is bad, and having a weak voice, many of her lines were unintelligible, if not inaudible. She indulges in an excess of facial movement, twisting and distorting a pretty mouth grotesquely. She carries repression in certain directions so far that an impression of vagueness and inadequacy is produced. Definiteness, incisiveness, clarity—these should be cultivated by Miss Nillson, whose intelligence and talent are much above the average. The play she appeared in would have handicapped any actress, and Miss Nillson accomplished as much as could be reasonably expected in such a cruel part as Dorothy in such a hopeless play as Love's Pilgrimage.

Mr. Lennon furnished unintentional mirth as Captain Graydon. His pomposity of voice and ramrod bearing were amusing. Mr. Post struggled helplessly to give the wicked Norton a semblance of relationship to humanity. Edmund Lyons—who directed the performance—was applauded for his performance of a bibulous prison warder, not because it was a skilful performance, but because his work is popular with the actors in front. Mr. Hart was earnest as Conway. Mr. McCormack contributed a capital character sketch of an Irish politician. The other parts were acted for what little they were worth.

New Star—Driven from Home.

Melodrama, in four acts, by Hal Reid. Produced April 11, 1904.

Margie Maynard	Patrice
John Maynard	Walter Wilson
Tom Anderson	Charles Hutchinson
Hamilton Van Cruger	Albert Andruss
Dave Maynard	Albert Parker
Ezekiel Smart	Thomas Norton
Silas Schroads	Arthur J. Coleman
Jonathan Willoughby	Charles J. White
Officer Mulcahey	Frank O'Neil
Mary Maynard	Marie Dantes
Violet Munro	Leila E. Davis
Prudence Moore	Lottie Hyde

Driven from Home, a recent melodrama from the pen of Hal Reid, was produced at the New Star last week, with Patrice in the principal role as the suffering heroine. The presentation was successful, and attracted a large business, Patrice and a clever company dealing effectively with the complications of a rather irrational plot.

The chief character of the story is a puritanical father, who rules his household with fanatical severity. He misunderstands an innocent complication involving his daughter's love affair, and thinks she has disgraced him. Refusing to listen to her explanation, he turns her out of doors, together with a crippled brother who has taken his sister's part, and shares her exile. The brother is a self-taught genius, whose skill with the pencil and brush has been severely discouraged by his unsympathetic father. Removed from the paternal tyranny, his ability finds a free outlet, he becomes an accomplished artist, and protects his sister, whose affairs are at last concluded happily.

Patrice, as Margie Maynard, the ill-treated daughter, handled her role with an abundance of emotional power, and emphasized the lighter portions with sprightly and capricious humor.

Walter Wilson, in the very prominent role of John Maynard, the father, made a great hit by his fine impersonation, carefully and skilfully enacted.

Leila E. Davis, as Violet Munro, the heroine's relentless enemy, was a charmingly guileful schemer, who gloated at appropriate intervals over the success of her wicked doings. Albert Andruss, as Hamilton Van Cruger, Violet's side partner in villainy, gave a polished and emphatic sketch of a conventional plotter. Marie Dantes, as Mary Maynard, the blind mother, was especially effective in this interesting role. The Tom Anderson of Charles Hutchinson was well managed, although the part did not allow him much scope. Thomas Norton, as Ezekiel Smart, made the most of his lines and extracted considerable comedy from the part. Albert Parks, as Dave Maynard, gave, in his realistic impersonation of the crippled brother, a most painstaking and affecting presentment. Arthur J. Coleman, as Silas Schrode, made a marked impression by his natural and direct methods. The Jonathan Willoughby of Charles J. White was given with a quiet humor and earnestness that were noticeable. Frank O'Neil and Lottie Hyde were also commendable in their minor roles. This week, Child Slaves of New York.

Murray Hill—Christopher, Jr.

The Henry V. Donnelly Stock company at the Murray Hill Theatre presents this week Madeleine Lucette Ryley's capital comedy, Christopher, Jr. The audience yesterday afternoon was large and the performance was accompanied by almost continuous laughter and applause.

While the principal players were not seen to the best advantage in the piece, they played, nevertheless, with vim and good farcical spirit. William Bramwell as Christopher Colt, Jr., was active, manly and humorous, and Edna Phillips as Dora was as sweet and gracious as might be. William J. Butler was an excellent Colt, Sr.; Eugene Frazier played Bellaby very acceptably, George Farren was a delightful Mr. Simpson, and Priestly Morrison as Mr. Glibb was up to his usual standard of excellence. Rose Swain played Nelly in her customary bright and pleasing fashion. The other roles were in capable hands. Next week, The Maister of Woodbarrow.

West End.

Arizona proved to be a popular attraction at the West End Theatre last week. Despite its many representations in New York it still commands interest. It was well played by a company including Joseph Greene, John T. Burke, John Ferris, Eleanor Wilton, Ida Hamilton, Ruth Hayes, Francis M. Ball, Alma Bradley, Hermann Lieb, Sue Belle Meade, Ben Deane, Charles M. Harris, Escamillio Fernandez, Charles E. Graham, H. Bradley Barker, and Charles Ayers. The scenery, by Walter Burridge and Charles H Ritter, is very picturesque. This week's attraction is Alice Nielsen in The Fortune Teller, and the variety of offerings at this house, suggested by this succession, affords its patrons a great diversity of entertainment.

Fifty-eighth Street - Sky Farm.

Crowded houses were the rule at every performance of Sky Farm last week. George T. Meech as Rev. Milo Towers gave a forceful characterization, while Harry Mills as "Neighbor Nixon" won much deserved applause. Frederick Burton, who played Stephen Tully, is a clever comedian and kept the audiences roaring with laughter. Marie Boland as Marigold Towers made a charming heroine, and Adele Lane as Jonquil could not have been improved upon. Others who deserve mention are Edward Copely as Sleepy Jackson, Arthur H. Ebbets as Warren Breese and Josephine Bacon as Abby Collett. This week Lottie Williams in Only a Shop Girl is the attraction.

Third Avenue—Human Hearts.

Human Hearts is in town again, and met with its customary success at the Third Avenue. A. J. Edwards made a fine looking and manly Tom Logan; Harry Madison played the father; Sadie Stockton, the mother; Carrol J. Barrymore, his brother; Grace Lockwood, his wife, Jeannette, and Baby Norman, the little daughter. Grace. Edwin B. Bailey was the villain, Frederick Armsdale. Mae Halton was a lovable Ruth Larkins, and W. J. Sully a capital good-natured tramp. Next week, The Wayward Son.

At Other Playhouses.

New Hudson.—Henry Miller and Margaret Anglin appeared here last night in Camille. Note of the performance will be made in The Mirror next week.

Lyric.—Wang was revived at this house last night by De Wolf Hopper. The Mirror will give further note of the event next week.

Fourteenth Street.—The Black Hand is the attraction for the week.

American.—Haverly's Minstrels is the bill at this house.

Grand.—Pegky from Paris is the bill.

Majestic.—This is the last fortnight of The Wizard of Oz at this house.

Vaudeville.—This is Candida's last week in New York.

Metropolis.—Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon in Sherlock Holmes furnish an excellent attraction this week.

Daly's.—The Prince of Pilsen has but ten more days to run at Daly's Theatre before it closes its American season and will be sent by Henry W. Savage to the Shaftesbury Theatre, London, where it will open on Saturday, May 14. John W. Ransone will continue to play the role of Hans Wagner; Trixie Friganza will be the Widow; Arthur Donaldson has been engaged to play the part he originated, the title role; Albert Parr will be the Lieutenant; Mattie Nichols will play Sidonie; Eva Westcott will be seen as Jimmy; Victor Morley will be the Artie, and Sherman Wade has resumed his old role of Francois. All these are in the cast this week. The company will sail on the Etruria on April 30.

Irving Place.—This week brings the farewell performances of Ferdinand Bonn and Rudolf Christians, who appeared jointly in Zapfenstreich (Tattoo) last night, and will repeat the performance to-night (Tuesday). On Wednesday Nathan der Weise will be given, with the two stars in the principal roles. Thursday will be devoted to Ansengruber's Der Pfarrer von Kirchfeld, with Herr Christians in the title role. Schillers's Die Raeuber, with Herr Bonn as Franz Moor and Herr Christians as his brother Karl, is billed for Friday evening, while on Saturday the comedy, Krieg im Frieden, with Rudolf Christians as Reif-Reiflingen, will be produced both afternoon and evening. Herr Christians will terminate his engagement on Monday, April 25, in Romeo and Juliet. He will start for Europe the following day on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse.

ONE-ACT TRAGEDY PRODUCED.

A Little Tragedy at Tien-Tsin, a one-act play by Frances Aymar Matthews, was produced for the first time on any stage at Proctor's Theatre, Newark, N. J., on April 11. Robert Loraine headed the company, and the production was under the direction of William A. Brady. The story concerns Cecil Winton, an English officer, who meets with an accident before the door of Ah Chang. Ah Chang is absent, but his wife, Wing Tee, takes in the stranger, whom she nurses back to health. A treacherous Chinese doctor, hating the "foreign devils," spies on the wife and informs the husband upon his return of the liason. When the play begins Winton is making love to Wing Tee, though only half-jokingly, since he has a sweetheart in London. Wing Tee, however, takes his wooing in earnest, as does the husband upon his return. The latter watches, learns the truth and puts poison in a jar of preserved ginger, which he persuades Winton to eat while professing to extend hospitality to him, and later strangles the unfaithful spouse. Mr. Loraine as Ah Chang did exceptionally fine work, especially in his scene with Winton over the ginger jar, and so merged his identity into that of the character assumed as to completely disguise his personality. Clifford Constable, who impersonated the English officer, did splendidly. Ruby Bridges as Wing Tee, Justine Cutting as Amah, the nurse, and Bert Tucman as Ling Chow, the doctor, played in a pleasing and intelligent manner.

Robert Rogers and Louise Mackintosh, at liberty. Joint engagement, comedy and character, 7 East Thirty-first Street.

MRS. JONES'S BIRTHDAY.

Mrs. W. G. Jones, who is, except for Mrs. Gilbert, the oldest actress now before the American public, celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday on April 15, in St. Louis, where she was playing, with Maude Adams in The Pretty Sister of Jose.

Mrs. Jones was born in Chatham, England, and came to America when a child. At the age of nine she made her stage debut as the Duke of York to the Richard the Third of Junius Brutus Booth. During her long career Mrs. Jones has played every line of parts, in company with almost every famous star of the American stage, and the plays in which she has appeared comprise practically the whole repertoire of the standard English drama.

In her youth, it is said, Mrs. Jones was the sprightliest of stage children; as the leading lady at the Old Bowery she won by her grace and charm of personality the highest admiration of the public, and now that she is in the autumn of her days, there is that in her face which makes every good man fancy that he sees in her a resemblance to his mother. Mrs. Jones writes to The Mirror:

"I want to return thanks through The Mirror—the good Mirror—to the many kind friends who have remembered me on my seventy-fifth birthday for their good wishes for my health and welfare. It makes one feel that the life a merciful Father has spared so many years has not been lived in vain. From my heart I thank everybody."

TOM MAGUIRE MAY SPEAK AGAIN.

The thousands of good wishers of Tom Maguire, the well-known California and New York manager, will be glad to learn that he is well on his way to recovery from the operation performed for cancer upon his tongue two weeks ago. It was one of the most delicate operations ever performed to remove a cancerous growth, and Dr. William Seaman Bainbridge deserves praise for his scientific skill in the removal of the cancer. Mr. Maguire can now make himself understood vocally, and expects to be out of the hospital by May. A good position in a well-known theatre is said to await him when he is well. The fund collected for Mr. Maguire is now $2,000. Mr. Maguire was always ready with his money when a brother or sister member of the profession was in distress.

SAID TO THE MIRROR.

Phil Hunt: "In the correspondence from Clinton, Ia., in The Mirror of April 2 I notice that the Hickman-Bessey repertoire company are presenting Down by the Sea without authority. Local managers will be held responsible if they permit this company to continue doing this play, which is my exclusive property."

FRANK W. SANGER DEAD.

Frank W. Sanger, for many years among the most prominent of American theatrical managers, died at his home in this city yesterday (Monday) afternoon, of pneumonia, from which malady he had suffered but a few days. His passing was entirely unexpected by his friends, since even those who were closely associated with him were not aware that he was seriously ill.

Mr. Sanger was an unusual figure in the dramatic world because of the fact that in him were combined the artistic temperament of the actor and the executive ability necessary to the successful manager. While on the stage he played in support of a number of noted stars and was a member of several of the best organizations. As an actor he gained a position far above mediocrity, but he forsook the artistic laurels that he had won to engage in management. And in this field of endeavor he advanced to a place in the front rank. He was concerned in the production of a number of the most important of American plays written during the past twenty years, and he was interested in the building of several of the best playhouses in New York.

Mr. Sanger was born at Framingham, Mass., on April 2, 1849. He went to Brooklyn when a child and was educated in the public schools there and at the Pennsylvania State College at Bellefonte, Pa. When the Civil War began he served for a time in the Union Army and was later a United States marshal in Tennessee. After making several ventures in business enterprises he made his debut as an actor in Williamsburg as Roberts, the butler, in The Streets of New York. After his first engagement followed one with Selwyn at the Olympic Theatre, New York, where he played in Horizon, one of Augustin Daly's early plays. After that he appeared for a few weeks with Frank Mayo's company in the heavy part of Davy Crockett. At the outset he acted under the name of F. S. Wilbur, but soon resumed his real name.

He was for several seasons with the traveling company of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, playing in Divorce, Article 47 and other plays. From 1876 to 1878 he was a member of the Chestnut Street Theatre in Philadelphia. During his second season in Philadelphia he was cast for the juvenile roles. In 1879 he was engaged by Henry E. Abbey to appear at the Park Theatre, New York. The company included Agnes Booth, Mrs. Gilbert, Sydney Cowell, Minnie Palmer, Elisha Robson, James Lewis, James Hardenbergh, Joseph Whiting, Joseph Grismer, Frederick Bond, and George Stoddart. Among the plays produced at the Park were Champagne and Oysters, Bouquets and Bombshells, Hurricanes, Old Love Letters, and Engaged.

Mr. Sanger gained his highest position as an actor as a member of Adelaide Neilson's company, and with her he made his final appearances on the stage. He played leading roles in her support when she made her last appearance at Booth's Theatre, in acts from five of the principle plays of her repertoire.

Mr. Sanger's first experience in the business department of an attraction was as treasurer when Uncle Tom's Cabin was put on at Horticultural Hall in Philadelphia during the Centennial Exhibition. Four years later he undertook to pilot Dreams; or, Fun in a Photograph Gallery, through the country in copartnership with Willie Edouin. The tour extended to two years and a half, and proved a profitable venture. Mr. Edouin and he then bought A Bunch of Keys from Charles H. Hoyt, and played it successfully over the country for a number of years.

In 1885 Mr. Sanger opened an office for exploiting theatrical ventures generally, and in the same year he sent out Hoodman Blind. After that he entered into partnership with the late T. Henry French. They built the Broadway Theatre and produced there Harbor Lights, The Bells of Hazlemere, Mr. Barnes of New York, The Kaffir Diamond, and the enormously successful play, Little Lord Fauntleroy. The litigation over the last named drama led Mr. Sanger to sell his interest in the Broadway, and he immediately entered into partnership with Al. Hayman and built the Empire Theatre, which was opened in January, 1893. Next he became manager of the Madison Square Garden and inaugurated the policy that still obtains there. During the last few years Mr. Sanger has not been publicly active in theatrical undertakings, though he has been interested in a number of important enterprises.

For years Mr. Sanger has been an officer of the Actors' Fund, in which he took a deep interest. He was a member of the Actors' Order of Friendship and was once its President. He also belonged to the Players, the New York Yacht Club, the New York Athletic Club, the Manhattan Club, the Phœnix Club, and the Coney Island Jockey Club.

NATIONAL CONSERVATORY MATINEE.

The students of F. F. Mackay's National Conservatory of Dramatic Art appeared yesterday (Monday) afternoon in a public rehearsal at the Vaudeville Theatre. The audience, which included a number of prominent players and literary folk, filled the auditorium completely, and during the performance there was a deal of well merited applause.

The programme consisted of two one-act plays, scenes from two classic dramas, and two dances. The players were all young women, and considering the fact that the masculine element was lacking Mr. Mackay did wonders in arranging so interesting a programme as was presented. Almost without exception the students evidenced exceptionally good training in the art of elocution. They could be heard easily and every line was read intelligently. In pantomime, too, and in stage deportment the young women showed the effect of careful instruction. Altogether, as far as the technique of acting is concerned, the pupils seem well equipped for work on the professional stage.

The performance began with a gavotte gracefully executed by four of the students, who had been trained in this branch of stage art by Clara J. Horton. Then came a presentation of J. R. Planche's one-act comedy, Faint Heart Never Won Fair Lady. In this Geraldine Ruyl, in the character of Ruy Gomez, revealed an attractive personality and rather unusual talents both in elocution and in acting. She played with sincerity and a nicety of touch not often found in the work of novices. Anne Moiles was a satisfactory King Charles. Ruby Peck played the Duchess de Torreneueva intelligently but in rather stilted fashion. Helen Gillen was the Marquis, Mildred Mackay the Duenna, and Adeline Mabille the Page.

The first scene of the fifth act of Macbeth followed, in which Aimee Hammett, as Lady Macbeth, displayed admirably the value of Mr. Mackay's training in the reading of blank verse. Grace Thomson was the Doctor, and Desiree Marks the Gentlewoman. Next came a scene from the third act of Mary Stuart, excellently played by Ruby Peck as Elizabeth and Veda McEvers as Mary.

The performance ended with a capital afterpiece, entitled The Pupils' Popular Preparatory, which introduced, besides the students already named, Flora Campbell as Eva St. John, a retired actress.

On May 16 Mr. Mackay will begin his regular Summer course of lectures on elocution, acting and physical expression.

DISCOURSES AT THE LEAGUE.

Jennie Wilder, chairman of the dramatic meeting of the Professional Woman's League, yesterday afternoon provided a brilliant programme.

Alice E. Ives delivered an able address on "The Moral Backbone of the Play." Miss Ives said that "Every one can see there has been something radically wrong with things theatrical this past season. More people have stayed away from the theatres, more companies come in, more managers being brought to bankruptcy, and more disengaged actors have prowled about the town than has been known before in the history of the stage. The general verdict seems to be, bad plays. If this is so, what is lacking in the play of to-day? To her the drama seems to be in need of moral backbone. When civilization becomes so refined that it forgets ideals, chaos will come. The cult has become so enamored of picturesque lying, piquant swearing, ingenuous cheating and dramatic robbing that they call these degenerates very human. But as members of the human family, we like to believe that the human qualities average up higher on the good side than on the bad. We can not do without The Two Orphans or The Secret of Polichinelle, but we can do without Raffles, she said.

Then followed a group of songs, delightfully sung by Maud Hastings, of Australia; Mary Hawes accompanied. Katherine Kennedy, late of The Ruling Power, gave a short talk; she spoke of her recent critics kindly. It was only a natural result, as the world loves the conventional. She had met more honesty, sincerity and general worth in her few weeks of starring than in all the years of her experience in society. She closed by reciting a French selection cleverly. Russell B. Throckmorton made a few remarks about the problem play and the Art Theatre, and gave the recitation, "The Jolly Old Pedagogue," and "The Burglar and the Old Maid." Florence Heathcote (Fugi Ka), the writer, appeared in Japanese costume and told an original Japanese story entertainingly.

THEATRE MANAGERS' ASSOCIATION.

On April 15 the Association of Theatre Managers of Greater New York filed articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State in Albany. The directors are Heinrich Conried, Alexander W. Dingwall, Edward F. Albee, Henry W. Savage, Charles Frohman, Oscar Hammerstein, Daniel Frohman, William Harris and Joseph Brooks, of New York city; Marc Klaw, of New Rochelle, and Percy Williams, of Brooklyn.

The association held its regular weekly meeting on the day before, April 14, at the Hudson Theatre, and discussed questions relating to advertising, to the fireproofing of scenery, and to raising money for the Actors' Fund. The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That all traveling organizations be notified to have scenery fire proofed, to comply with conditions imposed by the authorities of the city of New York in relation thereto.

Resolved, That this association heartily indorses and approves the action of the Actors' Fund of America with regard to the collecting by each member of this association of 10 cents for each free ticket issued, to the extent of ten free seats per day, which shall be turned over to the Actors' Fund of America.

That after Aug. 1, 1904, no member of this association shall use, nor permit to be used, any form of advertising for which tickets of admission or seats must or may be given.

That no advertising shall be done by lithographs, photographs, hangers, banners, "sniping" or stretchers in Greater New York.

That a clause covering the foregoing shall be embodied in all contracts between members of this association and traveling companies, which clause shall be made a consideration of the contracts between local and traveling managers; said clause to involve a penalty of $1000 in liquidated damages for each and every week for such violation.

That this resolution be printed and sent to each member of this association, to be conspicuously displayed in the business office and bill room of his theatre.

That this resolution has no reference to the advertising in the newspapers, in the lobbies or in front of the respective theatres; perambulators, sandwich men, or the usual form of bill posting of three sheets and stands of various sizes.

THE I. M. A. CELEBRATE.

The Theatrical Mechanical Association celebrated their eighteenth anniversary in Louisville April 5. After the banquet they had a programme of music and speaking. Mr. Manning, the stage manager of the Eight Bells company, spoke, and then Edward Rowland, manager of Over Niagara Falls, introduced Edwards Davis, who said some things on the "Artist and the Artisan." The speech made a hit. Many members of the Julia Marlowe company were present. It was a great success.

THE STOCK COMPANIES.

On April 2 Edwin T. Emery, of the Belasco company, San Francisco, completed his fourth successive year with that organization. He has rested but six weeks in the two hundred and eight consecutive weeks that he has appeared in that city.

Manager Van Dyke, of the Van Dyke Theatre in Des Moines, tendered the newsboys of that city a complimentary entertainment April 1, the bill presented by the Van Dyke Stock company being The Two Orphans.

Lawrence Hanley is in the West recuperating after a long season in stock at St. Louis.

Jack E. Magee and Teresa A. Dale are with the Willis Stock company, at present playing through the Northwest and meeting with success. They have signed for the Summer with Mort W. Sanford, manager for Dick Ferris, opening May 23. Miss Dale for leads, and Mr. Magee for comedy.

Blanche Haselton has been engaged by Lew Silvers to be featured as leading woman in his Summer stock at Sheboygan, Wis., opening June 1.

Carol Arden has been engaged as leading woman of the Academy Stock company, Roanoke, Va.

Nina Tessa, aged fourteen, made her debut recently with the Baldwin-Melville Stock company of New Orleans, and made such a fine impression that she was engaged to be a permanent member. She is the daughter of Emelie Melville.

The Isabelle Evesson company has been announced to open at the Providence Opera House in May. The most recent member of the company to be secured by Manager James T. Malone is John Cumberland as light comedian.

Sedley Brown will on May 1 return to the Woodward Stock company as stage director for a Spring season. About the middle of June Mr. Brown will begin his regular Summer engagement at the Gem Theatre, Peak's Island, Me. This will be his third season at that theatre. For next season Mr. Brown has as yet made no plans.

The Richmond Stock company will open its season at North Adams, Mass., on April 25, in The Rival Candidates. The company is now rehearsing at North Adams.

Bertine Robison, who became popular with Montreal theatregoers last season, has been reengaged as leading woman of the stock for the coming Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Drouet are to spend part of the Summer in Denver, Mr. Drouet as the star of the Broadway Theatre Stock company. At the expiration of his engagement there Mr. and Mrs. Drouet will sail for Europe for the months of August and September.

Amelia Bingham signed a contract Monday of last week to appear as a stock star at the Broadway Theatre in Denver during the Summer.

The Baker Theatre Company will close its Seattle engagement with June this week. Tacoma and Los Angeles follow.

Earl and Martell's American Stock company, under the direction of Oliver Martell, are now touring the cities of the Middle States and will open their Summer stock engagement at Riverside Park Pavilion, Sioux City, Iowa, on June 5. The company includes H. H. Earl, Frederick James, Walter F. Harmon, Jack Spalding, R. A. Bennett, H. W. Tennant, Walter Hille, H. S. Miller, George Wolfe, Marie Barborka, Vera Treacy, Beth Sommerville, Louise Averill, Jean Earl, and Little Mabel Vial.

Dot Karroll will be the stock star at the Empire Theatre, Providence, R. I., the coming Summer. Miss Karroll closed her third starring tour on April 16 at Chester, Pa., and will open in Providence on May 16. Her leading support will be Louis Leon Hall, Charles Newman, James Kennedy, Katherine Purcell, and Edith Croilus Gordon. Miss Karroll will appear under the management of J. C. Welsh.

Richard Buhler will head the stock company at the Imperial Theatre, Providence, R. I., under management of Dave Weis, opening in Quo Vadis on May 10. Mr. Weis will also have stock companies in the Franklin Square Opera House, Worcester, Mass., and the Colonial Theatre, Lawrence, Mass., both of which will open in May.

Paul Scott, stage director of the Davis-Bayle Stock, Syracuse, was called to New York last Friday on account of the death of his mother.

John Cumberland has been engaged by James T. Malone, of the Isabelle Evesson company, for a special season of four weeks, beginning in May, at the Opera House, Providence.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rogers (Louise Mackintosh) have returned from Albany, where they filled a five weeks' special engagement at the Empire Theatre with the Mordant-Humphrey Stock company.

Florence Leslie has been engaged for the Humphrey stock company in Albany, N. Y.

Edwin Thanhauser, of the Thanhauser stock company, arrived in town yesterday (Monday) to secure several new players for his organization.

IN BROOKLYN THEATRES.

Maxine Elliott appears at the Montauk this week in Clyde Fitch's play, Her Own Way. There will be a Wednesday as well as a Saturday matinee.

For the first time in English on any stage Hermann Sudermann's brilliant domestic comedy-drama, The Battle of the Butterflies, is presented at the Amphio Theatre this week by Sidney Rosenfeld's Century Players.

Andrew Mack is seen at the Grand Opera House this week in An Irish Gentleman, by Ramsay Morris. Of course, Mr. Mack has a repertoire of new songs to sing.

Arizona, the most famous of Augustus Thomas' romantic dramas, is at the new Broadway Theatre this week. The company is practically the same as that which gave it a famous run at the Academy of Music, Manhattan, not so very long ago. The popular Sunday night concerts at this house have been a great success.

At the Columbia Theatre this week Melbourne MacDowell, supported by Ethel Fuller, Pauline Willard, Robert Elliott, Jack Webster, presents Sardou's La Tosca. This newly organized company, under the management of Dave A. Weis, starts for San Francisco a week from to-night, and Mr. MacDowell announced this engagement as his farewell appearance in Brooklyn.

Stetson's Uncle Tom's Cabin is given at the Park Theatre this week, with real colored people, cake walks, Southern jubilee singing and buck dancing. It is a big double scenic production, and there are two Topsys, two Marksen, and Mr. Stetson is the famous Uncle Tom. A street parade is given early to delight the youngsters.

Corse Payton's production of The Two Orphans at the Lee Avenue Theatre was of special interest to the patrons of this house in the return to the cast of George Hoey and Marie Casmere. Mr. Payton took players from his road companies and increased his forces here to the number required for presenting this melodrama. Mr. Hoey was seen as Minister of Police, while Miss Casmere played the role of Marianne, the outcast. Corse Payton played Picard, and Kirk Brown was the Chevalier. Joseph Girard played Jacques Frochard, and to Lawrence Barbour fell the role of Pierre. Florence Gear and Grace Fox were cast as the Two Orphans. This is the last week of the season for Mr. Payton's stock company, as the month of May will be spent by them in Newark, one of Mr. Payton's traveling companies coming here to present repertoire. The feature of special interest is the news that Mrs. Etta Reed Payton, after an absence of ten weeks due to illness, returns to head the company at the Lee Avenue Theatre, where she is seen as Pauline in The Lady of Lyons this week. Kirk Brown plays the lover, Claude Melnotte, while Joseph Girard, Harry Roche, Richard Crolius, Grace Fox, Florence Gear, and all the favorites are in the cast. A special programme has been arranged for Saturday night, when speeches and "good-bys" will be had.

Mrs. Spooner presented last week a new dramatization of Marie Antoinette, with prologue and epilogue by J. Searle Danley. This was the seventh new play produced at the Bijou Theatre this season. Edna May Spooner was seen in the title-role. Miss Cecil had one of those lively and cheerful parts for which she is well suited, and Mr. Phillips as the King of France played the part with a skill that showed he had given it close and constant study. Mrs. Spooner presents a new play this week. This is the eighth new piece this season. Mark E. Swan, several of whose works have had their initial production upon the Bijou stage, is the author of this newest play, A Good Fellow, in three acts and one scene, dealing with the adventures of a young man who, to escape arrest in a raided gambling house, climbs a fire escape and rushes into a flat above, where a young woman, pitying him, tells the police that he is her husband. The young woman is Dolly Sevier, who has been secretly married. This situation requires many explanations all around. Cecil Spooner plays the part of Dolly, and she has just the qualifications required to fill a part of this kind. Edna May Spooner is Dolly's friend, who later falls in love with the young man who escaped from the raided gambling "joint." Mr. Philips plays the part of Tom Chance, a man of gambling habits and narrow escapes, and the cause of much fun at cross purposes. Mr. Clarendon is Sam Pollock, the janitor; Mr. Kennedy is O'Hara, the "cop," in search of a prisoner. The rest of the company is well cast by Mrs. Spooner, who knows the limit and scope of every member. There are specialties by Miss Cecil and songs by Claude Thardo.

The Two Sisters is the attraction at the Novelty Theatre this week. This play, a companion to The Old Homestead, is heralded as a "story of real life."

At the Folly this week the offering is The Queen of the White Slaves. It is described as a melodramatic romance of love and intrigue, sensation and sentiment. A collapsing steel death chamber is one of the hair raising exhibits.

Manchester's Cracker Jacks appear this week at the Star Theatre and present their new musical comedy, The Royal Velvet. There is an attractive chorus and a good line of specialties, a burlesque closing with scenic and electrical effects and gorgeous costuming.

VINCENT R. KIRK.

OBITUARY.

Joseph Kelly, formerly of Kelly and Mason and this season with The Head Waiters company, died in Saginaw, Mich., on April 9, after an illness of three weeks. Mr. Kelly was a comedian of wide popularity, and his genial disposition made him a favorite among his friends. His brother, Lew Kelly, was with him at the time of his death. Mr. Kelly was born in St. Louis thirty-nine years ago, and began his theatrical career as an amateur in Denver. His first professional engagement was with Eunice Goodrich in repertoire. Subsequently he appeared with Howard Hall in repertoire and with The Limited Mail company, with Bobby Gaylor in Sport McAllister, and with Ward and Vokes in A Run on the Bank. In 1896 he formed a partnership with Charles A. Mason and together they starred in Who is Who. For a time he was obliged to give up professional work on account of ill health, but upon recovering he rejoined Mr. Mason and they played for a season or two in vaudeville. Later they appeared with the Rogers Brothers in Wall Street, and in the Summer of 1901 they worked together for the last time at a park at Columbus, O. This season Mr. Kelly was engaged for B. C. Whitney's The Head Waiters company, and played the principal role in that production until he was stricken by illness. The remains were taken to Denver for burial.

Ada Farwell, a noted old actress of the Boston stock companies and in recent years prominent in various traveling organizations, died at Dunkirk, N. Y., on April 8 of pneumonia. Mrs. Farwell was born in Boston sixty-five years ago and made her early appearances under her maiden name, Ada Mallon. She was long a favorite at the old Howard and the ...eum, in Boston. Early in her stage career she was married to Luther Farwell, the actor, who di... two years ago. They played together in Boston, and later were with Ned Harrigan in New York. For nine years past Mrs. Farwell was a member of Lewis Morrison's company, playing the role of Martha in Faust, and she was with that organization when her final illness began. She is survived by two sisters and two brothers, who reside in and near Boston, and none of whom is a member of the dramatic profession. The remains were taken to Boston and the funeral services were held there last Tuesday afternoon. The ceremonies were conducted by the Rev. B. F. McDaniel, and were attended by large delegations from various societies to which Mrs. Farwell belonged. The burial was made in Evergreen Cemetery beside the grave of Mr. Farwell.

Charles Arno (known in private life as Charles Forrester), of the well-known vaudeville team Ramza and Arno, died on April 11, of pneumonia, at his apartments, 291 East Fourteenth Street, New York. Mr. Arno was born in Birmingham, England, about forty-two years ago, and had been a favorite vaudeville performer for many years. He was an acrobatic comedian of great ability, and had a wide circle of friends in the profession. The funeral took place on April 14, the interment being in the Cemetery of the Evergreens.

Claude Lamotte, of the Rodney Stock company, died suddenly of heart failure in Saginaw, Mich., on April 10. A performance of A Convict's Stripes was in progress, and at the close of the second act Mr. Lamotte, upon leaving the stage, complained of feeling ill. Medical aid was summoned, but within an hour the actor was dead. Mr. Lamotte was forty years of age and was a native of Australia. The Knights of Pythias and the Eagles took charge of the funeral arrangements, and the burial was made in Forest Lawn Cemetery, Saginaw.

Patrick Masterson, a musician, who had for many years been a member of theatre orchestras, died of apoplexy in Providence, R. I., on April 12, aged fifty-five years. For nearly sixteen consecutive years he was the bass viol player at Keith's Theatre, Providence. Before that he traveled with Sam Sharpley's, Skiff and Gaylord's and other minstrel organizations.

Mrs. Rachel F. Phillips, the wife of Edwin Varrey Phillips, the noted old Shakespearean actor, died at the family home at Watchung, N. J., on April 13, aged sixty-seven years. Besides her husband, she is survived by two sons and two daughters. The funeral services were held at North Plainfield, N. J., on last Saturday morning.

Mrs. Dolly Mann, who with her husband, Danny Mann, played very successfully in vaudeville in a sketch entitled Mandy Hawkins, died in Philadelphia on April 4 after a long illness with consumption. Her husband survives her.

Addie Farwell, the wife of C. L. Farwell, and a member of Lewis Morrison's Faust company, died at Dunkirk, N. Y., on April 9, of pneumonia, aged sixty-four years.

Mrs. Jane Murdoch, the widow of the noted tragedian, James E. Murdoch, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William List, in Philadelphia, on April 12. She was eighty-two years of age.

John Maguire, father of Sylvester Maguire, general manager for Frank L. Perley's and Daniel V. Arthur's attractions, died at his home in St. Louis on March 30.

Newton Marks, a theatrical and circus man, was killed by falling from a train near Fort Bliss, Tex., on April 11.

Mrs. Callie Bonney Marble, the writer of many short stories published in the magazines, died in this city on April 11.

Harry G. Hill, an old-time manager, died at Saratoga, N. Y., on April 15 of paralysis, aged sixty-eight years.

The father of Francis Morey, stage director of the Aubrey Stock company, died at his home in Buffalo, N. Y., on April 9.

Rose Beckett, formerly a ballet dancer of considerable note, was found dead in her apartment in this city on April 8. She was about forty-five years old.

Mrs. Mary Selbert, the mother of William Everhart, the vaudeville performer, died at her home in Columbus, O., on March 31.

Walter M. Barnstead, the youngest brother of Bessie Beaumont (Mrs. Herbert H. Power), died at New Dorchester, Mass., on April 14, of heart failure.

Charles Carver, an actor, died in Boston on April 6, and was buried there by the Actors' Fund.

Fred Athos, one of the Athos Brothers, acrobats, died in Los Angeles, Cal., on March 25.

The mother of Una Clayton, of the Aubrey Stock company, died suddenly on March 31.

William H. Johnson, the brother of Louise Sanford, died at Camden, N. J., on March 30.

STETSON'S

BIG DOUBLE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN CO.

L. W. WASHBURN, Proprietor

Philadelphia, Pa., April 28th, 1903.

"PEOPLE'S THEATRE.—Stetson's Big Double Uncle Tom's Cabin Co. opened last night to stage and enthusiastic audience. The popularity of Uncle Tom's Cabin seems to increase, owing, no doubt, to the elaborate manner in which the old play is produced by this company, every attention being paid to the scenic details and accessories. An excellent company interprets the piece, and many high class vaudeville features are introduced between the acts. They will undoubtedly do a big week's business."

THEATRES AND MUSIC HALLS.

Keith's Union Square.

John and Emma Ray, in Casey, the Fireman, head a bill including Cole and Johnson, Falke and Semon, Parros Brothers, Hal Stephens and company, Jennie Yeamans, Phil and Nettie Peters, Theodore Morse Trio, J. K. Hutchinson and Rolinda Bainbridge, the Hiltonks, Charles W. Littlefield, Conroy and Pearl, George E. Austin, Mario and Aldo, and the biograph.

Tony Pastor's.

Charles H. Burke, Grace La Ruse and the Inkey Boys head a list including Madge Fox, Ten Brooke, Lambert and Ten Brooke, the Nelson-Farnum Troupe, Fitzgibbon McCoy Trio, Princess Chinquilla and company, Norton and Russell, Williams and Melburn, Mannie Bernard, Hanson and Harris, Ricton, Arberg Sisters, and the vitagraph.

Proctor's Fifth Avenue.

Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew, with Lotta Linthicum and William Beach in the leading rolls, is this week's attraction. Others in the cast are Gerald Griffin, Verner Clarges, Hugh Ford, Albert Roberts, H. Dudley Hawley, and Loretta Healy. The olio includes Hale and Frances, Mr. and Mrs Stuart Darrow, Josephine Ainsley, Smith and Bowman, Martin and Ridgway, Barney Reynolds, Gebest Sisters, and the kalatechnoscope.

Proctor's Twenty-third Street.

The entertainers are the Holloway Trio, Yorke and Adams, Victor Moore and Emma Littlefield, the Reed Birds, Sydney Grant, Harvey Comedy company, Louise Henry, Johnson and Wells in their new act, Rastus and Banks, the Gregsons, Hastings and Finn, the Lateis, Martin and Quigg, Newton Brothers, and the kalatechnoscope.

Proctor's 125th Street.

Audrey is this week's offering by the stock company, with the original scenery, costumes and accessories. The olio embraces Swan and Bambard, Chester Blodgett Johnson, Marie Brackmann, Markey and Moran, and the kalatechnoscope.

Hurtig and Seamon's.

Edna Wallace Hopper, assisted by Lilla Vane and H. Bassard Short in The March of Time, and Fanny Rice with her talking dolls are the stars of a bill including Mr. and Mrs. Mark Murphy, Harry Stanley and Dories Wilson, Zeno, Carl and Zeno, Clifford and Burke, George H. Stuart, and the vitagraph.

Hammerstein's Victoria.

The bill includes the Four Madcaps, Hoosier Zouaves, Sherman and De Forrest, Todd-Judge Family, George Felix and Lydia Barry, Howard and Bland, Edwin Latell, Four Casting Dunbars, Jack Norworth, Jack Theo Trio, the Brittons, and the vitagraph.

Circle.

The Great Lafayette heads the list, presenting his latest spectacle, The Bride of Thibet. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew are a special feature in When Two Hearts Are Won. Others are the Piccolo Midgets, Eleanor Falk, Snyder and Buckley, Joe Flynn, Manila Quartette, Brown and Navarro, May Evans, and the vitagraph.

LAST WEEK'S BILLS.

Tony Pastor's.—Holcombe, Curtis and Webb were the topliners last week. Margaret Webb is the new member of the trio, replacing Sadie Cushman as the school girl in A Winter Session. Miss Webb has heretofore appeared alone in a straight singing specialty, and her clear, sweet soprano voice has been much admired. She is admirably adapted to the role she has assumed in this act, as she is petite and looks the part to perfection. In the short space of a few weeks she has learned to speak lines and to act, two things that she had never before attempted. No one would ever guess that she had not had years of experience, judging by her admirable work in this act. She even sang the "baby" song, and did it quite well, too. Of her other vocal work it is only necessary to say that it was as good as ever. Holcombe and Curtis filled their parts to the delight of everybody, and the entire sketch was as well done as it was before the change took place. Armstrong and Holly reappeared in The Expressman, one of the big hits of the season at this house, and again scored emphatically. Mr. Armstrong is a fine character actor, and every point he made was appreciated heartily. His dancing is extremely good. Ford and Dot West have a very funny act, and the fun increases as the skit proceeds to a lively finish. Marsh and Sartella put on a new act for which they deserve much credit. They use a backing of black, ornamented with a neat monogram in gold, and wear costumes of white. The contrast is very effective and the dancing of both performers shows to great advantage. Miss Sartela has a good voice, and sang "I'm Wearing My Heart Away for You" with good expression. Ascott and Eddie are favorites here, and their fine act was enthusiastically received. Miss Eddie is a dainty and clever acrobat and toe-dancer and Mr. Ascott's eccentric gymnastic work is distinctly original. A new turn was given by Lillian Mills and Elida Morris, who style themselves the Minstrel Maids. They were formerly members of Tim McMahon's company, and their act is on the order of Mitchell and Marron's. Their jokes are ancient, but the audience did not seem to mind, and laughed heartily. Their songs are well chosen, their costumes are neat, and the act as it stands is quite effective. La Vine and Cross, Le Smythe and Abacco, the Alpha Trio, Pryor Brothers, Max Winslow, G. Burkhart, and the vitagraph were also on hand. Fisher and Carroll, the clever eccentric comedians, were an extra attraction and kept the house in roars with their oddities.

Keith's Union Square.—Fanny Rice headed the bill and of course won with her odd act. Calahan and Mack, true to nature, scored heavily with The Old Neighborhood. Gillett's Musical Dogs were the hit of the bill, bringing down the house with the balloons at the finish. The audience helps to make this act a go, as the balloons get into the house at times, and even staid old men seem to take a delight in punching at them. George W. Day, who has been in the West the greater part of the season, was warmly welcomed. He delighted his admirers with a monologue that was practically new from start to finish, and in which there were a number of very happy hits. His song, "There's Something the Matter with Me," was a hit. Hickey and Nelson kept the house in roars with their crazy act, which is amusing in the extreme. The Four Sensational Boises did some very startling work on the bars. Their apparatus differs from others, and they do many original stunts. A. K. Caldera, a European equilibrist, made his American debut, and was well received. He is a good balancer, and has some tricks that are original and diverting. Mlle. Latina's physical culture act won unbounded admiration, especially from the women. Estelle Wordette and company scored in A Honeymoon in the Catskills. Others were Jake and Jane Bernard, Hodges and Launchmere, Cal Stewart, St. John and Le Fevre, Deltorelli and Glissando, and the biograph.

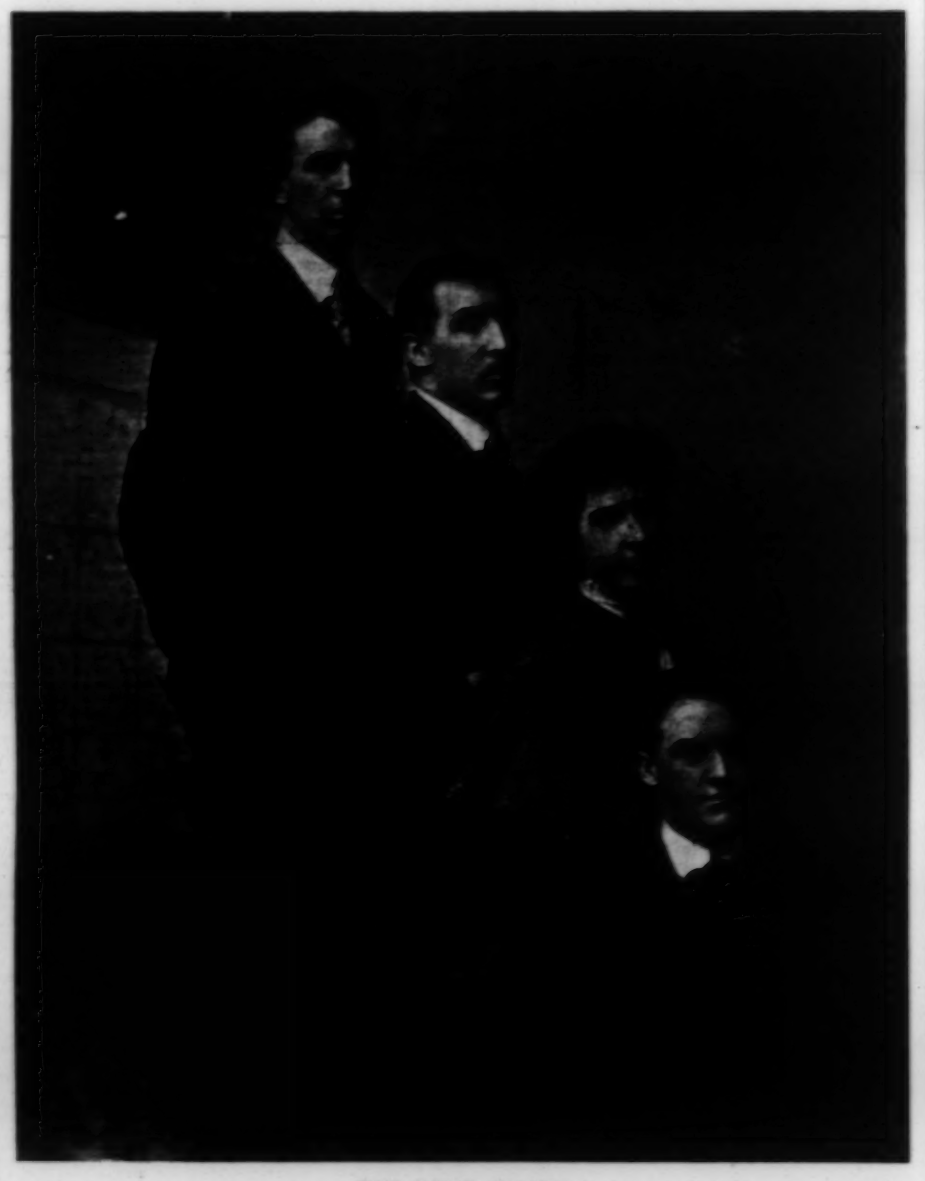
Proctor's Twenty-third Street.—The Tannehill Comedy company made its vaudeville debut in a sketch by Frank Tannehill, Jr., called Making an Actress. The company was made up of Verner Clarges, William Beach and Grace Hopkins, and the sketch was produced under the supervision of Mr. Tannehill. The characters are a retired army officer, his niece, and a young actor. The girl is "just crazy to go on the stage." Her uncle is determined that she shall not make a fool of herself, as she has no talent. The young actor comes to the house to rehearse a few scenes from The Lady of Lyons, and the old man promises him $1,000 if he will discourage the girl so that she will give up the idea of being a player. The rehearsal progresses, and the old soldier keeps on handing out bills to the actor until his vest pocket bulges with them. The actor becomes ashamed after he has received three hundred dollars, and the girl is made aware of the plot against her dramatic aspirations. Just as there promises to be a strong scene the old man discovers that the actor is a son of an old war-time chum of his, and he hands his niece over to him without so much as being asked for her hand. It is to be presumed that the youth will give up acting and settle down to the enjoyment of the old man's money. The sketch is not intensely amusing, though the players tried hard to make it so. It bears a strong resemblance to Her Last Rehearsal, now being played by Lewis McCord, although it lacks the amusing quality of that cleverly constructed skit. Mr. Clarges was bluff and hearty as the Colonel, Miss Hopkins was appropriately amateurish as the girl, and Mr. Beach played the actor with much intelligence. Frank Bush was on hand with his budget of stories, which scored heavily. Louis Simon, Grace Gradner and company were immensely amusing in The New Coachman, which wears splendidly. Wood and Ray made a hit in their eccentric comedy skit. Waterbury Brothers and Tenny combined comedy and music in pleasing proportions. Ray Cox, who seems to have talent, but lacks a knowledge of how to use it to advantage, did a monologue that has some good points. She is handicapped by the striped dress she wears, and the sooner she changes it the better. It might be a good idea for her to adopt a character make-up on the Sis Hopkins order, and do a monologue on the lines of Lotta Gladstone's. As she has an excellent negro dialect, perhaps a blackface monologue would make her a favorite. It would at least lift her out of the "fair to middling" class and give her a claim on the attention of managers. Chester Blodgett Johnson did his startling bicycle act, which is one of the best now before the public. Nicholas S. Conway, in his character of Laughing Casey, made a hit in a monologue. Others on the long bill were Chalk Saunders, Lutz Brothers, George E. Austin (always funny), Smith and Bowman, the Juggling Macbans, and the kalatechnoscope.

Proctor's Fifth Avenue.—April Weather, Clyde Fitch's play, written for the late Sol Smith Russell, drew good houses last week. The cast included Malcolm Williams, Lotta Linthicum, Gerald Griffin, George Bryant, John Westley, Frederick Powers, Albert Roberts, Leo Hawley, Beatrice Morgan, George Ober, Margaret Kirker, Jennie Turner, and Richard Roy. Leah Russell headed the olio and made all kinds of a hit with her extremely clever impersonations. Kennedy and Rooney scored heavily in their dancing sketch. Johnson and Wells presented their bright and entertaining singing and dancing specialty and were warmly applauded. Leonard and Collins, the Bachelor Club Quartette, Carmen Sisters, Brooke Eltrym, Carlos's dogs, Green and Wiggins, and the kalatechnoscope also scored.

Proctor's 125th Street.—Hush-a-Bye, Baby, Frank Tannehill, Jr.'s farce, which was done at the Fifth Avenue a short time ago, was given here last week with a new cast. The play seemed to strike the fancy of the Harlemites, and was received with far greater favor than it was when it was done down town. Sol Aiken had the principal role, and he played it extremely well, bringing out its strong points to great advantage. Paul McAllister, Albert Howson, William Cullington, Charles M. Seay, H. Dudley Hawley, Julian Reed, Jessie Bonstelle, Mrs. Lestina, Rose Stuart, Mary Bertrand, and Cecyile Mayer were also in the cast. A good olio introduced Anna Caldwell, the Gregsons, Martin and Ridgeway, Newton Brothers, and the kalatechnoscope.

Circle.—Henry Lee was the star of a remarkably fine bill that drew very large houses. Mr. Lee has added to his repertoire excellent impersonations of the Czar of Russia and the Mikado of Japan. Both were received with tumultuous applause, the Mikado coming in for a special round of cheers. Eva Williams and Jac Tucker were seen for the first time here in a new sketch called In Manchuria, written by Mr. Tucker. The scene is laid near Port Arthur, and there is a fine view of the bay, with the battle ships in the distance. The characters with which these clever players have been identified in the past, Mary Ellen, Poet, and Skinny Dooley, turn up once more in a most amusing way. Their entrance is funny in the extreme. Miss Williams is seated in a "jinrickshaw" made of a washtub, a clothes-basket, a washboard and the wheels of a baby carriage. This odd vehicle is drawn by Mr. Tucker, who is disguised as a Chinese coolie. The dialogue and business in this scene are immensely funny and show much originality. Later on Mary Ellen is disguised as a cute little Chinese girl, and Mr. Tucker, after stealing the uniform from a sleeping soldier, appears as a member of the Russian army. There is a fierce Russian officer, well played by William Trainor, and the burlesque on the Russian language and military tactics are screamingly funny. The climax is a cleverly arranged bit of tomfoolery, and taken all in all, In Manchuria is one of the best sketches ever done by this talented couple, who occupy a secure place in the regard of the theatregoing public. The special scenery used in the act is tasteful and appropriate, and the accessories left nothing to be desired. Charles R. Sweet's act went as well as ever, though he hangs on to his old jokes like grim death. Sherman and De Forrest brought down the house as usual with their Battle of San Dago. Milly Capell was warmly applauded, and the fine work of her horse and dogs won great favor. Elfie Fay clings to "The Belle of Avenue A," and her contortions and grimaces are as wildly extravagant as ever. Ford and Wilson scored a big hit with their songs, dances and comedy work, which is of a superior order. The Vedmars proved most amusing in a comedy acrobatic act that is out of the ordinary. The Todd-Judge Family did some astounding stunts, and the vitagraph closed the performance agreeably.

Hammerstein's Victoria.—The Russell Brothers kept things humming here last week with their well-known specialty. Cole and Johnson shared the honors and were recalled again and again. Musical Dale's harmonies were much enjoyed. Canfield and Carleton scored heavily in The Hoodoo. John and Harry Dillon, the Eight English Girls, Wormwood's dogs and monkeys, the Toozoonin Arabs, Young and Devole, the Two Tanakas, and the Great Train Robbery on the vitagraph made up the bill.



THE FOUR RIANOS.

Hurtig and Seamon's.—Big houses applauded the efforts of Clayton White, Marie Stuart and company, Al. Bellman and Lottie Moore, the Four Rianos, the Original Four Madcaps, Aurie Dagwell, Dooley and Fowley, Four Donazettas, and the Sisters Delmore.

The Burlesque Houses.

Dewey.—The Vanity Fair Burlesquers paid a visit here last week that resulted in good attendance at every performance. An entertaining olio was furnished by the Three Browns, Cook and Sylvia, Imhoff and Conn, and Mlle. Ani, the graceful and clever trapeze artist. The two burlesques are well staged and the entertainment was run through with much vim and spirit. This week Imperial Burlesquers.

Gotham.—The Parisian Widows delighted the Harlemites with a good programme of burlesque and vaudeville, including a musical programme that embraced all the new hits of the season. The company includes Bert Leslie, Marie Richmond, the Bison City Quartette, Annie Peyser, the Simpsons, and Charles Falk, the popular producer of illustrated songs. This week Gay Morning Glories.

Miner's Bowery.—The Bowery Burlesquers were right at home and attracted a goodly number of patrons. This week Reilly and Wood's company.

Miner's Eighth Avenue.—Scribner's Morning Glories blossomed to advantage and their efforts were much enjoyed. This week, Moonlight Maids.

London.—Bryant's Burlesquers, headed by Harry Bryant, made things lively last week. This week, American Burlesquers.

Olympic.—The Gayest Manhattan Burlesquers, including Bryant and Barron, Four Sisters Lauretta and others, pleased good audiences. This week, Sam T. Jack's company.

A PLEASANT OCCASION.

The members of the 'Way Down East company were guests at a complimentary dinner tendered them by Louise Sylvester at her residence, 604 Tremont Avenue, this city, on Saturday last, after the matinee performance at the Metropolis Theatre. The event was made especially pleasant by the fact that not a single person in the immense audience at the theatre had been injured during the fire panic of the afternoon. The company offered many toasts and hearty wishes of success to their hostess, who has recently entered vaudeville, and who will appear at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre next week. Miss Sylvester is known in vaudeville as "The Maid of Dundee," and her rendition of the sweet old Scotch ballads, in the native Highland costume, has everywhere met with popular approval.

VAUDEVILLE IN LONDON.

April 9, 1904.

In their Easter programme the Hippodrome has outshone itself in procuring W. C. Fields, who has recently arrived here after a very successful tour around the world. He is an artist in his line. His distinct advantage lies in a natural humor, and he knows exactly how to catch his audiences as adroitly as he catches his billiard and tennis balls, without mentioning the several other articles he juggles. I can well believe the reports of his huge successes abroad, and I feel sure they will continue here. James H. Gee, described as the "champion jumper on the single thread wire," lives up to the description, exhibiting great agility. His crowning feat is a leap over six chairs from the wire, which receives hearty applause. The Hippodrome has boomed as a strong feature Sandow's act, though Sandow evidently thinks it a good opportunity to also boom his school of physical culture. After showing his own muscles he introduces a pupil of his, indicating the value of his instructions in contrast with a non-pupil. By the time he had finished, I suppose, many a man in the audience felt inclined to exercise. Sandow is a fine specimen of developed manhood, and his strong act must impress his audiences. The Trapnells are clever acrobats, consisting of three girls and two boys, the women being especially agile and graceful. Though amateurish to look at, the Jackson Family are exceedingly interesting in their musical entertainment, the ladies again excelling in ability. They render Scotch melodies with a native gusto, the audience responding with equal vigor. Houdini is in his last week, and, though he has been at the Hippodrome for some time, his act is sufficiently novel to awaken a continual interest. He releases himself from that hall to release himself from handcuffs and such like in Newcastle. Three other American turns—Frobel and Ruge, Morton and Elliott and Miss Chester's statue dog—still help to entertain the Hippodrome patrons.

On the bill of the Royal—which, I may state, is changing hands next week, when it will be under the management of Walter Gibbons, who is proprietor of the Islington Empire and the Duchess Palace, Balham—is the Great Wieland, who is remarkably good as a comedy juggler, with just sufficient difference in his act from that of W. C. Fields to make them both equally interesting without appearing similar. He is an adept in his plate-spinning trick, making a good finale with it. A surprising monkey act is on the same bill, which, with two baboons trained by Grais, show an almost human ingenuity. They can walk a tight-rope quite gracefully, and their comedy is astonishing in its approach to human ideas. Rosie Lloyd, a daughter of the famous Marie Lloyd, has an inherent gift which is not quite developed yet, but that shows great promise. Lillie Langtry, who I believe is the same I saw at Tony Pastor's some years ago, has blossomed out into a larger edition of youthful boisterousness. Her versatility keeps her bounding all over the stage, till one feels sorry that she has no more space to bound on. Paul Martinetti is the attraction of the bill, and, with his pantomime comedy company in A Terrible Night, the audience spend a most enjoyable evening. He is quite at the top of the tree in his specialty, and his repertoire of pantomimical sketches makes him a drawing card wherever he goes. Hamilton Hill, appearing at the Royal also, is continuing his hit there. As a baritone his voice seems to improve every day.

In Maskelyne and Cooke's Egyptian Hall, otherwise known as England's Home of Mystery, I saw Herr Valadon, who is a most accomplished exponent of pure sleight-of-hand. He has an original and startling illusion in a disappearing lady mystery, which is peculiarly entitled "Well, I'm ———!!!" That is just what I thought about it. It was most effective and well carried out. I wish to mention that, though he occupies an enormous part of the whole entertainment, his smart patter does not permit the audience to feel that his act is in the slighest degree monotonous. Nevil Maskelyne, the remaining proprietor of Egyptian Hall, presents a merry magical farce, which answered nobly to its description, "The Philosopher's Stone."

In England one realizes the conservative feeling which prompts a more sincere regret when some old institution is about to cease. London, after to-night, will lose its renowned minstrel troupe, lately known as the Mohawk-Moore and Burgess Minstrels. They have had a long spell before the public—thirty-six years—but withal they have secured a stanch patronage, that gradually became accustomed to the style of nigger they represented, although unknown in the States. The fact that they gave birth to a prime favorite on this side in a similar groove—Eugene Stratton, who is now on his way to America—says a lot for the admirable manner in which they catered to their audiences.

Everybody who knew him will regret to hear that Mr. Vernon Dowsett, the ex-manager of the Tivoli Music Hall in London, died of consumption at Ventnor, Isle of Wight, last week.

Mike S. Whallen sailed for America last Wednesday on the Cedric.

J. Warren Keane is making a big hit with his card manipulating act at the Casino in Paris.

The wrestling boom has spread to Brighton in a most pronounced manner. Hackenschmitt is appearing at the Alhambra, and Tom Jenkins, the American champion, at the Hippodrome, and as there is every probability of a match between the two men in the course of a few weeks, great interest is being taken in their respective exhibitions.

Felix Dumas has arrived in London. He is the European representative for the Ideal Gold Mine of Canada, besides several theatrical enterprises.

THE FOUR RIANOS.

The Four Rianos, whose pictures appear in this week's Mirror, have a grotesque comedy acrobatic act that differs from all others at present in vaudeville. Two of the members are made up most realistically as monkeys, and they have made a careful study of the tricks of the monkey tribe. In addition to copying nature they introduce a number of stunts that even the smartest monkey in the world would never think of, and these antics, combined with acrobatic work of a very high order, done by all four members of the little company, make up a most diverting performance. The favor in which the act is held is proven by the fact that the Four Rianos are booked up until the end of September in the best houses. They were one of the big features last week at Hurtig and Seamon's Harlem Music Hall, and this was to be their last appearance in New York until next October.

LAST WEEK OF THE CIRCUS.

This is the last week of the Barnum and Bailey Circus at Madison Square Garden, and the indications are that all records for attendance will be broken. The tent season will open next Monday afternoon in Brooklyn. An interesting event occurred in the Garden on Sunday morning, when the new circus chaplain, Rev. W. H. Sheak, held services that were largely attended by the performers and "freaks." Mr. Sheak will travel with the circus, delivering lectures on the curios and animals during the week, and holding regular services on Sundays, besides being ready to attend to the spiritual wants of the organization. On Tuesday afternoon last Mr. Bailey entertained 7,000 orphans, and the little boys and girls enjoyed themselves to their hearts' content. A number of new features were put in

COZY CORNER BALL.

The widely advertised masquerade ball of the chorus girls of Watson's Cosy Corner took place at Saengerbund Hall, Brooklyn, on Friday evening last. There was an immense crowd, in spite of the fact that the "guests" were held up at the door for 50 cents extra for a "hat check." This was a severe blow to the callow youth of Brooklyn, and many of them who did not have the necessary coin turned sadly away. The majority of the "gents" who did go in seemed to prefer to keep their hats on, and a great many of them held fast to their coats as well. Smoking was permitted in all parts of the hall, and the amiability of the chorus girls and others who participated was shown during the dances, when the "gents" moved about with their partners puffing cigarette smoke into their noses and ears in the most nonchalant way, without the slightest objection on the part of the ladies. As a masquerade ball it was a disappointment, as there were not more than twenty fancy dresses in the big crowd. One girl who was dressed in pink pajamas was the centre of attraction, and another who had on a suit of knickerbockers shared the stellar honors with her. The grand march was led by W. B. Watson and Jeanette Dupre, followed by James and Sadie Leonard. Mr. Watson wore a new Prince Albert suit and a wide smile, and his wife was gorgeously gowned in a black satin creation, cut according to the latest fashion among the 400, displaying her charms to great advantage. A number of good specialties were given between the dances, and the crowd enjoyed the whole affair immensely.

A MODEL ROUTE SHEET.

The Traveling Burlesque Managers' Association has issued its route sheet for next season. It is admirably arranged and shows just where each of the forty companies in the "Wheel" will be each week, from Aug. 22 until May 27. The time has been divided up so evenly that no company has any advantage, and there can consequently be no cause for complaint. The managers have made an agreement to follow the same plan for five years, and if they stick to their compact it will be all plain sailing. Out of the forty weeks there is but one open week, and this is filled in by playing three nights in Springfield and three nights in Worcester. According to a statement issued by the managers, the "Wheel" has cleared 40 per cent. more profits in the past two years, while this route sheet has been in force, than ever before. One reason for the increased profits is the improved entertainments, as the burlesque companies are better organized and give performances that are far cleaner and better in every way than those of the past.

SOME ODD POSTAL CARDS.

Managers, agents and others in the profession have been receiving postal cards from time to time on which the word "feet" appeared in a mysterious way that was very puzzling. Some of the cards were illustrated, but the pictures gave no clue to the sender. The mystery was finally cleared up a few days ago, when the tenth card of the series arrived, containing the information that Kennedy and Rooney are the owners of the feet, which will support them in a new act next season.

IROQUOIS THEATRE SOLD.

Information comes from Chicago to the effect that the Iroquois Theatre has been sold to Rich and Harris, and that it will be run as a vaudeville house. The plans of the new owners include reconstruction, redecoration and a number of other alterations. The name of the house will also be changed. The price at which the theatre was sold was not announced, but it is understood that it was much less than the original cost.

VAUDEVILLE IN BROOKLYN.

The Great Lafayette scored one of the greatest hits he ever made at the Orpheum last week. His work throughout was quite new, but it was his Travesty Band finish which won the encores. Gracie Emmett in a new sketch, Mrs. Murphy's Second Husband, convulsed the audience. Her brogue alone would make any line a laugh. The Four Nightons with their wonderfully impressive act were a most pleasing feature. Synder and Buckley in their musical work added another big success to their list. The act is familiar, but always welcome on account of its genuine merit. Walter C. Kelly in some diverting stories proved a delightful entertainer. His dialects are capital and called forth hearty applause. Brown and Nevarro have a character change specialty that ranks with the best of them. Especially clever is the Chinese impersonation. John Ford was far down on the bill, but more than proved his capability to hold down any spot on the bill. His dancing is continually changing and is at present the best and most showy in vaudeville. The Manilla Quartette and the Gagnoux both pleased. This week another all-star bill is in vogue: Camille D'Arville, Billy B. Van and Rose Beaumont, Milly Capell, Will M. Cressy and Blanche Dayne, Musical Dale, Trovallo, Gus Williams, and, as an extra feature, Dare Devil Castellane in Looping the Gap.

Edna Wallace Hopper proved a splendid drawing card at Hyde and Behman's last week, but as an act of merit her sketch was far below the average. It was poorly acted and of a character not usually accepted by discriminating audiences. So much for a name. Congo-Bongo, a new attraction showing the evolution of the negro, had many capital features. There were three scenes, On the Congo River, In Ol' Louisiana, and The Holland House, New York. Mr. Conner has studied his characters thoroughly, for its greatest merit was its "true to life" atmosphere. The dancing was splendid throughout and reminded one of the ensemble dances of George Primrose with his minstrel chorus. The real hit of the bill was Buster Keaton. Seldom do we hear such laughter and applause as greeted that little genius last week. With a proper vehicle written about Joe Keaton and Buster they would be a feature act in any vaudeville bill or Broadway production. His imitations are truly wonderful and fully as clever as those of some of our so-called mimics. Frank Gardiner and Lottie Vincent were decidedly pleasing in their little comedy act and were warmly applauded. The Romani Trio have a most unique musical act and one of real merit. Sabel Johnson proved to be a singer with many delightful qualities. Her voice is exceptionally sweet and of a very high range, and her songs were sung with expression and clear enunciation. Swan and Bambard, always a laughing hit; the Wartenburg Brothers and Alfons completed the bill. This week Paul Spadoni, Nervana, Elinore Sisters, Frank Bush, Gerard and Gardner, Holcombe, Curtis and Webb, Pantzer Trio, and Bates Trio.

Naiada presented her spectacular act called The Nymph of the Sea at the Fulton Street Theatre last week. It proved to be a very beautiful dancing act with changes of scenery showing the Garden of Rises, North Pole, and the deep seas. The electrical and ariel effects, showing Naiada floating in the air and seas, were remarkably fine. This European artist made a good headliner. Mattie Keene and co. presented Ella Wheeler Wilcox's Her First Divorce Case with the usual success of this laugh provoker. Klein, Ott Brothers and Nickerson gave their familiar artistic musical act. Sparrow, the crazy juggler, broke everything that he could lay his hands on and pleased as usual. Hoey and Lee returned with more of their famous parodies. Jack Putnam scored with songs. McDonough and Huntington in a pretty singing and dancing act, and Smith and Powell wound up another good bill. This week Harry La Rose and co., Alexis and Schall, Golden Gate Quintette, Fredo and Dare, Montague Sisters, Harry Breen, Belliclaire Brothers, and Dixon, Bowers and Dixon.

VAUDEVILLE JOTTINGS.

F. C. Cooper, late of Al. W. Martin's attractions, is organizing for next season a reival of the Ada Dixon Burlesquers, which he states will be one of the most attractive offerings of vaudeville-burlesque on tour. Marjorie Maxwell, Blanche Dean, and Viola Mayne will have the principal female roles. The opening comedietta, A Night at the Metropole, and the closing burlesque, A Turkish Tar-Tar, will be elaborately staged. A chorus of twenty and a strong olio will be presented. The co. will open early in August, and the tour will embrace a trip to the Pacific Coast.

Dr. H. A. Young, formerly of the team of Young and Young, has opened offices in the Colonial Arcade, Cleveland, O., and will be glad to see any of his former friends who may be playing in that city.

The Troubadour Four, Nat Wilson, Harry Thornton, Burt Eaton, and William Fuller, will close their season with Reilly and Wood's co. May 21 and open at Allentown, Pa., May 30, with Bryant and Saville's Minstrels for the entire Summer. Their Summer season will close Sept. 17, after which they will play in vaudeville for seven weeks, then sail for Europe, to open at Cardiff, Wales, Nov. 28.

Will J. Tomkins, the topical talker, continues to issue his interesting postal cards, which have caused so much comment during the season.

Waller and Magill in A Pistol Card were favorably received at the Star Theatre, Hamilton, Canada, week of April 4. They are booked solid until September.

The Columbians, formerly known as the Columbian Trio, have been making a decided hit in England. They have issued a very neat souvenir containing a number of very flattering notices from the leading English papers.

May Walsh recently closed a season of thirty-three weeks with the Funny Mr. Dooley co., and has joined Sullivan and Krau's Gay Masqueraders for the remainder of the season.

The original John G. Schrode, of the Schrode Brothers, whose knee was injured some years ago, is about to resume work. He will have a partner and the team will be known as the Brothers Schrode.

The management of Proctor's 125th Street Theatre has been missing tickets for some little time past. A watch was set and one of the door-keepers was "caught with the goods." He was held for trial last week in the Harlem Police Court.

Annie Oakley has won another suit for alleged libel against a newspaper. This time it is the New Orleans "Times-Democrat" and the amount is $7,500. She sued for $25,000.

James I. Russell, one of the most courteous of the officials connected with the staff of Hyde and Behman's Theatre in Brooklyn, has written and composed a new ballad, called "You, Dear," which has been accepted for publication by M. Witmark and Sons. It is said to be very catchy, and the friends of Mr. Russell will help to boom it into popularity.

the Circle Theatre one night last week. He was escorted to the station on the complaint of one of the ushers, who showed a badly damaged eye.

Al. Lawrence, the ventriloquial comedian, was the recipient of a most enthusiastic notice from the critic of the Indianapolis "Journal" when he made his appearance last week at the Grand Opera House in that city.

W. H. Murphy and Blanche Nichols gave the one thousand six hundredth performance of The Bifurcated Girl last week at New Orleans. In spite of the frequent repetitions, the sketch seems to go better than ever.

Charles E. Stutsman is making a hit singing "Beneath the Spreading Oak" with Vogel's Minstrels.

May Howard had a narrow escape from death by asphyxiation in a hotel in Kansas City on April 10. She lit a gas stove to warm the room and went to sleep. The stove leaked, and if a passing fire engine had not awakened the well-known burlesquer it would have been all over with her. As it was she had a very close call, and the physicians had to work over her for some time before she was restored to consciousness.

Will H. Fields, the Hebrew comedian, who has been with A Run on the Bank this season, entered the vaudeville field on April 17 at the Arcade, Toledo.

Mr. and Mrs. James P. Lee and Little Madeline were the headliners at the Orpheum, Utica, N. Y., last week, and their comedy playlet, Thou Shalt Not Steal, was a big hit.

The Musical Goolmans have lately added an elegant and expensive musical novelty to their act and it is a great success. Mr. Goolman also has in course of construction a second edition of his musical clocks, which will be added to the act next Fall. This is the only instrument of its kind in the world, and for the last seven years has been a trade-mark with this act. They will close their Winter season at the Columbia, Cincinnati, April 30. Commencing May 30, they are booked solid until the last of November on the Melville Park circuit, with the Orpheum circuit and other Western bookings to follow.

Clint and Bessie Robbins will be featured with a vaudeville co. to be sent on a ten weeks' tour, opening at Malcolm, Ia., by Manager Chase, of Chase's Runaway Match co.

Maude Caswell, the American acrobat, opened at Barcelona, Spain, on April 2 for one month. This engagement will be followed by a run at Bouvedad's Theatre, Marseilles. After that Miss Caswell will tour through Egypt, Italy and Switzerland. She has had to refuse a fine offer of time in England owing to her Continental dates.

Proctor's Twenty-third Street and 125th Street houses are undergoing extensive improvements in the way of new decorations. The Harlem house is being thoroughly overhauled, and will have new carpets and draperies as well as new frescoes.

William Hannen writes that he is no longer connected with the Orpheus Comedy Four, and will hereafter appear with his wife under the names Hannen and Hart.

The Magic Kettle, the latest illusion, which is said to be a most surprising and wonderful act, was successfully introduced at a recent Sunday concert at the Metropolis Theatre. It has received the highest indorsement from Manager Henry Rosenberg.

In spite of the fact that he was not billed as a headliner last week at Hyde and Behman's Theatre, Brooklyn, little Buster Keaton carried off the honors. A majority of the Brooklyn papers credited him with being the hit of the bill.

Count De Robeo is featured in the ollo with A Georgia Camp Meeting co. in his unicycle act. Next season he will put on a large musical act, introducing the unicycle, with Will F. Roberts, a musician. They will be called the De Robeo-Roberts Trio. The feature will be a quick change from a machine shop to a fully furnished parlor in ten seconds.

Gaston and Stone will remain as a feature of the Kentucky Belles until the middle of May, and will open on the Orpheum circuit May 29. Mr. Stone has been ill, but is again able to go on with his work.

Holcombe, Curtis and Webb are rehearsing a new sketch to replace A Winter Session, which will be produced shortly. It will be called The Botany Class. The same characters will be used.

Houdini, "King of Handcuffs," will sail for America on the "Deutschland" on May 27. After the tremendous strain brought on by his wonderful test in escaping from a supposedly perfect pair of handcuffs, described in last week's MIRROR, he was ill for two weeks with grip, but has now fully recovered. Houdini writes that there are dozens of performers coming to the United States by every steamer this Spring.

A big consignment of elephants and their native trainers arrived in New York on Saturday, and on Sunday morning the outfit was taken to Luna Park, Coney Island.

May Yohe made her reappearance on the stage at the Hippodrome, Brighton, England, last week. She will appear in London later on.

Wilmer and Vincent may control a circuit next season embracing Utica, Troy, Syracuse, and Schenectady.

The Lyric, a new vaudeville house in Utica, N. Y., was announced to open April 18. Charles Rosencrans, of New York, is the manager. The house is located about half a mile from the centre of the city and in what is called the Italian district. It was originally started for the presentation of Italian drama and opera, but the success vaudeville has had in Utica caused the management to change the style of entertainment. It is a modern house, seating 800. The proprietors are Messrs. Grimaldi, Patrico, and Pietrafesa. The opening bill includes the Watermelon Girls, McMahon and Chapelle, Yackley and Bunnell, Sisters Barrett, John E. Drew, M. Caldano, the Minstrel Maids, and the biograph.

George Elmore and Lillian Daven will close on April 23, at Grand Rapids, Mich., their second successful season with Elmer and Jule Walters' A Millionaire Tramp, Miss Daven having been especially engaged to play her original part of Josie Trumbull. She will go to her home at Newport, Ky., to rest for the Summer. Mr. Elmore will go to Chicago to look after some business interests.

Nellie Dunbar, the female baritone who is playing the soubrette part with A Hidden Crime, has just added illustrated songs to her act, which is being featured.

Week 18-23: Leonard and Leonard, Alla Wood, Pillings and Phillips, Alita Adair, Baker and Leon, Masse and Masse, cineograph.

S. FERNBERGER.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The bill at the Orpheum 3-9 was above the average and that popular house was filled nightly by appreciative audiences. Marcel's Art Studies were given the place of honor and proved more than equal to the position. Ten pictures were presented, each an artistic effect in realistic colorings. Lew Sully scored his usual hit, while Anderson and Briggs, a colored song and dance team, were scarcely less well received. La Petite Adelaide also came in for a large share of applause. Hal Merritt, Jules and Ella Garrison, Sisters Gasch, and the kinodrome provided excellent entertainment. Week 10-16: Midgely and Carlisle, Kingsley and Lewis, Clara Ballerini, Billy Link, Brandon and Wiley, Ballerini's dogs, and Marcel's Art Studies in a change of programme. Business big. Week 17-23: Hal Davis and Inez Macauley, Hume, Ross and Lewis, Fiske and McDonaugh, George H. Wood, Bernard Dyllyn, Olson Brothers and Ferguson and Passmore.——The Rose Hill English Folly co. made a very favorable impression at the Century 3-10. The Baby Trust and A Peep Behind the Scenes were the burlesques. The Hughes Musical Trio, Wolf and Milton, Wilson Trio, and Tom Nolan and Cora White were well received. Business fair. Transatlantic Burlesquers 10-16 provided a satisfactory entertainment. Business fair. Bon Ton Burlesquers 17-23.

D. KEEDY CAMPBELL.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Keith's (Charles Lovenberg, res. mgr.): A strong and well balanced bill 4-9 drew large houses. The leaders were Robert Hilliard and co. in No. 973, Frank Bush in a lot of new stories, Hal Stephens in his clever limitations, with special scenery and effects, and Piccolo's Midgets. Alfonso, an equilibrist, and Petching Brothers, Providence boys, scored hits. Others who pleased were Wynne Winslow, Four Huntings, Mlle. Latina, Milt and Maud Wood, Pierce and Maxee, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thorne and co., and Van Fossen and McCauley. Week 11-16: Adelaide Herrmann, Digby Bell, Metropolitan Operatic Quartette, Four Dunbars, Emmet Devoy and co., Vernon, Carson and Willard, Elsie Bernard, Kimball and Donovan, Ellsworth and Burt, Foster and dog, Cooper and Robinson, Ross and Bernard, and biograph. This was the final week of the vaudeville season.——Westminster (George H. Batcheller, mgr.): The attraction 4-9 was Frank B. Carr's Thoroughbreds, with Polk and Trask, Washburn and Flynn, Kennedy and Evans, Empire Comedy Four, Russell and O'Neil, and Mlle. La Tosca as features. Business good. Tiger Lilies 11-16. Kentucky Belles 18-23.

HOWARD C. RIPLEY.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Poli's Wonderland (S. Z. Poli, mgr.): Ross Naynon and her Kids proved a big drawing card week 4-9. Burton and Brooks' new act did not score as well as it should, but this team are prime favorites here. A genuine hit was made by the La Vine Carmencie Trio. Others were Gracie Emmett and co., Herbert Brooks, a clever juggler with a remarkable trunk trick; James F. McDonald, Smith and Powell, and the electrograph. Next week, Billy B. Van and Rose Beaumont, J. C. Nugent and co., Brooks Brothers, Fitzgerald, Nielt and Maude Wood, Rossow Midgets, and the electrograph. Week 18-23: Mary Hampton and co., Five Society Belles, Waterbury Brothers and Tenny, Sullivan and Pasquelina, Colby and Way, Georgia O'Ramey, and the Juggling Mac Banes.——Items: Mr. Poli has just purchased a large motor touring car, and will use it for business and pleasure. He thinks it will facilitate travel about the State for visiting his four other theatres. It is possible that Mr. Poli will send his nephew and booking agent, P. Alonzo, abroad again this Summer for novelties. Alonzo spent last Summer in London, Paris, Berlin, and Vienna.

JANE MARLIN.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Avenue (Harry Davis, mgr.): The First Royal Marine Band of Germany heads an excellent bill week 11-16: Yorke and Adams, Werner, Amoros Troupe, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Murphy, Pat Rooney and Emma Francis, Empire City Quartette, Madame Emmy and her pets, Caron and Farnum, Mildred Grover and her "picks," Spaulding, and the Nohrens, and travel pictures. Opening to large attendance. Week 18-23: Van Rensselaer Wheeler, Sydney Deane, Frank Belcher and Herbert Ayling in Christmas on Blackwell's Island, Eva Williams and Jac Tucker, Nora Bayes, Molasso Troupe, Brothers French, Carlin and Otto, Howard Brothers, Harry Le Clair, Orville and Frank, Harrington, and kinetograph.——Duquesne (Harry Williams, mgr.): Week 11-16, close of season: Charles Vanes, Joe Flynn, Kline and Clifton, Sims and King, Smedley Sketch Club, Simmons and White, Lawson and Namon, Rosinos, and John Le Clair.——Academy (Harry Williams, Jr., mgr.): Week 11-16: Fred Irwin's New Majesties. 18-23: Gay Masqueraders.

ALBERT S. L. HEWES.

DENVER, COL.—Week March 28: Overflowing houses at the Orpheum. The management has been changed in the past few days, and Mr. Carson has been substituted for Lee Haney, while Max Fabish has been made assistant manager. The programme was excellent, the Nambs Family of Japanese leading off. The most attractive number in the singing line, with the exception of The Girl with the Auburn Hair, was the performance of Flo Adler, who sang with much sweetness. The Girl with the Auburn Hair made the usual hit, and the free matinee to red-headed girls brought out 606 to compete for the prize rose. Snyder and Buckley are the best musical comedians on the circuit. Joe Flynn was good, and the Worlds Trio scored a success. The Ellis-Nowlan Trio were fine. Week 4-10 we had: Harry Le Clair, Carlin and Otto, Colby and Way, Ethel Levy, Josephine Gassman, Wilfred Clarke and co., Trask and Gladden, and Ferguson and Passmore. Capacity houses.

WILLARD PACKARD HATCH.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The bill at the Columbia 4-10 was headed by Hallen and Fuller, who presented An Election Bet. George Wilson gave a monologue which took immensely, and there were a number of other clever acts on the bill. The bill for 11-17 includes the Herras Family, Crawford and Manning, Eddie Leslie, Mr. and Mrs. Watrous, Hooker and Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Barry, Carrie Scott, Barry and Johnson, Milroy Trio, Mlle. Carrie, Blair and McNulty, Kosure and Chaplain, Charles Meyer and his dog, and the kinodrome. 18-24: Shean and Warren, Press Eldridge, Bloom and Cooper, Matthews and Ashley, McWaters and Tyson co., Carver and Pollard, Fred Zobedie, Three Nambas, Emmett and Kane, Miett's dogs, Willing and Larkin, and the kinodrome.——Rush's Bon Ton Burlesquers are the Standard bill 10-16. The burlesques are The Lady Killer and the Bon Tons in Sunny Spain. Al. Reeves' co. 17-23. Trocadero Burlesquers 24.

J. A. NORTON.

TORONTO, CAN.—Shea's (M. Shea, mgr.): This house did good business 4-9 with Herbert Lloyd, Warren and Blanchard, Paul Barnes, the Rays, Basque Quartette, La Troupe Carmen, and the kinetograph. Week 11-16: Tom Karl, John T. Sullivan and co., Paul Spadoni, O'Brien and Havel, Trocadero Quartette, Molasso Troupe, Lizzie N. Wilson, Kelley and Kent, and the kinetograph. Week 18-23: Papinta, Quigley Brothers, Omar and Delmo, Monroe, Mack and Lawrence, A. O. Duncan, Flood Brothers, and the kinetograph.——Star (F. W. Stair, mgr.): Good houses were the order 4-9, when Harry Morris' Night on Broadway was presented. Fair co. and work. Musical selections were very good, and Tom Almond's long shoe and high skate dancing was a feature. The High Rollers Extravaganza co. did a splendid business 11-16. Rice and Barton 18-23.

STANLEY McKEOWN BROWN.

NEWARK, N. J.—Proctor's: Excellent business and fine bill. Cole and Johnson, Waterbury Brothers and Tenny, Monroe, Mack and Lawrence, Baker and Lynn, Frank Bowman, Henry and Hoon, Kenyon and De Garmo and Herbert De Witt week 4-9. One of the best bills of the season drew crowded houses 11-16. Robert Loraine and co. headed the bill with a new one-act play, A Little Tragedy at Then-Tain, in which he scored a decided hit. Others were the Eight Gatling Guards, Quaker City Quartette, Alf Holt, Van Sician and West, Carter and Bluford, and Barto and Lafferty.——Waldmann's: Bryant's Burlesquers, which opened 4, had an olio including Barmody, Casmore and Florence, the Rackettes, Kennedy and Camerlin, and Imperial Japanese Troupe. Reilly and Woods 11-16 to good business. Weber's Dainty Duchess 18-23.

FREDERICK T. MARSH.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Bon Ton (Thomas W. Dinkins, mgr.): The Brigadiers came 4-9 to good business, but did not give a very good entertainment. Cracker Jacks 11-16. Vanity Fair 18-23. Imperial Burlesque co. 25-30.——Items: Leon Stears, of the Auditorium, Newark, is the new lessee of Washington Park Theatre, at Bayonne. The season will open May 14. The house is being reconstructed, and has been named the Park Theatre. J. M. Lederer will be manager.—Appearing at Elks' Hall 14 for the Railway Clerks were Barrington and Martell, C. S. Thompson, John A. Driscoll, Clark and Hilton, George W. Hursey, Bellclaire Brothers, Frank Fogarty and Burrows-Travis co.—George W. Hussey, the ventriloquist, joins Forepaugh's Circus in Philadelphia 18.

WALTER C. SMITH.

ALBANY, N. Y.—Proctor's (F. F. Proctor, mgr.): Easter week opened 4 to an increased attendance and a good programme. Prof. Wormwood's dog and monkey circus is one of the best of its kind. The Four Nelsons Comiques are fine funmakers. Mabelle Adams is a charming violinist. Alf Holt, Leah Russell, Carter and Blueford, and Wood and Ray are in the list. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes and Sully Family head the bill 11. Others are Julian Rose, Harris and Walters, Lucy Monroe, Kenyon and De Garmo, and Swift and Barton.——Gaiety (Agnes Barry, mgr.): The London Belles 4 drew a big house. Tiger Lilies (return) 7-9 to good business. Harry Morris 11-13; packed house. Sam Jack's co. 14-16.

CHARLES N. PHELPS.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Star (F. R. Trottman, mgr.): The New City Sports drew a full house and entertained in a satisfactory way. The bill included Adelaide Marsden, Rensetta and Larue, Camille Calhoun and May Rowe, Pan-American Four, Palfrey and Merrill, Marie Stuart Dodd, and the Speck Brothers. Knickerbocker Extravaganza co. 10-16 to good houses.——The Crystal offered the following bill to a pleased audience 4: Ali, Hunter and Ali, Arthur Don and Minnie M. Thompson, the Nelos, Baby Gladys, and Joe Gomes. Week 11-16: Jupiter Trio, Laredo and Blake, Frank Dunn, Helen Ogden, and Myrtle Gannon.

CLAUDE L. N. NORRIE.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The bill at Chase's week 11-16 presents Vesta Tilley, Five Nosses, Max Waldon, Rosaire, Jack Norworth, O'Rourke-Bennett Trio, Nora Bayes, and the vitagraph. Week 18, the D. A. R. Congress sessions. 25: Vaudeville, including Milly Capell, Digby Bell, Stuart Barnes, Snyder and Buckley, Robertus and Wilfredo, the Mohens, and Smith and Powell.——At Kernan's the Gay Masqueraders co. includes Conroy and McFarland, May Walsh, Post and Clinton, the Busche-De Vere Trio, and Benny Welch. World Beaters 18. Grass Widows 25.

JOHN T. WARDE.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Poli's Theatre (S. Z. Poli, mgr.; Louis Kilby, res. mgr.): Continuous large business week 4 responded to the excellent bill, which consisted of Mooney and Holbein, James Richmond Glenroy, Georgia Gardner and Joseph Madden, Fred S. Stuber, Hale and Frances, Empire City Quartette, Mary Hampton and co., and the electrograph. 11-16: Robert Carter, Kathryn Waters and co., Baby Jeannette, Phil and Nettie Peters, Howard Brothers, Hugh Stanton and Florence Modrna, the electrograph, and George Primrose and the Foley Boys, who received a great ovation.

A. DUMONT.

CINCINNATI, O.—The Eight Vassar Girls proved the hit of the bill at the Columbia 3-9. Lew Hawkins proved as funny as ever with his new monologue, and Menifee Johnstone and Belle Stoddard were seen in The Golden Rose. Marco Twins, Al. Lawrence, Gillihan and Murray, Orville and Frank, and Bailey and Madison, and the bioscope completed the bill. The Orpheum Show 10-16 played a successful return engagement.——The Trocadero Burlesquers were at People's 3-9, drawing fair patronage. Hyde's Blue Ribbon Girls 10-16 pleased.

H. A. SUTTON.

OMAHA, NEB.—The usual large audience greeted the change of bill at the Orpheum 3. The attractions included Brandow and Wiley, Mignonette Kokin, Mitchell and Love, Thorne and Carlton, Barr and Evans, the Passparts, and Galetti's monkeys. Week 10: Davis, McCauley and co., Sisters Gasch, Jules and Ella Garrison, George H. Wood, Hal Merritt, Anderson and Briggs. Week 17: Marcel's Art Studies, Midgeley and Carlisle, Clara Ballerini, Billy Link, Louise Brehany, Trask and Gladden, Ballerini's dogs.

J. R. RINGWALT.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—A good bill was offered at Shea's week 4, including Tom Karl, John T. Sullivan and co., O'Brien and Havel, Lizzie N. Wilson, Paul Spadoni, a wonderful juggler; Trocadero Quartette, and Kelly and Kent.——The High Rollers was the attraction at the Lafayette and scored a hit.——Item: A branch of the "Raspberries" has been organized here by John Mullov, stage-manager of Shea's. Among the joiners were Flood Brothers and "Happy" Eddie Carr.

P. T. O'CONNOR.

CLEVELAND, O.—Shea's Empire continues to furnish its patrons good entertainment. Bill 11-16 includes Louise Gunning, Elsie Janis, Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Crane, St. Onge Brothers, Nice Twins, Gotham Comedy Four, Wincherman's bears, McMahon and Chappelle, and Vaidis Sisters.——T. W. Dinkins' Utopians are at the Star 11-16. In the olio are Emmonds, Emerson and Emmonds, George Diamond, Nice and Coy, Madden and Jess, and McRae and Wyatt.

WILLIAM CRASTON.

TOLEDO, O.—Arcade week 3: Hayman and Franklin, McIntyre and Rice, the Musical Goolmans, James B. Donovan, Banks and Winona Winter, Marsh and Sartella, Harris and Walters, and O'Brien Troupe. A good bill with fair attendance. An unusually strong bill week closing 16 included Herbert Lloyd, Murphy and Willard, World's Trio, Burkhardt and Vincent, Barre, Bedare and Barre, Margaret Newton, Orville and Frank. Business good.

C. M. EDSON.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Week 11-16: The World Beaters are at Kernan's Monumental with a performance that is crisp and lively. A new musical farce, entitled Frolics of the Fair; or, A Trip to St. Louis and Wonderland, is the feature. On the specialty list are Rogers and Hilpert, Waters and Nowak, Bohannan and Corey, Dorsch and Russell, the Three Nubes, Saville Sisters, and May Gelhart. Jolly Grass Widows 18. Bowery Burlesquers 25.

HAROLD BUTLEDGE.

DETROIT, MICH.—The Temple Theatre reports that the week ending March 26 saw the largest business in the history of the house. Week 4-9: Henry E. Dixey in Over a Welsh Rarebit was excellent. Laura Millard captivated her audience. Wright Huntington and co., Bloom and Cooper, John and Lillian Hoover, Vaidis Sisters, A. O. Duncan, Irene La Tour, and the kinetograph also scored. Aubrey Boucicault in Box and Cox week 11 scored an emphatic hit. Others were: Frederick Bond and co., Violet Dale, Robertus and Wilfredo, Avery and Hart, De Velde and Zalda, James J. Morton, Harry Howard's dogs and ponies, and kinetograph. Vesta Tilley 18-23.——Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew headed the bill at the Avenue 4-9. Mayme Remington and her Bungie Rookoo Babies were welcomed. Alice Raymond, Mack and Elliott, Yorke and Adams, Lawson and Namon, Ward and Curran, Macart's dogs and donkeys and the kinetograph were all good. Week 11-16 witnessed the vaudeville debut of two Detroit young women, Lillian Apel, a pianist of ability, and Caroline Williams, a singer of note. Both have cause to feel proud of their reception. The Potter Family, Charles Deland and co., Mary Dupont and co., Maxwell and Dudley, Nellie Florede, Stuart Barnes, Asra, and the kinetograph scored.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Orpheum (Clarence Drown, mgr.): A remarkably good bill week March 28. The Nicholas Sisters should be accorded the palm; they are inimitable coon-song singers and won praise. Emmett Corrigan and co. in Jocky Jones were well received. The playlet is quite effective. Loney Haskell is a good monologist. Gillo's Artesto, a novelty, kept every one guessing. Held over were Ferguson and Mack, Swedish Ladies' Quintette, Lowe-Hughes Duo, and Barrows-Lancaster co. Week 4 was better in holdovers than in new comers. Bill included Billy Clifford, Taffary's dogs, Rosttino and Stevens, Loney Haskell, Nichols Sisters, Gillo's Artesto, Barrows-Lancaster co., Emmett Corrigan and Co.——Chutes Park (Hy. Koch, mgr.): Eller's Band is favoring the lovers of classic music by frequently giving programmes devoted entirely to one composer. Assistant Manager Ferguson gives the welcome news that a five months' contract during next Winter has been signed with the band.——Item: The many admirers of Lillian Burkhart were greatly surprised to learn of her marriage to George Goldsmith, of this city. Mr. Goldsmith is a member of the local lodge of Elks. Mr. and Mrs. Goldsmith have purchased a home and will settle here.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—Park (Joseph Weber, mgr.): The Great Lafayette finished week March 28 to big houses and gave excellent performances. Bill for week 4 included Crane Brothers, Leon and Adeline, Sisters Beardsley, Majestic Musical Four, Frey and Fields, Zieka and King, and kinetograph. Big hits made by Crane Brothers and the Majestic Four. Week 11: Marco Twins, the Allisons, Musical Goolmans, Castellet and Hall, Clifford and Harvey, and Saissell Brothers. Black Patti Troubadours week 25, when house closes for season. Week 18: Hayward and Hayward, Fields and Hanson, Nellie Florede, the Bernsteins and the Great Martinellas.——Items: Colonel Frank Sourbeck, ticket taker, will have charge of dance hall at Idora Park, which opens May 12.—The Great Lafayette was sued here by Sheriff Thomas for $10,000 damages for alleged slander.—Gladys Arnold, of the Lafayette co., closed 2 and returned to New York.—Sadie Arcval, late of Blue Beard, joined Lafayette co. here.—There is talk of a change of management at the Park for next season. Manager Joe Weber may go elsewhere to look after the interests of Weber and Rush, lessees.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COL.—Empire (A. H. Hagen, mgr.): Vardaman, female impersonator, and the best in the line that has appeared in our city, and Sam Hood were the headliners week March 28-2. The Newmans, Dell and Fonda, Waldo and Devere, and the biograph contributed to the capacity average patronage. Week 5-12: Wightman, Kingdom, Newman, Connors and Connors, and moving pictures.——Grand Opera House (S. N. Nye, mgr.): The Randolphs, Miss Rice, and moving pictures were the features. Erb and Stanley, M. Bintrup, the Fantas, and Ben Sutton to good business.——Items: Our two weeks of vaudeville at the Opera House, introduced by Mr. Nye as a "feeler," has resulted in splendid business, playing twice nightly, with a matinee. The management is highly satisfied with the results and is figuring on putting in vaudeville at the close of the regular season. It is almost sure that we are to have vaudeville at 10 and 20 cents this Summer.—The owners of Hiawatha Gardens, at Manitou, have not yet decided whether or not they will open this season.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Grand (Shafer Ziegler, mgr.): Frederick V. Bowers headed the bill 4-9 in his spectacular scenic and singing act. The Brothers Schenk in equilibristic feats that are wonderful. Mme. Emmy won much favor with her canine pets. Burke and Larue and the Inky Boys furnished the real fun of the bill. Dave Nowlin, mimic and vocalist; Violet Dale, a pretty and clever girl; Gotham Comedy Four, who do some good singing; Kherns and Cole, and the bioscope completed the bill. Opened to excellent houses. Week 11: Vassar Girls, the Eretto Family, Al. Lawrence, Green and Werner, Cordua and Maud, the Great Leon, Bailey and Madison, Frey and Fields, and bioscope. Opened to good houses. Helen Bertram, Hallen and Fuller and others 18.——Empire (Charles Zimmerman, mgr.): Bon Ton Burlesquers 4-9. Good houses. Al. Reeves' co. 11 pleased.——Item: Helen Bertram, who heads the bill at the Grand week 18, has not been in this, her native city, for several seasons. It will be her first appearance here in vaudeville.

PEORIA, ILL.—Main Street (Will Nash, mgr.): Week 4-11: The De Muths, the Dalys, Tamachi Yukoma, Ed Lamb, Emmett and Kane, and the kinetoscope. Fine bill and good attendance. Week 11-18: Carleton and Terre, Jessie De Wealth, Trainor and Button, Walter O'Gorman, Al. Hadyn, and the Peorianscope. Good and drawing well.——Weast (C. F. Bartson, prop.): Pleases the regular patrons with a good bill 11-18: Gilroy, Haynes and Montgomery (holdovers), Derrill Sisters, Jund and Ivora, Rose and Severn, and the Seddern Brothers. A well-liked bill.——Jacobs' (A. F. Jacobs, prop.): Carroll and Clarke, Wade and Hastings, and the Midgleys were excellent. Pleased crowds. Week 11-18: Brooks and Young (holdovers), the Leons, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Tracy, Kinston and Hamilton, J. Howard Brown, and the Midgleys. Taking O. K.——Item: There is talk of a small amusement park to be located in the heart of the city, to be managed by Fred Stansfield.

STOCKTON, CAL.—Unique (Lou Buhlert, mgr.): Good patronage is greeting the bill week March 28-3. Oro and Oro are in the sixth week and are very popular. Cole and Cole, Quinn Trio, Rouble Sims, Zie Weller, George Lamb, and the biograph complete the bill. Week 3: Ward and Ward, Stanley and Scanlan, Pearl Hickman, Tom Hefron, Oro and Oro, George C. Scanlan, and bioscope.——Novelty (Alex Kaiser, mgr.): Another big week was ushered in 28, the programme being made up of Friedlander Brothers, Harold Lorraine, Boyle and Lewis, Verne and O'Brien, Don Leo, Tesuwar's Troupe of Royal Japs, and new moving pictures. Week 3-9: The Halls, James Irwin, Wilson and Moran, Lorraine, Camille Derroni, Koplin, Fowler and Koplin, and new moving pictures.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.—Sheedy's (Theodore B. Bayliss, mgr.): Week 4-9: Village Choir, Martini and Maximillian, Lanoti Brothers, Johnson and Wells, Smirl and Kessner, Ruth Nelta, John and Bertha Gleason, and Fred Houlihan, and the vitagraph. S. R. O. Week 11-16: Holden and Florence, Foster and Foster, Belle Hathaway's monkeys, the Tanakas, Falke and Semon, George W. Stewart, and the vitagraph. Record business. Week 18-23: May Edouin and Fred Edwards, Bison City Quartette, Four Webbs, Baby Jeanette, Frank O'Brien, Willie and Edith Hart, Mlle. Valesca, and the vitagraph.——Flowers' (John I. Shannon, mgr.): Gayest Manhattan Burlesque co. 7-9; big advance sale.

TRENTON, N. J.—New Trent (Edward Renton, mgr.): The headliner week 4 was Adgie and her lions, which made a sensation. Bedini and Arthur do an extremely funny juggling act. The Hollingsworths have a good act, which goes well. Sullivan and Pasquelina, Simmons and White, Laveen and Cross, Martin and Quigg, and the biograph all add well. Business continues good. Week 11: Keogh and Ballard, Raymond and Caverly, Mr. and Mrs. Nell Litchfield, Hale and Frances, Fredo and Dare, Marion and Deane, Mangean Troupe, and biograph. Week 18: Three Kestons, the Maginelys, Dick and Alice M'Avoy, Sabel Johnson, Foster and Foster, Hathaway and Walton, and the Village Choir.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The Orpheum started the week with a very clever bill March 27-2. The Five Mowats, juvenile jugglers, headed the bill, and are, perhaps, the best we have had in this line. Their work is quick and accurate. Mazux and Mazette have a good act. Coakeley and McBride are clever dancers and won much applause. Wesson, Walters and Wesson in Hotel Repose give a very funny performance and are favorites. James H. Cullen sings some good parodies, and Billy Clifford is as swagger as ever. Taffary's dogs please, as do Rostinno and Stevens. La Belle Guerrero, the clever pantomimist, was one of the features of the best bill we have had in some time.

HOBOKEN, N. J.—Empire (A. M. Bruggemann, prop.): A splendid bill was offered 4-10 to good business. Clayton White and Marie Stuart, Charles T. Aldrich, Charles and Florence Gregson, Henderson and Ross, Holcomb, Curtis and Webb, Billy Johnson, Fred A. Pelot, and the kinetograph made up the list. Week 11-17: Girard and Gardner, Goleman's cats and dogs, Jack Theo Trio, Lavender and Thompson, Bryant and Saville, and the kinetograph. Week 18-24: Russell Brothers, George Thatcher, Brothers De Onzo, Emerson and Omega, McDonald and Huntington, Two Roses, Rocco De Fino, and the kinetograph.

PORTLAND, ME.—Portland Theatre (James E. Moore, mgr.): Hal Godfrey and co. headed another big bill week 4, which included John W. World and Mindell Kingston, Sandor Trio, Madge Fox, Cal. Stewart, Rastus and Banks, Musical Thor, and kinetograph to capacity. Annie Abbott, Kilnore Sisters, Sidney Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thorne and co., Three Hickman Brothers, Reed and Shaw, and others 11-16. Week 19: Emma De Voy and co., Mayme Gehrue, Wilton Brothers, Three Hickman Brothers, Irene La Tour, Curtis and Adams, and kinetograph.

SALT LAKE CITY, U.—Unique (W. P. Gourley, mgr.): Week March 28: Jean Wilson, Virden and Dunlap, Frank Cushucay, Le Strange Sisters, and Kinetoscope. Very good business.——Novelty (G. N. Wood, mgr.): Fred McKinns, Charles Faurucs, Katcratus, Jennette Lee, Trask and Murry, biograph. Packed houses all week.——Bon Ton (Sawyer and Young, mgrs.): Rockway and Conway, the Buttons, Johnny Williams, Barton and Lyman, Miss Houtz, and kinetoscope. Very large business.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—Poli's (S. Z. Poli, mgr.): The Rossow Midgets top the bill 4-9 and make good in all ways. With them are J. C. Nugent and Jessie Charron, the Avollos, Foster and Foster, Phil and Nettie Peters, Murphy and Francis, and the electrograph. 11-18: Mary Hampton and co., Tommy Lynch (a Bridgeport boy and a good dancer), Burton and Brooks, Lavine Cimaron Trio, Herbert Brooks, Willie and Edith Hart, Orpheus Comedy Four, and the electrograph. Annie Abbott 18.

LAWRENCE, MASS.—Casto (Al. Haynes, mgr.): This house reopened for the Spring season 4, with Dean Edsall and co., George C. Davis, Edward Chrissie, Otto Brothers, Joe J. Sullivan and co., Sansone and Delila, Byron and Foster, and Finlay and Burke. Good business and performance. James J. Corbett headed a good bill 11-16 to large houses. Others were Howley and Leslie, Larkins and Paterson, New York Newsboys' Quartette, Vinton and Clayton, Mae Taylor, Tom Mack, and the biograph.

WATERBURY, CONN.—The Jacques (Jean Jacques, mgr.): Pat Rooney and Emma Francis, Katherine Minahan, Smith and Fuller, Martine and Balmo, the Harts, Belle Hathaway and her monkeys, and Baby Jeanette pleased large audiences 4-9. The Great Avoles, May Edouin and Fred Edwards, Mooney and Holbein, Murphy and Francis, Georgia O'Ramey, Fred S. Stuber, James F. MacDonald, and the electrograph filled the house with well pleased audiences 11-16.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—St. Charles Orpheum (C. R. Bray, mgr.): A good bill and attendance 4-10. The features are Mabel McKinley, Jack Gardner, Bernard Dyllyn, Mlle. Amoros, Wilson and Heloise, Eckert and Berg, Nirvana and her horse, and the animated views. Fair bill and good attendance 11-16. The features are: Murphy and Nichols, Colby Family, Lew Sully, the Passparts, Lowe-Hughes Duo, Swedish Quintette, La Petite Adelaide, and the animated views.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—Crystal (J. E. Jackson, mgr.): March 27-2: Innes and Ryan, Frank J. Groh, Sully and Phelps, Irene Dale, Costello and King, J. Turner Wall, and Cosman's Moving Pictures drew large crowds. 3-9: Russell and Dunbar, Annette Moore, Bentham and Freeman, Frank Groh, Le Witt and Ashmore, and the pictures to capacity. 10-16: The Great Westin, Crotty Trio, Frank J. Groh, Pringle and Kenwood, James R. Waters, Nellie Revell.

UTICA, N. Y.—Orpheum (Wilmer and Vincent, props.): Klein, Ott Brothers and Nickerson, Robert Carver and co., Mr. and Mrs. Nell Litchfield, Senator Frank Bell, Lillian Shaw, Rosaire, Smith and Bowman, and kinodrome, to large audiences. Excellent bill. Week 11-16: Annie Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. James P. Lee, Warren and Blanchard, Smith and Gorman, three Rio Brothers, Rush and Gordon, the Britons, and kinodrome to large audiences; fair bill.

WORCESTER, MASS.—Park (P. F. Shea and Alf. T. Wilton, leasees and mgrs.): Annie Abbott headed a good bill 4-9

CORRESPONDENCE

Moore, mgr.): Wilbur-Kirwin Opera co. 4-9 closed with The Two Vagabonds to good house; performance not up to standard of co., as Miss Emmett was not in the cast and her part was taken by understudy, which made production rather slow; business for week fair. Miss Bob White (return) 6; big house; very clever performance, but not up to last. Sousa's Band 14; big advance sale. Edward Waldman in Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde 16.

RED BANK.—OPERA HOUSE (Charles E. Nieman, mgr.): Shore Acres March 25; big house; good production. Uncle Hez 29; performance and attendance fair. Sousa's Band 2 to big business; fine attraction. London Gaiety Girls and Little Egypt 6 to crowded house; good performance. Conroy and Mack opened 11-16 in The Price of Shame to S. R. O. Other plays: A Woman's Love, A Young Girl Saved, The Mayor's Daughter, The Lights of Gotham. For Her Children's Sake 20.

DOVER.—BAKER OPERA HOUSE (William H. Baker, mgr.): Eduard Waldmann in Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde 2; good performance; select audience. England's Moving Pictures 4, 5 pleased small houses. For Her Child's Sake 12.

PATERSON.—OPERA HOUSE (John J. Goetchius, mgr.): Herrmann 11; good house; performance satisfactory. Orpheus Club Concert (local) 12, 13; crowded houses. Only a Shop Girl 14-16. John Drew 18.

ASBURY PARK.—OPERA HOUSE (H. Garretty, mgr.): Preston Comedy co. 11-13. Plays: A Wife's Mistake, A Prince of Liars, East Lynne, Man in Black.

WASHINGTON.—OPERA HOUSE (Robert Petty, mgr.): Uncle Hez March 24; S. R. O.; good performance; Galvin's Vaudeville co. 6; good performance and house.

BOONTON.—HARRIS LYCEUM (Harris Brothers, mgrs.): For Her Baby's Sake 11; good performance; fair business.

NEW MEXICO.

LAS VEGAS.—DUNCAN OPERA HOUSE (F. P. Waring, mgr.): Maloney's Wedding 5; fair co.; good house. Eric of Sweden 12.

NEW YORK.

SCHENECTADY.—VAN CURLER OPERA HOUSE (Charles H. Benedict, mgr.): Although Archie Boyd did not appear in Joshua Whitcomb, as advertised, it was an exceptionally good co. that presented the fine old play here 6, 7 to three good houses. A splendid co. in The Sign of the Cross 8 impressed one of most representative audiences of season. Earl of Pawtucket pleased two audiences 9, and the co. was all that could be wished for; the story was one of the prettiest told on local stage this season. Quincy Adams Sawyer 12; good house; pleased. Lewis Morrison in Faust 13. Ward and Vokes 14. Martin's U. T. C. 16. May Fiske Comedy co. 17-22. Mrs. Carter 20. The Country Girl 26. Nat C. Goodwin 30. E. H. Sothern in The Proud Prince May 4. Mugg's Landing 5. The Eternal City 6. In Old Kentucky 7.—ITEMS: Mrs. Monahan, mother of James K. Hackett, was again a welcome visitor here 5.—The members of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity gave a reception to Mr. Hackett while here.—Robert Russell, son of the late Sol Smith Russell, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Berger 8.—While the present year has been a calamitous one in theatricals the Van Curler has had an excellent season, many cos. appearing twice daily to good houses. Manager Benedict has used good foresight in booking attractions and while some may not have drawn as largely as on previous visits, it is doubtful if any manager has lost money in coming here. GEORGE C. MOON.

ELMIRA.—ITEMS: The insurance on the burned theatres here has not been adjusted, and until that is done their rebuilding will not be commenced. Colonel David C. Robinson, owner of the Lyceum, is in the South, but is expected home daily, and it is probable that that house will be the first to get under way, with the Auditorium to follow closely. Nothing definite is ready for announcement regarding the absolutely new theatres projected. Four are being planned, with the probability that two will result. In the meanwhile the Rialto, a vaudeville house, the only theatre at present in Elmira, is reaping a harvest. Early in May Rorick's and Eldridge's, two Summer theatres open and are assured a profitable season.—The Casino Rink, which has been operated for seven months under the management of W. I. Copeland, dramatic editor of the "Star," and others, closed 9 after a most successful season.—Don W. Slauson, of the Lyceum business staff, is to commence on May 1 the publication of the "Daily Park News," to be devoted to the interest of Summer theatres of the East.—The Ligma Omega Society of Lady Jane Grey's School, Binghamton, N. Y., gave Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch 12.—Elmira amatures gave The Cricket on the Hearth in the theatre of Park Church 14 and 15 to large business.
J. MAXWELL BEERS.

ROCHESTER.—NATIONAL THEATRE (Max Hurtig, mgr.): Mason and Mason, supported by fairly good co., pleased good attendance 11-13. York State Folks (return) 14-16 met deserved success; large audiences present at each performance. The Sign of the Cross 18-20. Are You a Mason 21-23.—BAKER THEATRE (John E. Boyle, mgr.): The vitascope moving pictures packed the house 10. The stock co. in The Runaway Wife to fine houses 11-16; co. appearing to good advantage. The Sorrows of Satan 18-23.—COOK'S OPERA HOUSE (J. H. Moore, mgr.; W. B. McCallum, res. mgr.): One of Our Girls, as presented by the stock co. 11-16, was a decided hit and was greeted by large audiences. The Dairy Farm 18-23.—LYCEUM THEATRE (M. E. Wolff, mgr.): An English Daisy to fine audience 16. Frank Lalor and Laura Dean headed the cast.
J. W. CARRUTHERS.

ALBANY.—EMPIRE THEATRE (H. R. Jacobs, mgr.): Mordant-Humphrey co. is strengthening its hold here at each performance. The Wife was never better presented. Because She Loved Him So is the bill for 11-16, and is drawing good houses.—HARMANUS BLEECKER HALL (H. R. Jacobs, mgr.): The Lighthouse by the Sea 7-9 to fair business. Orphan's Prayer 11, 12. Ward and Vokes in A Pair of Pinks 13 did big business and kept two audiences in good humor. Parsifal 14 canceled. Du Barry 15, 16. To Die at Dawn 21-23. CHARLES N. PHELPS.

SYRACUSE.—WIETING OPERA HOUSE (J. L. Kerr, mgr.): Quincy Adams Sawyer 8; fair house. Lewis Morrison in Faust 9 drew well. King Lear, by Syracuse University students, was witnessed by big houses 12, 13. An English Daisy 14. Pinafore (local Elks) 15, 16.—BASTABLE THEATRE (H. A. Hurtig, mgr.): Under Southern Skies attracted well 7-9. York State Folks (return) to big business 11-13; same excellent co. Mason and Mason 14-16. Are You a Mason 18-20. The Sign of the Cross 21-23.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE (C. H. Plummer, mgr.): The stock co. presented Sergeant James to large houses 11-16; good performance. The Runaway Wife 18-23.—ITEMS: M. Reis, lessee of the Wieting, was in town 13.—The Bastable will run Summer stock, opening about May 2.—Little Florida Wilson is resting here.

PEEKSKILL.—COLONIAL THEATRE (Fred S. Cunningham, mgr.): Irene Myers Stock co. 4-9 opened with On the Stroke of Twelve to capacity, giving fair satisfaction. Other plays: The Heart of Colorado, The Counterfeiters, The Two Orphans, A Great Temptation, Man to Man, The King of Detectives, The Little Brigadier, War on Women; attendance through week averaged fair. Frankie Carpenter co. opened 11-16 with Shelter Bay to large house; excellent performance and co. American Academy of Dramatic Arts.

Empire Theatre Dramatic School.

FRANKLIN H. SARGENT, President.

Criticisms of Recent Public Performances:

"The students showed evidences of careful training. More and more Broadway managers are waking up to the fact that experience in our dramatic schools is of value, and year by year the pupils are finding their way to the professional boards in greater numbers."—NEW YORK TIMES, Nov. 6, 1903.

"To those to whom the drama affords more than amusement, the work of the students of the Empire Dramatic School will be of considerable interest. The senior members of this school give, from time to time through the season, performances of a type which are worthy of note. Especially interesting have been certain plays of Bjornson and Hauptmann, and those looking forward with hopeful eyes to the improvement of the American stage can but commend the careful work of the students and the attitude of the faculty to dramatic affairs in general, and intelligent players in particular."—THE TATLER, London, England, Dec. 12, 1903.

"These matinees are delightful treats, for the programme is sure to be composed largely of dramatic tid-bits not otherwise obtainable. The work of the pupils furnishes ample evidence of the value of adequate technical training as a preparation for the stage."—BROOKLYN CITIZEN, Nov. 8, 1903.

"A large audience was present and accorded the young players abundant applause, which was well deserved. The characters were all well taken, and the play was given with a finish that would do credit to professionals."—NEW YORK HERALD, Jan. 22, 1904.

AL. W. MARTIN'S ENTERPRISES.

AL. W. MARTIN, Owner and Director.

Detroit Free Press, April 4, 1904—The best production of Uncle Tom's Cabin seen here in years. Mr. Al. W. Martin gives us real merit enough to make transparent humbug and downright misrepresentation superfluous. The company numbers actors of reputation and merit.

Detroit Tribune, April 4, 1904—Business will be big at Whitney's Theatre this week, when Al. W. Martin's Uncle Tom's Cabin holds the boards. Mr. Martin's production is always on an elaborate scale and the present is no exception. The play is well put on scenically and is in the hands of competent actors.

Quebec, Canada, Chronicle, March 31—The big audience lavish in its applause of the production, which was excellent.
